level in the boiler. If you change the location of the flow pipe, grade it so that the condensed water will flow through the system with the steam. Put the highest point in the flow pipe at the south end of the house instead of at the north. The 3½-inch flow pipe is larger than necessary for sixteen 1¼-inch returns. A 2½-inch flow will do the work. With the changes suggested, you should be able to use up to fifteen pounds of pressure with safety. The higher temperatures make the plant considerably more effective and can often be used during cold snaps with great satisfaction. L. C. C.

The Market.

Business was nothing to brag about last week. Somehow there was no demand, and even the best grades of stock went begging. Stock was not overplentiful, and if it were not for that fact we would have a good sized glut on. One thing is certain, and that is that the average price of roses this year is not up to that of last year, as far as this market is concerned. Last year at this time stock was selling out at good prices and the market was cleared out every day. Now it is just the reverse, and under these conditions we cannot expect prices to average very high.

There is quite a variety of stock coming in now. Fine roses and carnations are to be had in almost any quantities. There are fine Beauties also. Violets, which have been in strong demand right along, are now coming in such quantities as to take good care of the demand. Last Saturday there was a surplus of them. Narcissi are coming more freely, and Romans are to be had. Stevia is a good selling article at this time of the year. Mums are scarcely to be considered now. There are a good many of them coming in yet, but they are now a side issue and there is not so much call for them.

The Christmas green goods men are now right in it. Holly seems to be good this year and there is no indication of its being at all scarce. Other greens are in equally good supply.

Various Notes.

A meeting of the Florists' Society will be held Saturday, December 12. The meetings are full of interest now, owing to the coming convention of the S. A. F. There are many subjects to be talked over, and the greater the number of members present, the more ideas are brought forward. Those members who do not attend the meetings are simply missing something which they have a right to have. It is their loss, so they are urged to make the effort to be present.

The death of Mrs. H. A. Kresken removed from our midst one of the oldest of the lady florists in our city. She had been engaged in the retail business for years at 803 Vine street, and was well known and respected among the craft. Her death occurred December 2, and December 5 her body was converted to ashes at the Cincinnati crematory. Her funeral was attended by many in the trade, and the number and beauty of the floral tributes sent gave one an idea of her many friends, both in and out of the trade.

Orders are already being booked for Christmas, which, by the way, is but two weeks away. It seems to be coming down upon us with a rush this year. We ought to be able to do a good business then, if we can only get the stock to do it with.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., was a caller, accompanied by Fred Lemon, of Richmond, Ind. R. Witterstaetter was showing them about the city.

Thomas Windram expects to leave for his annual trip to his farm in Florida this week. C. J. Ohmer.

D. U. Augspurger & Sons report an excellent business for November. They say the prospects are that next year will be a "hummer" for florists. They have purchased a new delivery wagon. It is a neat affair and is to be used for the light shipments. A. M. Augspurger has left for a trip to the Michigan markets.

The chrysanthemum show at the Glen Oak park conservatories was a pronounced success.

Mr. Kuhl, of Pekin, Ill., was a business caller last week. H. C. R.

CAPITOL BOILERS

Voices of Experience

Every claim we make for Capitol Boilers is founded on fact. The Florist who is using Capitol Boilers is the best witness to their special and superior merit we can give. You are privileged to write to the gentlemen who testify below:

S. D. Brant, Clay Center, Kan.:—The Capitol Boiler we bought of you last fall gives perfect satisfaction—an easy steamer and nice to handle.

Bernard Katzwinkel, Mendota, Ill. (Restland Floral Co.):—The Capitol Boiler has given me complete satisfaction. I find it a fine, clean Boiler to fire, no coal waste, and a first-class heat producer. I can only speak highly of the Capitol Boiler, and fully recommend it.

G. A Kishpaugh, 512 E. Vine St., Iola, Kan.:—The Capitol Boiler works all right.

G. Fred Bauerle, Lansing, Mich.:—The Capitol Boiler has been satisfactory in every way, and I cheerfully recommend it to anyone in need of a good boiler.

MacLaren & Swartley, North Wales, Pa.:—The Capitol Boiler has given perfect satisfaction in every way, and we are well pleased with it.

Any of our Branches or Sales Agencies will show you hundreds of such tributes. Why not profit by the voice of experience? It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The Market.

The flower trade is quiet here just at present. Outside of wedding and funeral work, there is hardly anything doing. The weather this fall has been grand here for outdoor work, with no rain, snow or frost yet.

Various Notes.

Dan Coughlin, gardener for E. R. Morse and also secretary of the Horticultural Society, is confined to the Newport hospital with typhoid fever.

Wadley & Smythe, of New York, have moved some large trees on Mrs. W. B. Lead's place and are generally overhauling the place. They are doing the same at J. W. Wysong's place.

Oscar Schultz has been very busy this fall; in fact, it has been the best fall he has ever had in landscape work. He has just completed moving some large trees of Retinospora plumosa and a large Norway maple, moving them into Mrs. Richard Gambrill's place, over a 9-foot wall—quite a difficult task. They were moved rapidly and with complete success.

STORM-TIGHT and RAIN-PROOF in 30 seconds!

This is the famous "Blizzard" Front in actual use, while a furious storm is raging.

With the handy "Blizzard" in place, you can drive in comfort, regardless of snow, rain, wind or cold.

It will keep out every drop of rain and no matter if it is zero weather, the heat of your body will keep the inside of the buggy as comfortable as your "den" at home. No foot-warmers or extra robes necessary. Notice the large window. It is 12x20 inches and made of tough, transparent celluloid, and a side light on each side.

The line pocket is 14 inches wide, and so strongly reinforced with metal that it cannot tear out or sag. Allows you perfect control of the horse.

You can quickly open the "Blizzard" at either side and get in or out with ease.

THE "BLIZZARD" FRONT

equalizes the strain on the buggy top and prevents it from rattling. It is made of Blizzard Cloth and will last as long as the top.

Why risk the dangers of exposure—Rheumatism, Colds, Pneumonia? Why not drive in comfort?

The "Blizzard" Front sells for $3.50. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will ship you one on receipt of price. Your money refunded if not exactly as represented. Write for attractive "Blizzard" booklet today. We send it free.

Girvin's Handy Cutter

Mr. Florist, if you once get one of these cutters on your finger you will never be without it for many times the price. Just the thing for cutting your carnations, sweet peas, asters, melons, grapes, etc. Why be bothered with a knife or follow the old way of breaking your flowers when a Handy Cutter will do the work better and save you money and time? Don't continue breaking your carnations and thus ruin hundreds of young shoots daily, simply because a knife is unhandy to work with, but try a Handy Cutter. If you are not entirely satisfied with it you can return it and have your money refunded. These cutters are made of spring brass, highly nickel-plated, and contain a removable blade.

AMARYLLIS BELLADONNA.

Will some wise florist tell us how to grow Amaryllis Belladonna successfully?

J. J. L.

From Washington, D. C., southward this beautiful amaryllis succeeds well outdoors in warm, sheltered spots, if planted eight inches deep. In the colder states pot or frame culture is necessary. We find they succeed better grown several bulbs together in 10-inch or 12-inch pots, rather than in the smaller sizes. Four large bulbs are as many as can well be used in a 10-inch pot. For compost, fibrous loam, dried cow manure and sand are suitable. Good drainage must be afforded. Bulbs should be placed in the soil just sufficiently so that they will stand firm.

A cool, sunny house is best to grow them in. After the end of May gradually reduce the water supply and, as the foliage becomes yellow, lay the pots on their sides in a sunny spot to ripen off. Give no water at all during summer. In September and October the spikes will appear, when they should be housed and treated as previously suggested. Frequent repotting is not desirable, these bulbs flowering better when well potbound.

One or two successful growers plant the bulbs in frames built of brick, keeping them there all the time. Treated in this way, wonderfully fine spikes are produced. The soil should be allowed to get quite dry in summer, which, of course, can be done by leaving the sashes in, some ventilation being left on all the time to prevent the frame getting too hot. One form of the Belladonna lily, Amaryllis Hallii, also known as Lycoris squamigera, is perfectly hardy in New York and New England and ought to winter outside in Ohio, with a little covering after freezing up weather.

The Market.

We had several really cold days last week, the temperature varying between 20 and 30 degrees above zero. This is a rather quiet time for the florists, just before the Christmas rush. The end of the mum season is well in sight; good flowers are seen in white only. Poinsettias have made their appearance and are looking quite attractive in the display windows. Crotons, red dracænas and Pandanus Veitchii are seen in handsome specimen plants.

Various Notes.

R. E. Hall, of Reed & Keller, New York, was in the city last week. He says business is picking up all along the line and is particularly good in the west.

Miss T. Baur has returned from a visit in Welland, Canada.

F. E. Selkregg of Northeast, Pa., was in the city on business a few days ago.

B. P.

THREE OLD-TIME FAVORITES.

The sweet william, the wall flower and the pentstemon are three of the many old-time favorites that are coming back into quite general demand and cultivation.

The sweet william is one of the easiest to cultivate of all the plants commonly known, and it is hardy everywhere.

The wall flower is just as hardy as the sweet william, but not such a profuse bloomer, nor so well adapted for planting in so many different locations.

Pentstemons are not hardy and they will not stand outdoors in the winter. They are easily propagated from cuttings of plants that have been potted and kept all winter in a cool house. Growth for cuttings will make its appearance shortly after the plants are excited by a little heat. They are also propagated easily from seed. M.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Conrad Gindra has built three new houses this season, each 30x120, growing roses, carnations and mums. The old houses also were remodeled. He grows a general collection of stock for retail trade, having the old Fricker property.

The Market.

All the florists have had a busy time of late, with plenty of stock in most lines to go around. Thanksgiving trade was good, with the greatest call for mums and carnations, and the death of Senator-elect Walter Legeman caused a lot of work for the first day of the new month. Since then trade has continued active.

Various Notes.

The store of the William Blackman Floral Co. is always decorated in good shape, especially at this time of the year. They have been cutting lots of mums, roses and carnations.

Ben Kramer has been kept busy and seems to be getting a good share of the business.

Royston & Fenton report a nice wholesale trade and they have had plenty of stock to supply the demand, with the exception of good, select pink roses and carnations. They carry a nice stock of fancy ferns and galax.

Julius Niednagel is cutting fine roses and carnations, with plenty of demand for the cuts. E. L. F.

HAMMONTON, N. J.

Watkis & Nicholson have made a pretty fall decoration in their show window on Bellevue avenue.

Louis Bauer, of Chesilhurst, certainly has reason to be proud of his house of carnations. The healthiness of the plants, together with the well kept place, makes it a pleasure to visit him.

J. Murray Bassett, of Packard street, made a large shipment of native shrubs to Cleveland.

G. Wartnaby sold his greenhouse to William Colwell. Mr. Wartnaby will leave for Philadelphia. H. K.

VIRDEN, ILL.—J. W. Garner has purchased three greenhouses, which he will move to his place.

URBANA, ILL.—T. A. Ferguson, of 1006½ West Green street, has purchased a block of ground on the north side of his Green street property, and expects to build a greenhouse on the site early next year.

About its Rigidity

A house may be rigid to start with, but will it stay rigid—which is the same thing as asking, is it enduring?
Listen: All U-Bar cypress core bars are dipped in a chemical preservative, and the portion exposed to the moisture of the house is encased in steel—every roof bar then becomes a rigid rafter—resulting in increased strength and decreased shade. Just as a circular piece of pipe is stronger than a square one, so is a U-Bar curved eave stronger than one spliced at that point. It is undoubtedly the house of greatest endurance and greatest lightness.

The ideal construction for private estates, parks, public institutions and florists' showrooms.

Our 40th Christmas

FORTY years ago, a short time before Christmas, this business was started, and each succeeding year has seen an increase in the amount of sales, until today we have customers and friends in all parts of this great country. We want to extend to you all the cheery Christmas greeting: "We wish you a merry Xmas."

During the past year there was a scarcity of business in most lines, but the florists have held their own, and indications for next year are very bright. People are beginning to know the value of flowers; they are coming to appreciate them more; they are buying them and using them more than ever before. The sale of the florists' product must increase and the product, likewise, must be increased to supply the greater demand.

Whether this is your first Christmas in business, or your fortieth one, don't let it pass without planning something for next year; something bigger and better than before. It is the nature of all things to grow that have life, and the business that stands still is dead.

Enjoy the Christmas good cheer, but don't forget the new greenhouse and the bigger business. Write us when you build and we'll help you all we can to plan the house.

Why not take the time now to send for the 96 page catalogue? That's the first step.

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

MY MARYLAND.

It is seldom that a new rose makes so pronounced a hit in its first season as has been made by John Cook's introduction of last season. Every grower who bought My Maryland this year is enthusiastic in its praise, and those who only have seen it growing have pretty nearly one and all made up their minds to plant it next season. There are those who assert that My Maryland will displace Bridesmaid and even Killarney, and have the field in pink roses almost to itself. While these predictions can hardly be called conservative, still there is no doubt My Maryland is a right good thing. The accompanying illustration is probably the first ever published, showing a house of it. The photograph was taken last week at the establishment of Heller Bros., the South Park Floral Co., New Castle, Ind., where the variety is doing as well as elsewhere. It is not easy to get a picture of any considerable quantity of My Maryland in bloom—because those who have the plants are cutting them down for propagating purposes. Next year everyone will have it.

KAISERIN WITH OTHER ROSES.

Having a crop of Kaiserin on the plants at the present time, what temperature should they be carried at to finish, the temperature having been carried at 65 degrees up to the present time? We also have Richmond, Kate Moulton and Killarney in the same house. Will 56 degrees be too low? G. W. F.

Kaiserin requires at least 65 degrees to make it profitable, and as this temperature would be unsuitable for the other stock, you will have to make a sacrifice. If your house contains more Kaiserin than other varieties it may pay to run it for the Kaiserin, but it is not a very satisfactory rose for winter work, while the others are. A night temperature of 56 to 58 degrees is just right for your other varieties. RIBES.

CHIN CHIN CHINA.

Chin Chin China is the name given by Hobbies, Ltd., Dereham, England, to a pure yellow China rose, a sport from Mme. Eugene Resal. It is perpetual flowering and extremely useful for decorative and bedding purposes. The flowers are clear sulphur yellow and retain their color to the finish. Rose culture is a leading feature of the firm, having been considerably developed during recent years. BEE.

REMEDY FOR WHITE FLY.

I have many white flies in my greenhouse and have tried many remedies, but have failed. Please let me know what to use to kill them and how to use it.

G. S.

The most effective, in fact, the only real remedy for this pest, that I know of, is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. The methods of fumigation have often been given in the REVIEW. Consult the issue of October 8, 1908, page 14, where explicit directions will be found. You will also find some reference to the pest and the best way of combating it in almost every issue of the REVIEW. To ascertain the cubic area of your house, multiply the length (in feet) by the breadth and this again by the average height. Having tried this remedy for some years, I can assure you that it will clear out your white fly thoroughly.

C. W.

RHODODENDRONS FOR EASTER.

Please let me know when I shall put rhododendrons in the greenhouse for Easter flowering. I have a night temperature of 50 degrees. I have grown hundreds of thousands of rhododendrons, but never forced them. L. M.

Some varieties of rhododendrons, such as Cunningham's White, can be forced into bloom earlier than others. We suppose your plants are hybrids of R. Catawbiense, such as are usually grown for outdoor planting and to a lesser degree for indoor culture. Such plants should be potted firmly as soon as received, well soaked with water and placed in a pit where they are just clear of freezing, or in a cold greenhouse. In a temperature of 50 degrees at night it will take you eight to nine weeks to get them into flower for Easter. In a temperature of 60 degrees this time can be reduced nearly one-third. In the lower temperature they will, however, have more substance than if grown warm. Spraying overhead once or twice a day should be followed until the flowers begin to show. Never allow the plants to become dry at the root and when open remove to a cool, shaded house.

Easter, 1909, comes on April 11. If you place your plants in heat in the middle of January they will be in season, or if in a warmer house this can be delayed until early in February. C. W.

SOCIETY OF IOWA FLORISTS.

The Society of Iowa Florists met December 9, in the Horticultural rooms at the State House, Des Moines, with quite a large attendance, there being about seventy present, although not all were florists. The meeting was quite enthusiastic and much interest was manifested in the various subjects brought up for discussion.

Among the papers read were the following: "Roots," Peter Lambert, Des Moines, Ia.; "Porch Vines," G. A. Heyne, Dubuque, Ia.; "Some Problems in Roots," G. D. Black, Independence, Ia.; "Sod and Sodding," Professor Shimek, Iowa City, Ia.; "Plan of Eden," F. C. Pellett, Atlantic, Ia.; "Commercial Floriculture," C. N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.

About twenty new members have joined the society recently, and it is hoped to secure the membership of every live, up-to-date florist in the state.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

The Propagating Bench.

There are probably as many differently constructed benches for the rooting of cuttings as there are styles of houses in which carnations are grown, and it will be observed that the leading growers are quick to avail themselves of any improvement in house construction which will raise the quality of their product. The growing of carnations does not, however, depend wholly upon the style of house, and among the many details which combine to produce more than "just ordinary" results, are those concerning the appliances by which the cuttings are rooted.

Of these it will be sufficient, at this time, to mention the bench proper, as perhaps it is necessary to repair the old one, or a new one is in mind, and the time is not far off when propagation will begin in earnest.

Advantages of the Brick Bottom.

The construction of this form of bench has been so frequently described by Mr. Baur and myself that it seems only necessary to repeat that its bottom consists of common brick laid flat, with sides and ends of the same material, on edge, cemented to the bottom, and supports of wood or iron as may suit the fancy.

Its advantages, however, I desire to urge again on readers of the Review, for the more this style of bench is used the more one is convinced of its peculiar adaptability to the carnation.

The drainage being perfect in all parts, there is no possibility of an oversupply of moisture in the sand. The capacity of the bricks for absorbing heat from the pipes beneath acts as an equalizer in imparting it to the sand. Since the material will not rot, there is no chance of the sand becoming contaminated by decayed wood, even after the bench has seen years of service. It can be built by any grower at no great expense and, once installed, will last a lifetime.

Before filling with sand, the brick should receive a coat of whitewash, to which has been added a small quantity of flowers of sulphur while slaking the lime. This wash is preferably applied hot, and with a lavish hand.

Now, this is by no means the only bench in which carnation cuttings can be rooted, but it is the ideal one, and "just ordinary" results fail to suit lovers of the divine flower.

CARNATION MARCHIONESS.

The accompanying illustration is from a not very good photograph, taken in one of the greenhouses of the late L. E. Marquisee, at Syracuse, N. Y. The variety grown in the house is the new white carnation, Marchioness, which originated with Mr. Marquisee four years ago, and the dissemination of which he was planning at the time of his death. The plants in this house were lifted from the field August 23 and the photograph was taken in the latter part of October. The photograph does not do justice to the variety, because there was evidence, in the number of flowering shoots per plant, of an enormous crop to be on for some time after the picture was taken. The flowers are full and average from three to three and one-half inches in diameter. One of the points which appealed to Mr. Marquisee four years ago, when he first began to work up a stock of the variety, was the rapidity with which the flowers develop. All growers will recall that Prosperity, possibly the finest carnation ever grown by the trade, developed its flowers so slowly that it is not a profitable commercial sort. Marchioness is more highly clove scented than most of the varieties now on the market, fragrance having not been developed at the same time that the hybridizers were improving the other features of the modern carnation. The keeping quality of Marchioness also is said to be noteworthy.

There are now about 10,000 plants on the Marquisee place and the estate already has announced that it will proceed with the introduction of the variety in 1909.

RED SPIDER.

We are troubled with red spiders, which we are unable to get rid of. Is there anything we can do to kill them? Any information you can give us will be greatly appreciated. The spiders were on when we took them up, as the weather was so hot and dry. J. A. F.

Never before in my experience with carnations have I seen as much red spider at this time of the year as there seems to be spread all over the country. The hot and dry summer caused them to multiply as I have never seen them multiply before, and on account of the favorable weather conditions all of them were able to live to a ripe old age. Millions were taken into the houses when the carnations were benched and hundreds of growers have been fighting them ever since.

Usually one can get rid of them during the fall and winter, by simply spraying overhead with a sharp spray, having considerable force back of it. In obstinate cases, however, this can be made much more effective by first spraying with a soap solution. This can be applied early in the morning and followed up toward noon with the clear water from the hose. The soap solution should be applied in a fine spray without much force, as you simply want to cover the plants with it. Boil a 5-cent cake of Ivory or similar soap until dissolved, in one gallon of water. When applying, dilute this with clear water about one to ten.

Be sure your plants dry off before night. If they are not dry by evening, drop a pinch of sulphur here and there on a steam pipe and keep a little ventilation in the house. A. F. J. B.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Is the use of Bordeaux mixture, sulphate of copper and lime, of benefit to young carnation stock? How often can it be used to advantage? Is it ever used, with benefit, on cuttings in the sand?

A. C. C.

I have never heard it said that Bordeaux mixture, or any kindred solution, will benefit a plant, except in so far as it will safeguard against fungous diseases. I do not believe there can be anything in it which would act as a stimulant or fertilizer to the plant. However, it is a good idea to spray the young plants every few weeks with a solution such as Bordeaux, during the early spring, as it might check or prevent a case of leafspot, or similar disease, which might not come under your notice until it had gained a foothold and was doing considerable damage. Use it as a preventive, the same as you spray with nicotine to prevent aphis. I believe that if these two were applied alternately, so that each would be applied once in two weeks, it would be the means of keeping the young plants quite free from all disease.

Bordeaux can be used in the cutting bench to combat fungus, but I would not advise using it otherwise. Cuttings are much more easily injured than growing plants. A. F. J. B.

SOME HOOSIER HOUSES.

In literary circles the Hoosier state is known as the home of poets and the birthplace of novelists, but in trade circles it is just a little different. To a florist Indiana signifies the state of well kept greenhouses and the birthplace of new carnations.

The accompanying illustrations are from photographs made November 18 at the establishment of the Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind., which, ever since its inception, has been known as a model plant. While the houses devoted to standard varieties have every attention, the apple of Mr. Knopf's eye is the space shown in these pictures, for it is devoted to two of his own varieties, Mrs. Charles Knopf and Ruby. Mrs. Knopf is a large light pink and its name is enough to show that its originator thinks it is "the best ever." It is a shade darker than Enchantress and Mr. Knopf in his enthusiasm asserts that it is bound to surpass that variety.

Ruby is scarlet crimson, holds its color with age and is said to be an excellent shipper. The pictures show strong growth and give an impression of the free blooming qualities.

ENCHANTRESS BREAKING DOWN.

Will you kindly tell me what is the matter with inclosed carnation leaves and buds? They are Rose-pink Enchantress. Most of the house looks like this. Also, can you tell me what to do for it?

W. A. T.

You do not give enough data for me to work out a solution for your trouble. You do not state when the plants were benched, how long the trouble has been coming on, how the plants have been growing in the interim, what proportion of the plants are affected, whether any of them are entirely clean, or what they have had to feed on.

Two of the buds seem to have fairy-ring on them and should call for treatment with Bordeaux mixture. The leaves, however, did not disclose anything except numerous light spots such as are caused by stigmonose, for which there is no cure except cutting selection. We sometimes see an occasional plant of the Enchantress family which seems completely broken down after having made a fair start. In such cases the whole plant will look like the leaves you forward. I have never seen them numerous enough to spoil a good crop, however. Plants of that kind can only be pulled up and burned. A. F. J. B.

Department of Registration.

Mrs. M. S. Fleming, Steelmanville, N. J., registers Carnation Mrs. Mary S. Fleming; color, bright pink; parentage, a two-year seedling and Mrs. Frances Joost; size of flower, two and one-half to three inches; grows in heavy or light soil; good stems and the best keeper we have had; grows best in 60 degrees; have had it in bloom from October until August 15. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

Railroad Fare to Indianapolis.

In reply to a request from the secretary for special rates for our meeting in Indianapolis, Ind., January 27 and 28, the following communication has been received:

"Your application for excursion fares for the occasion of your meeting has been presented to a meeting of lines identified with the Central Passenger Association, convened December 9. It was decided, after careful consideration, that they could not, in view of the recent legislative action establishing a maximum passenger fare of 2 cents per mile in the states in which they operate, consistently grant the concession requested for your approaching convention."

In view of the above facts, it will be well for members to arrange to leave from a central point and get club tickets. Most offices sell a club ticket at considerable reduction to parties of ten or over.

As the 2-cent rate applies, I presume, on all lines west of Pittsburg, the fact of no concession being granted need not keep any one away, as the fare will be very little in excess of what it has been for other meetings and you will have the advantage of having no restrictions placed on your method of travel. If you want to stop off at various places en route, it can easily be arranged on a straight ticket.

We want every one interested in carnations to attend this meeting and exhibition. The money spent will be money well invested. ALBERT M. HERR, Sec'y.

THE CHRISTMAS HAMPER.

The accompanying illustration of a hamper of poinsettias shows the work of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. It is a particularly pleasing arrangement of dwarf poinsettias and ferns, the scarlet bracts of the poinsettia predominating. The hamper is one of those such as are imitations of the hampers in which champagne often is seen displayed. The cover does not show distinctly in the illustration.

CORSAGE BOUQUET SHIELDS.

The corsage shield is one of the things that never come amiss—you can put it on every bouquet with the assurance that it will be appreciated, especially as the shields are comparatively new. Of course, the fabrics are of the finest.

One of the features of the bouquet holder is that the "handle" of the shield is pinned to ladies' dresses, not the bouquet itself. The bouquet is placed against the body of the shield, with the stems of the flowers over the handle of the shield; the flowers are fastened by tying to the handle with a ribbon tie or silk cord, placing the bow in front. Pin the arrangement to the dress by merely passing the pin over the handle of the shield, not over the stems of the violets or other flowers.

In these corsage shields the body and handle are of fibre, covered with satin. The shields are of lace or plaited silk chiffon, with satin edges. When worn, the shield is covered by the bouquet, the lace or chiffon forming a rich background.

Another form of corsage protector is a lace handkerchief, 12½x13 inches. Both these protectors do away with the old-fashioned tinfoil still sometimes used.

The illustrations of corsage protectors are from photographs supplied by Wertheimer Bros., New York.

WILL IT PAY?

What should be the income, or profit, from an establishment of 7,000 feet of glass, considering that a general line of stock is grown, catering to a general trade at good prices? There are five acres of good soil. N. B.

Is there money in the business? It's a question often asked. How much income from a given area? It is only another form of the inquiry. Who could answer? It all depends on the man.

Look about you. Note the men who have apparently equal facilities. One is quite evidently making money; a little experience of another will prove his income doesn't suffice to meet his bills. It's all in the man.

Greenhouses and appurtenances are no more than the tools of an occupation—the ability to use them is what determines the result. Give one man five acres of land and 7,000 feet of glass and he soon will have the whole place built up with greenhouses. Give another man the same facilities and the only thing he will put on the place will be a mortgage, and he won't be able to rebuild the houses when they, like other tools, wear out. It's all in the man.

The largest places in this country were originally started with less than 7,000 feet of glass.

COLLEGE COURSE FOR FLORISTS.

[A paper by Chas. N. Page, of Des Moines, Ia., read at a meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists, in Des Moines, December 9, 1908.]

It is a common remark that all trades and professions are crowded and young men are apt to think that there is but little chance for them, but this is not true of the florists' business. There has always been a scarcity of good florists in this country and we know of one greenhouse man who keeps an advertisement of "Man Wanted" standing in the trade papers almost the year around. This is largely owing to the fact that young men cannot secure a good all-round training in any of the large greenhouse establishments. They may learn how to do the rough work and potting of plants and still for years learn nothing of the general care of greenhouse stock, and have but a faint idea of the treatment required by the various classes of plants. If their work is in a rose growing establishment, they learn roses and roses only, and are totally ignorant as to the culture of carnations, the forcing of bulbous stock, or the propagation and treatment of house and bedding plants for the retail trade. There are many young men who would be glad to prepare themselves for the florists' business if there was any school in which they could obtain practical instruction.

Christmas Hamper of Poinsettias and Ferns.

The Ordinary Agricultural College.

During the past year I have corresponded with most of the agricultural colleges of the United States, but I find that none of them is prepared to train a young man in commercial floriculture. Although the Missouri Botanical Garden and the Illinois Agricultural College have courses which would be of considerable benefit, they are far from complete.

There is no school in the country better prepared to instruct a student on such subjects than the Iowa Agricultural College, as it has a corps of teachers, along the various lines, who are not surpassed by those of any school, I believe, in the country. Such a course of study could be arranged without interfering greatly with the other work of the school, and I am convinced, from talking with the professors, that they would be glad to undertake it, if they received proper support and encouragement.

A Suggested Course of Study.

As a college course for florists, I would suggest the following outline:

- Principles of Botany
- Practical Botany for Florists
- Vegetable Physiology
- General Bacteriology
- Pathology or Diseases of Plants
  - Fungous and Parasitic Plants
- Propagation by Seeds
  - Cuttings
  - Dormant Wood Cuttings
  - Root Cuttings
  - Root Divisions
  - Layering
- Grafting and Budding
- Plant Breeding
- Soils—
  - Chemistry of
  - Analysis of
  - Soil Physics
  - Fertilizers
  - Sterilizing
- Entomology—
  - Insects in Greenhouse
  - Insects on Outdoor Flowering Plants
  - Spraying—Liquid and Dust
  - Fumigating
- Cut Flower Growing
- Winter Forcing of Bulbs
- Winter Forcing of Shrubs, etc.
- Greenhouse Management—
  - Heating
  - Ventilation
  - Watering
  - Pruning and Training
  - Potting Plants
- Vegetable Crops in Greenhouse
- Hotbed and Coldframe Management
- Horticulture—
  - Study of Flowering Plants, Shrubs, Shade Trees and Herbaceous Plants
- Floral Work—
  - Bouquet Making
  - Design Making
  - Color Arrangement
  - House Decoration
- Greenhouse Construction
- Practical Plumbing as Applied to Greenhouses
- Field Growing of Shrubs
- Field Growing of Herbaceous Plants
- Field Growing of Bulbs and Tubers
- Aquatic Plants
- Cold Storage of Dormant Plants and Bulbs
- Landscape Gardening—
  - Landscape Architecture
  - Drawing
  - Civil Engineering
- Lawn Making and Management

You will notice that this is quite complete, including the study of the plants themselves, and the manner of propagation and care. It might be arranged in the way of an optional or elective course, certain parts of which could be taken by students in other branches of the college, as, for instance, the landscape gardening, which would be of great assistance to the farmers of this state in beautifying their surroundings.

Corsage Shield with Violets.

Good Teachers Available.

This course would include instruction by Professor Pammel, the state botanist, by Professors Beach and Erwin on horticulture, and by Professor Stevenson on the study of soil, both in the greenhouse and for outdoor planting. Professor Summers, the state entomologist, could instruct on the destruction of the many insects with which the florists have to contend. In fact, there are specialists already in the employ of the state who are thoroughly competent and capable of imparting the needed information to the student on every topic named, including landscape gardening, civil engineering, practical plumbing and greenhouse construction. I have talked with some members of the state legislature and they say that this course can be added to the curriculum of the Agricultural College if the florists and horticulturists of this state really desire it.

Iowa is undoubtedly in the front rank on most agricultural and horticultural topics. Why not now forge ahead along this line and be the first to adopt a practical course of instruction in commercial floriculture?

The Growth of the Florists' Trade.

There are many reasons why the florists of the state should be banded together for mutual interest and should work unitedly for the common good. The business is becoming more important every year and, from corresponding with the florists of this state, I estimate that the trade in greenhouse and bedding plants and in shrubbery has increased fully 200 per cent in the last ten years, while the demand for cut flowers has increased at least 500 per cent during the same time. Iowa is still a virgin field for the florist and the trade can be increased many-fold during the next decade, if we heartily join together in working for it.

Every florist in the state should be a member of the Society of Iowa Florists, and should coöperate with it in stimulating the interest in the adornment of both public and private grounds by setting out shrubs and flowering plants, as well as planting trees and making lawns.

Let us strive together for the advancement of all branches of horticulture and try to make the world more beautiful.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Christmas Plants.

Each year sees an increasing trade in pot plants at Christmas. The demand at this holiday is largely for those with bright flowers, scarlet being the most popular color. While there may be a little sale for white-flowered plants, it is not wise to bank upon too many being disposed of. We see each year a heavy slump in white carnations, roses and French bulbous stock at the holidays, and a corresponding boom in Richmond roses, red carnations, bouvardia and anything cut of a scarlet shade. So with pot plants; we always find that nice pans of poinsettias, short, stocky plants, with foliage down to the soil, will move quickly. Red azaleas are also excellent sellers, the little Hexe and Apollo being specially good. Berried plants, such as ardisias and Jerusalem cherries, take well. The latter can be sold at a popular price and are preferable to the Christmas peppers sometimes seen.

Bright colored cyclamens are popular. Another useful plant not seen so frequently as one could wish is Euphorbia Jacquiniæflora. Pans of this bright little flower are decidedly effective. Scarlet geraniums, single and double, if nicely bloomed, also make good Christmas plants. For lilies, white azaleas, gardenias, lilacs, lily of the valley, Roman hyacinths and other white flowering stock there will be some call, the valley perhaps selling as well as anything. Take note of what moves well and provide for another year.

Move anything which has been forced to a cooler house a few days before Christmas. Clean all flower pots most thoroughly. Use neat stakes where necessary. Remove dead or decaying foliage. Be prepared with plenty of wrapping material in the event of cold weather. Do not send out any plants dry at the root, and deliver as promptly as possible. Unless you are something of a store artist, do not attempt any ribbon ornamentation. No well grown plants require it, although judicious use of it will aid in selling rather wretched looking plants.

While palms and foliage plants generally are not in heavy call at Christmas, you may have some calls for them. Be sure you clean the foliage thoroughly before sending them out. To meet the call for fern dishes, prepare a number. If you want a light centerpiece, nothing is better than Cocos Weddelliana.

Camellias.

It is pleasing to note a better inquiry for camellias. While not adapted for cutting, and a little stiff in appearance, nicely flowered plants in 6-inch to 8-inch pots make nice Christmas presents. Do not attempt any hard forcing to get them into bloom. The only time camellias appreciate any warmth is in the growing season. At that time a warm, moist heat seems to suit them. The natural flowering period for camellias under glass is in January and February, and if your plants do not come in for Christmas, there will be opportunities to dispose of them during those months.

Half a dozen good camellias to grow are: Donckelaarii, semi-double, large, crimson, marbled white; alba plena, pure white; Mathotiana, bright red; Lady Hume's Blush, flesh color; Valtevareda, bright rose, sometimes spotted with white; Duchess de Nassau, light pink.

Mignonette.

The cooler weather is now much improving the quality of the mignonette. Stout spikes are never possible during the hot months, but during the dark, winter months, when the night temperature can be held down to 40 degrees, they do surprisingly well. As the benches will now be well filled with roots, a watering of liquid manure once in ten days will stimulate them. A mulch of old, decayed cow manure will also keep the surface soil moist and encourage roots to come up into it. Attend to any supporting before the stems can become bent, or they are useless. Attend to disbudding closely if you want first quality stalks and let any fumigating be done lightly, as mignonette is easily injured by tobacco smoke.

Calceolarias.

Now is the season of rapid growth with the herbaceous calceolarias. Both these and cinerarias move slowly in the warm fall months, but with a steady, low temperature they are exactly in their element. Forcing they must never have, or they will be speedily ruined. Anything clear of freezing will grow them well. Keep the plants potted along before they get matted with roots. Use a rather lumpy compost, one-third broken cow manure, two-thirds turf loam, with plenty of sharp sand, a dash of fine bone and some powdered charcoal. The charcoal seems to be much liked by calceolarias and one always finds plants succeed better where it is used.

If your plants show signs of running up to flower now, earlier than you want them, pinch out the top of the leading shoot close down. A light spraying overhead once a day is relished by calceolarias. Fresh tobacco stems laid among the pots will keep down that arch enemy, green aphis, but if you fumigate once a week you can dispense with these.

Double Feverfews.

Double feverfews are particularly valuable at Memorial day. They require a cool house and if, after your poinsettias and other Christmas stock are cleared out, you can give the feverfew a vacant bench, you can depend upon getting an abundance of bloom for Memorial day. Old chrysanthemum soil will answer well if it is forked over and some rotted cow manure or bone is added to it. This flower is not one which will take at the flower stores and its odor is not specially pleasing, but for Memorial day trade it has always come in very useful.

Fuchsias.

Neat fuchsia plants in 4-inch to 6-inch pots sell well with the average country florists at bedding-out time. They will not bloom, owing to our intense summer heat, as in Europe, where they are attractive features in the public parks and gardens, but for window and piazza-boxes, especially where they can have a little shade, they are useful. To get a nice batch in flower by May, start a few old plants now in gentle heat. Syringe twice a day, but do not keep too moist at the root until they are growing freely. Take off the shoots when two or three inches long and put in the propagating bench. They will be rooted and fit to pot off in three weeks. Keep rather warm until established. Then grow in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. By judicious pinching and potting along, nice plants can be had by May and their grace and beauty we find always appeal to a number of our customers.

Lace Corsage Bouquet Handkerchief.

Lace Corsage Shield.

Freesias.

The early pans of freesias are pushing up the flower stalks and a number promise to be open for the holidays. Be sure to afford an abundant supply of water. Freesias are gross-rooting subjects and will stand as much feeding as mums. They are more often spoiled by an insufficient water supply than anything else. Keep them as near the light as possible. Avoid heavy fumigation, which will scorch the foliage, and let the night temperature be as near 50 degrees as you can. To hurry a few in for Christmas, 5 degrees extra at night is allowable, but the stalks are stockier and flowers more substantial if grown cooler.

Bulbous Plants.

The Trumpet Major narcissus forces easily into bloom after this date. About its only recommendation is its earliness, for once Golden Spur comes on the market its inferiority is quickly apparent. Some growers manage to get a few Spurs in for the holidays, but it pays better to leave them a few days longer. Probably some of your flats are sufficiently well started to house now. Do not force in a high temperature; they will do much better in 50 to 55 degrees at night than in 10 degrees more heat.

Keep bringing in a few flats of that ever useful tulip, La Reine, always in demand for funeral work. Other tulips only sell moderately in the markets, but if you have a good home trade, you can perhaps use a few pans of Yellow Prince, Belle Alliance, Cottage Maid or Keizerskroon.

Be sure that none of your bulbous stock, to be forced later on, is suffering from lack of water. Perhaps the surface soil looks moist, but the soil below is rather dry. If you drained your flats and pans well, you cannot go far wrong in giving them a thorough soaking if they show any signs of dryness.

Brief Reminders.

Pack straw or leaves about pots or pans likely to be frozen in pits or frames.

Be sure not to neglect a fumigation once a week. Pests breed with astonishing rapidity under glass.

Remove any shading still remaining on the roofs. Plants will need all possible light for the next two months.

Throw out any diseased lilies. They only occupy space which better plants might have.

Save a few good plants of Lorraine begonias for propagating purposes.

Pot on any of the little bedding geraniums requiring it. Give the plants more room as they need it.

Avoid removing poinsettias into a low temperature; 50 degrees at night is as low as they will stand without loss of foliage.

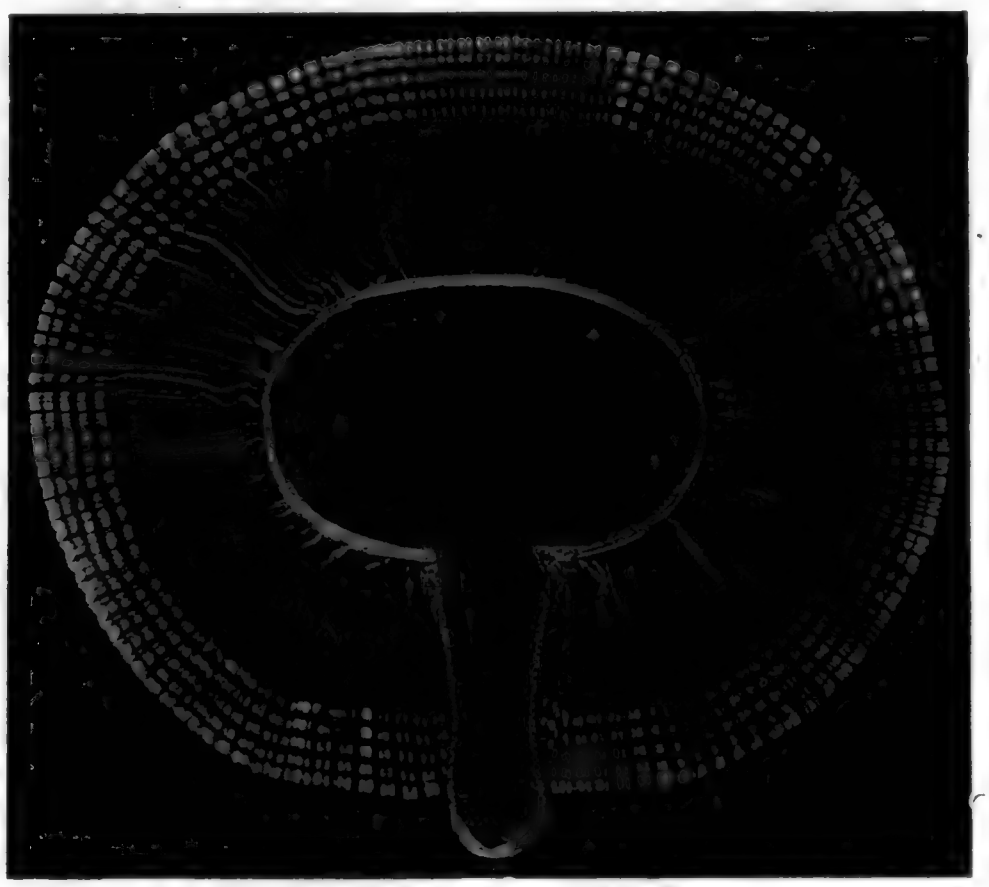
Keep hydrangeas in winter quarters cool, well aired and somewhat dry at the root.

Plant gladioli of the Gandavensis section in any bare pieces of bench you may have. They will prove useful in spring.

Be sure to disbud and put supports to the snapdragons. Mark any specially good ones to propagate from.

Cuttings of any fine foliaged tropical plants, such as crotons and dracænas, will root freely now that fire heat is more steady.

Save a sufficient number of poinsettias for stock and do not let them be the weakest and puniest plants.



FIRE INSURANCE.

Will someone kindly tell me if there are any insurance companies making a business of insuring greenhouses? Or is there any regular insurance company that does not demand $3 to $4 per $100 of insurance on greenhouses? L. B.

Fire insurance depends entirely upon the character of the risk. Any company operating in your vicinity will write insurance on your greenhouses if the location and character of the houses meet with certain requirements prescribed by the Underwriters' Association. The rate depends on the character of the risk. If your local agents cannot get you satisfactory insurance, you will not be likely to get it in any reliable company outside.

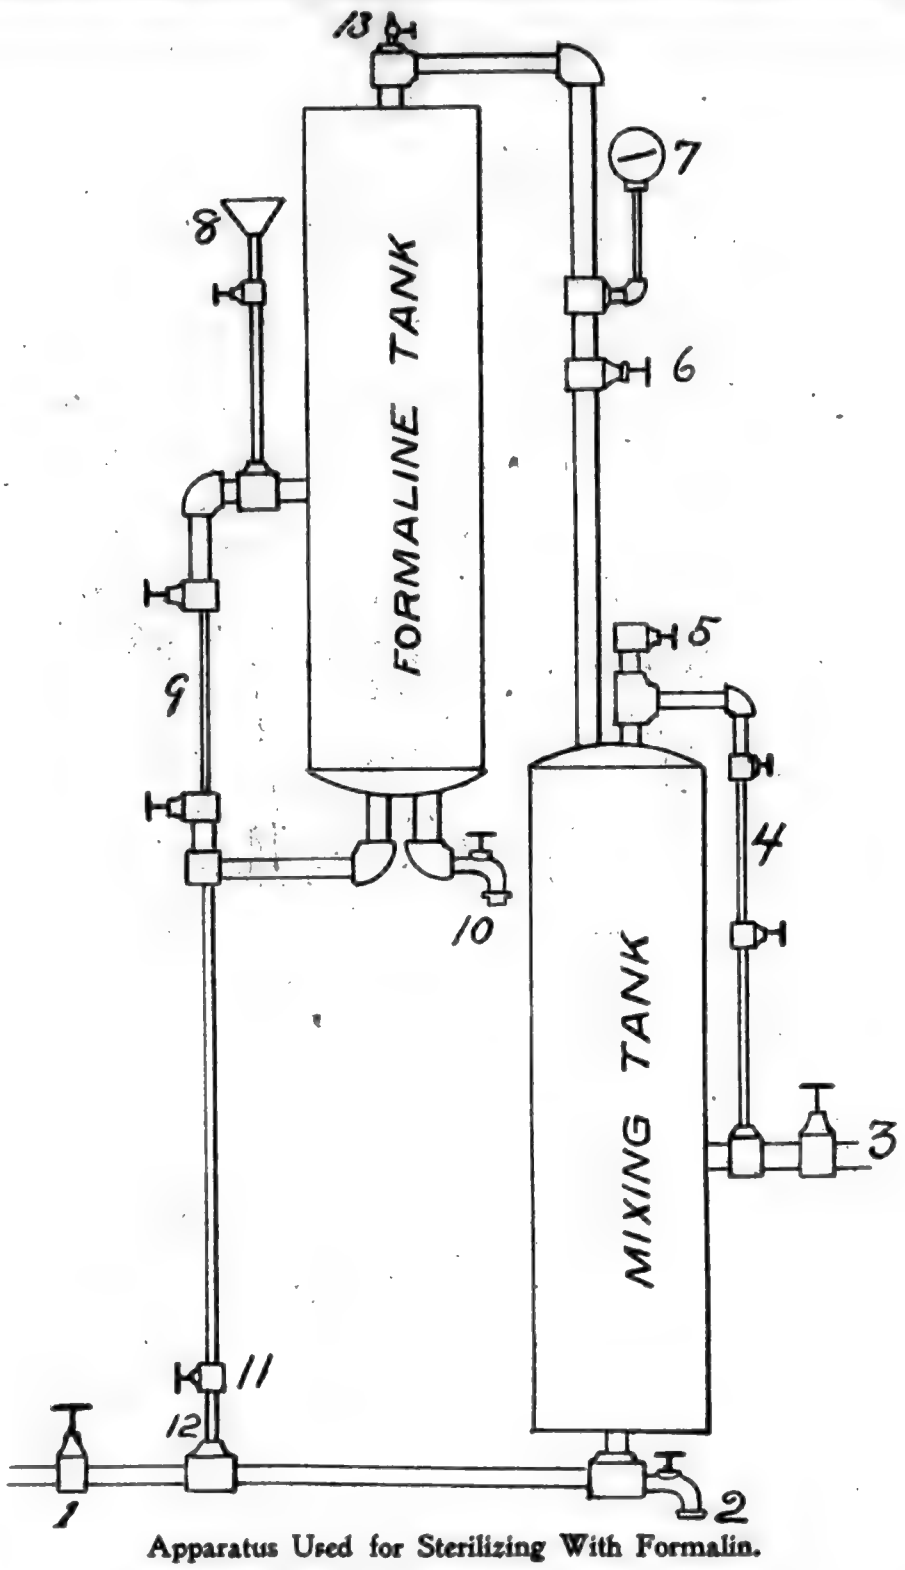
STERILIZATION WITH FORMALIN.

We noticed an article in the Review of November 19, page 48, under the head of "Soil Sterilization," and would like to know where we can get more information as to the use of formalin, what it is, where to get it, what it costs, and about the apparatus for making it, etc.

J. S. & S.

Your issue of November 19, 1908, contains an article on "Soil Sterilization," by B. H. Thorne, in which he refers to several methods of soil sterilization, among which is sterilization by means of formalin. Will you kindly give us some further information concerning its use? We have sterilized soil with steam, but have never tried any other way.

H. F. C.



Neither of these two correspondents seems to have read the first part of the article on sterilization, which appeared on page 76 of the Review of November 12, and which contained much of the information for which they are now asking. If they will now read the first installment of the article, they will there find specific directions about the various steps in the use of formaldehyde, or formalin, from the preparation of the soil to the end of the process. The machine called a "mixer" is there described at some length, and other methods of using the formalin are also mentioned, such as applying it with a barrel force pump and hose, or putting it into the water tanks, in greenhouses where tanks are used. It is there stated that "the formalin mixer is made of two ordinary kitchen range tanks, one above and at one side of the other. The upper one holds the formalin and the lower one is the mixer. The tops of both are connected by a small pipe with a valve in it. This pipe is to equalize the pressure in both tanks by the passage of air back and forth."

As an aid to a clearer understanding of the mixer, a diagram of it is herewith given. The numbers on the diagram are explained as follows:

1—Inlet valve from waterworks.
2—Hose-bib for drawing off lower tank.
3—Outlet valve from tank into waterworks system.
4—Glass gauge to show when water gets too high in lower tank.
5—Air valve.
6—Valve between the tanks.
7—Pressure gauge.
8—Filling pipe for formalin tank.
9—Glass gauge for formalin tank.
10—Draw-off valve for formalin tank.
11—Needle valve to regulate flow of formalin.
12—Glass gauge to show whether formalin is flowing properly.
13—Air valve used in filling formalin tank.

To regulate the mixer, first run through fifty gallons of water and time it; then take off the glass gauge at 12 and regulate the needle valve so that two pounds of formalin will run through in the same time as the fifty gallons of water. A long pointer and dial should be placed on the handle of the needle valve, and when the valve has been regulated for the right quantity it should be marked on the dial.

To operate the mixer, first open the air-cock at 13; fill the formalin tank half or two-thirds full of formalin. Close the valves at 11 and 3, and run water in to put on the pressure. When the pressure is all on, close the valve at 6, run out the water at 2 and open the valve at 5 to let air into the lower tank. After the water is out, close the valves at 2 and 5. The mixer is now ready to use by opening valves 1, 12, 3 and 6 in the order named. With this apparatus one man can do the same amount of work that six can do with a barrel and pump.

Apparatus Used for Sterilizing With Formalin.

Formalin, or formaldehyde, is a gas that is forced into water under pressure. When it is spread over a large surface it evaporates and in a few days no trace of it is left, and for this reason it is excellent for sterilizing soil. It produces no change in the soil and leaves no residue, and it will kill any live germs or fungi with which it comes in contact, either in the mixture or as a gas. It cannot be used in the gaseous form in the greenhouse, if any plants are in it, as it kills them the same as burning sulphur. There is no danger, however, in using it in the mixture on empty beds in close proximity to other plants, as the gas does not evaporate fast enough to do any harm.

Formalin is manufactured by the Perth Amboy Chemical Co., Perth Amboy, N. J. Strong & Cobb and, I believe, Harshaw, Fuller, Goodwin & Co., both of Cleveland, O., handle it in wholesale lots.

As to its cost, I cannot say at present, but I have paid from 9 cents to 15 cents per pound, depending on the quantity.

B. H. Thorne.

MEALY BUG.

I have a greenhouse in a small town. My flowers are troubled with a peculiar disease, or bug, or louse. I send you a sample of them. They will thrive on any plant. Fumigating does not kill them. I have tried several things. Can you tell me what they are and what I should do to get rid of them?

T. W. S.

The specimens received were mealy bugs, one of the worst pests the florist has to combat, but which is not often allowed to overrun everything, as in your case. If you had used a strong pressure of water, driven through a spray nozzle, once or twice a week, many of the bugs would have been destroyed. Ordinary fumigation has no effect on these bugs, but if you will use hydrocyanic acid gas, as recommended frequently in the columns of the Review, you can clear them out effectually. Once you have gotten them clean, syringe your plants occasionally, using a good force of water, to keep them in check. It will probably pay you to throw away any coleus or other bedding plants which are badly infested.

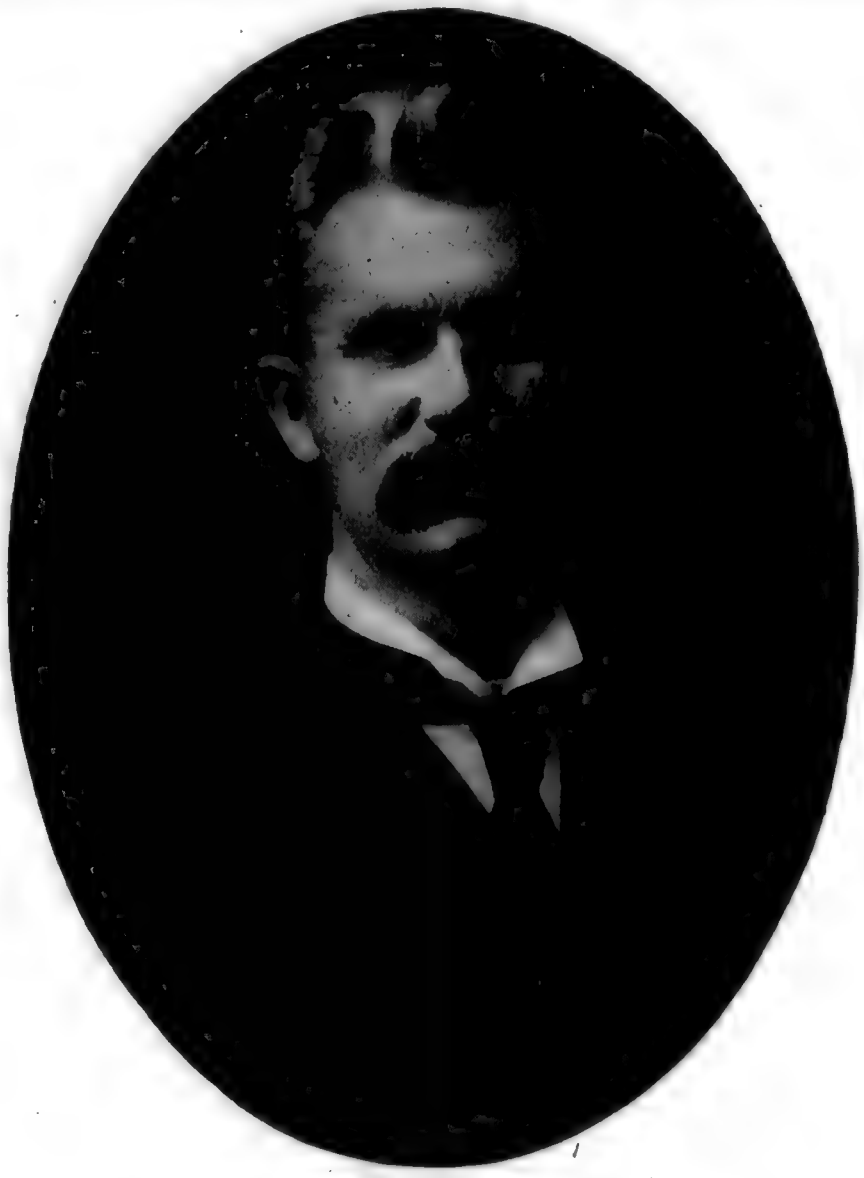
OLDEST KANSAS FLORIST.

Referring to the note regarding A. Whitcomb in the REVIEW of December 10, R. J. Groves, of Atchison, says he thinks he can claim to be the oldest florist in Kansas, as he antedates Mr. Whitcomb by four years. Mr. Groves went into the greenhouse business in Atchison in March, 1865, so that he has spent almost forty-four years in the trade at that place. He says there were three florists then in the business in Kansas, in 1865, all located at Leavenworth. They were Messrs. Putman, Compeer and Hawthorne, none of whom remain.

WILLIAM DOWNS.



William Downs, the new president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, is an Englishman by birth, having first seen the light in a hamlet of South Lincolnshire in 1861. When a boy of 12 years, he left home to work in a general merchandise store, where he stayed three years. Finding that an indoor life did not agree with him, he next found employment in the garden of a country clergyman, one who, like so many others of his calling in Great Britain, was his own gardener, and an able one. After spending two and one-half years in this place, Mr. Downs next moved to another place where there was some glass and general all-around work, and here he spent three years. His next move was to a place in Derbyshire, where another three years were spent in the kitchen and pleasure gardens and lawn making.

From Derbyshire the next move was to the estate of R. Hornsby, the great agricultural implement maker of Grantham, Lincolnshire. Greenhouses here were a leading feature, there being seventeen in all, of which seven were graperies, three peach houses, three forcing houses and the balance plant houses. On this place he stayed until he had advanced to the position of foreman, when he moved to Balrath Barry, County Meath, Ireland, as foreman. The leading features here were a fine conservatory, extensive bedding and five acres of herbaceous garden. After spending two years here, the place was closed, owing to the death of the owner, and Mr. Downs went back to England and took a position as fruit foreman with the redoubtable Richard Gilbert, of Boughley House, near Stamford. Mr. Gilbert was one of the most notable fruit and vegetable growers in Great Britain, and many who were his assistants now occupy good positions in Great Britain and America.

From Boughley Mr. Downs came to the United States and accepted an offer to manage orange properties in Florida. Four and one-half years there was sufficient to seriously undermine his health, so he determined to return to his old profession. Returning to Massachusetts, he took a position as foreman with E. O. Orpet, of South Lancaster. After working there two seasons, he left to take charge of the estate of Mrs. Julia M. Dumaresq, Chestnut Hill, Mass., where he has now been for twelve years.

Mr. Downs, since his connection with the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, has been an earnest worker, being elected vice-president a year ago. In him the club will find an energetic, broad-minded and progressive worker. Outside of his horticultural affiliations, Mr. Downs is past chancellor and treasurer in Newton Lodge K. of P., also representative to the Grand Lodge and president for the third successive year of the Kingsley Working Men's Club, of Chestnut Hill. Mr. Downs is married, but has no family. The home over which Mrs. Downs presides is one of the finest equipped it has been the privilege of the writer to see, a model for owners of other large estates.

The Market.

Less flowers are now coming into the market, but demand is not so good as could be wished. Many growers are holding back their crops for Christmas, as is customary. A much more cheerful feeling pervades the trade than a year ago, when hopes of a good market were slim. Present indications are that business will exceed that of 1907, although there are no expectations of any fancy prices. Roses, which were fairly plentiful, have been reduced somewhat on account of colder weather. Beauties, Killarneys and Richmonds remain the three leaders. Carnations are bringing rather better prices, but whites promise to be in oversupply. The finest whites coming are White Perfection. Among every-day whites, Queen remains the leader.

Violets are not abundant, but there promises to be a good Christmas supply. Bulbous stock includes quite a few Trumpet Major narcissi; some Golden Spurs are also promised for Christmas. Poinsettias are not yet selling in a cut state. Lilies and callas are each quiet. Valley sells fairly well. There is now a good supply of Cypripedium insigne, and among cattleyas Percivaliana and Trianæ are in evidence. Gardenias continue rather scarce.

There is a quickened trade in pot plants and dealers in Christmas greenery are busy. Their advance orders indicate a much heavier trade than a year ago. Both holly and mistletoe arriving are of good quality.

Club Meeting.

The big attendance at the regular monthly meeting December 15 attested the keen interest taken by the membership in the contest for officers. The greatest good humor, however, prevailed throughout. Eber Holmes withdrew as a presidential candidate. The tellers were D. Finlayson, George Shield, C. J. O'Brien, F. W. Fletcher, Thos. Pegler and W. E. Fischer. The balloting was on the Australian system and resulted as follows:

For president—Wm. Downs, 90; F. E. Palmer, 57.

For vice-president—J. W. Duncan, 75; W. J. Kennedy, 66.

For secretary—W. N. Craig, 133.

For treasurer—Edward Hatch, 130.

For members executive committee—R. Cameron, 100; Peter Fisher, 100; J. Farquhar, 78; Peter Miller, 86.

Each of the new officers made short addresses. Three new members were elected.

There was as usual an attractive floral display on the exhibition tables. W. N. Craig had a collection of zonal geraniums, including such varieties as Paul Crampel, Reformator, J. M. Barry, Maxine Kovalevski, Ian Maclaren, Emile Zola, Duke of Bedford and others, and was given a report of merit for superior culture. M. A. Patten had Sarah Nicholson and Genevieve. Thomas Westwood showed Salvia Zurich. The J. F. Flood Co. had mushrooms. Peter Fisher received honorable mention for Winona and Viola Sinclair carnations. F. W. Fletcher showed violets and salvia. Thomas Waldie had a seedling carnation. W. E. Hamilton, Belfast, Me., had a late pink mum and E. B. Beals fine seedling carnations, crimson, white and light pink.

There were refreshments as usual and one of the most exciting and enthusiastic meetings the club has ever held did not close until a late hour. At the January meeting the newly elected officers will be installed.

Various Notes.

Edgar Bros., of Waverley, are still cutting a fine lot of late chrysanthemums, including Bonnaffon, Jeanne Nonin, Maud Dean, H. W. Rieman and Intensity, and will have plenty of these sorts for Christmas.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, has a fine house of sweet peas, from which he is cutting some fine flowers. His double violets are doing better than ever.

From Budlong's, of Auburn, R. I., some extra fine Killarney, Richmond and other roses are being handled at the Park street market.

John Newman, who sells at the Music Hall market, is handling an exceptionally high grade lot of Princess of Wales violets again this season.

W. C. Ward, who is the leading indoor pansy specialist in this section, is marketing large quantities of fine flowers of his specialty.

H. F. Calder, of Norwood, is a grower of double violets, hard to beat. His flowers are again this season of splendid quality and of a color sufficient to make anyone envious.

S. J. Goddard and E. A. Peirce think so well of their late western trip as an educational one, that they are planning to make one every fall.

Quite a few in this section are already talking of the Indianapolis carnation convention and hoping to accompany President Patten there.

The committee having in charge the arrangements for the Park street market flower show, to be held about March 1, 1909, held a meeting December 12. They are planning to have an exhibition far surpassing that of 1908. The members of the committee are E. A. Peirce, S. J. Goddard, W. H. Elliott and William Sim.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are having a strenuous season at present, and have a large force working practically night and day. Their holly, smilax, laurel and other greenery is of fine quality and cut flower trade promises to be of unusually large dimensions.

T. F. Galvin has an attractive window at his big Tremont street store, the central feature being a bulb bed. He is handling a fine lot of orchids.

W. H. Elliott thinks the single mums are what the commercial men should grow another season. The public taste runs to this class.

E. Sutermeister is once more busy with bulbous stock and will have plenty of Golden Spur and La Reine in a day or two.

J. F. Flood & Co., of Dedham, are handling quantities of extra fine carnations at their Music Hall market stand.

Welch Bros.' big Devonshire street emporium is a hive of industry these days. In addition to their immense stock of holly, laurel, mistletoe, etc., they will have the biggest lot of cut flowers in their history for the Christmas trade, including orchids, gardenias and everything choice.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, are as usual handling large quantities of pot plants for the Christmas trade. They are bringing in a lot of good yellow narcissi and other bulbous stock.

In spite of recent moderate rains and snowfalls, we are still many inches short of our normal rainfall, and with the ground frozen tight as at present any precipitation will be of less value than if it were open.

Esty Bros. are producing some of the finest single violets seen in Boston at present.

J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, has recently secured some big orders for dahlia tubers. Mr. Alexander grew twenty acres of dahlias last season and is now clearing more land to increase that area.

W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Christmas is in the air, the voices of the flower merchants have a hopeful tone, and an encouraging holiday trade seems assured. Already the improvement is marked in the almost universal prosperity of the retail section of the business, and the gradually advancing values in the wholesale market.

Roses especially feel the thrill of the better times. From the Maid, all the way up through the novelties, to Beauties, the prices have improved, so that both grower and wholesaler have just cause for congratulation. And these prices are already near the values that, if not advanced unduly, guarantee a return to the old days of a cut flower Christmas. This, too, is possible with no diminution in the selling of plants, for the market has greatly widened of late, and the use of flowers and plants for Christmas gifts is now universal. Only the error of unreasonable advances in price, or the flooding of the market with pickled flowers can hold back the tide of public buying.

There is a wonderful demand for Killarney. Of all the varieties of roses, this seems to be in the limelight. Retailers were asking $6 per dozen Saturday for the best of them. Beauties, too, are rising; choice lots touched 50 cents wholesale the last of the week.

The carnation shipments are now abundant and good prices prevail. Choice stock easily commanded 4 cents Monday, December 14. Even the commonest shipments did not go below $1. Violets hold steady at 75 cents for the top grade. The left-overs go to the street tomorrow at 35 cents and even less, but with the stock fresh and the demand improving the left-overs are now few.

The orchid supply is now encouraging, both in variety and quantity. A big Christmas demand is already evident. Gardenias have advanced to 50 cents for the perfect ones and are popular. Smilax is a drug. Some of the wholesalers' iceboxes are crowded with it. As low as 6 cents was accepted for it Saturday, December 12.

Here and there chrysanthemums are seen, but the stragglers are few. Some are being saved for Christmas. Lilies are none too plentiful and prices are much better. Cypripediums have fallen because of their abundance. The market has never seen them of better quality.

Poinsettias, cut and in plant, are in many of the wholesale windows. They make a brilliant setting. Every retail window is a study in red. Christmas bells and wreaths abound. Blooming plants of all kinds are already arriving and by Saturday, December 19, everything will be staged and arranged for the Christmas demand. Plant growers say "Sold out" when one asks them how the holiday plant demand has materialized.

Club Meeting.

Monday night, December 14, the final meeting of the New York Florists' Club for 1908 took place at the Grand opera house. President Weathered was in the chair. The weather was perfect and the attendance the largest of the year, nearly 150 being present during the evening. A more harmonious and enthusiastic gathering has never been seen together in the club's history. Messrs. A. H. Prosser and Herman Scholzel were elected to membership.

In response to the club's telegram of congratulation to Mayor Breitmeyer, of Detroit, a very warm letter of thanks and appreciation was read from the popular candidate. The resignation of B. C. Bruckner, of Bayside, was read, and a letter from Fred Lentz, concerning the bowling competition at the club's annual outing. Explanations were made by Messrs. Marshall, Schultz and Manda, and the prizes remaining, after discussion, by motion of P. O'Mara, were ordered returned to the donors, and the contest, because of lack of time for its completion, declared canceled.

W. W. Burnham sent a letter of resignation as candidate for the office of vice-president, Harry Bunyard for that of secretary, and Alfred Zeller and Patrick O'Mara withdrew from the contest for trusteeships. In the election contest W. F. Sheridan was appointed judge and Messrs. O'Mara and Koehne tellers. For the office of president Robert Berry nominated W. E. Marshall, seconded by J. A. Manda. The motion was declared out of order, but the privilege of any member of the club to vote for any candidate desired was emphasized. The election resulted as follows: President, E. V. Hallock; vice-president, Harry Turner; secretary, John Young; treasurer, W. C. Rickards; trustees, F. H. Traendly, John Scott and Paul Dailledouze. E. V. Hallock resigned the office of trustee and Robert Simpson was elected by acclamation to fill the vacancy.

Mr. Hallock made an eloquent address, stating that he was overwhelmed and deeply touched by the honor conferred. He said in his opinion the club could have selected a better man, but that he would give the society the best that was in him. He referred to the power of the club to make the president a success, and said he was more pleased with the decision of the club than by any act of any other body of men that had ever been shown him in his life. Messrs. Turner, Young, Rickards, Simpson, Traendly and Dailledouze followed in assurances of loyalty and devotion to the club's interests, the secretary especially being greeted with great enthusiasm. All united in the declaration that the New York Florists' Club was the best in the country and emphasized their intention to keep it up to its high standard in the future. Trustee Scott is still convalescing and was unable to attend.

The award committee announced preliminary certificates for the exhibits of Pittsburg Florists' Club on Its Outing, December 10.

Rose White Killarney and for a vase of a brilliant rose-pink carnation exhibited by E. L. Enggren, of Aqueduct, L. I. The thanks of the club were also accorded the exhibitors of an adjustable plant stand, and a Christmas tree stand made by the Moore-Livingston Co., of Lansdowne, Pa. The Killarney roses were shown by the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, and the Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass.

C. L. Allen, the venerable lecturer for the evening, was unable to be present because of illness and will be requested to read his paper at a subsequent club meeting. Patrick O'Mara spoke of the splendid exhibition of the club and Horticultural Society this fall, with its attendance in the three days of over 20,000 people. He said the society could now look forward hopefully to exhibitions on a larger scale, the whole floor of the Museum building to be granted for the show.

Secretary Young announced six life members on his list since the passage of the resolution making $50 the fee.

Various Notes.

The auction of the Fleischman effects at the store on Broadway brought a large crowd of florists, but the goods were sold at low prices to the trade largely. The fitting up of this palatial flower shop is said to have cost over $30,000. A small percentage of this amount was realized. The big ice-box was secured by Robert Wilson, of Brooklyn.

George A. Saltford, the violet grower of Rhinebeck, was in the city Saturday, December 12. He says the Christmas supply will be abundant, and that the new society, with a membership already of 135, is a success. Its objects, apart from the wholesale purchasing of glass, greenhouse supplies, coal, etc., is the cultivation of the fraternal spirit and it has no ambition nor thought of control of the wholesale price of violets, a consummation he says it is realized to be manifestly impossible.

John King Duer had a page of floral arrangements illustrated in one of the big Sunday papers, with much seasonable and excellent advice on Christmas decorations. One of the "400" himself, society will naturally sit up and take notice.

Nick Schreiner is New York agent for a big shipment of the red "Coon" berries from Maryland, the shipper accompanying a large number of cases from the south. They are extra fine.

Walter Mott, of Newburgh, reports a splendid Thanksgiving business for the Yuess Gardens Co., especially of mums of their own growing, and is greatly pleased at the outlook and the growth of the business.

W. J. Palmer and wife, of Buffalo, visited New York last week on their way to a pleasant winter outing in Bermuda.

Downtown enormous quantities of Christmas trees, holly and evergreen wreaths and wreathing are seen on every corner, in addition to the big stocks carried by the seed houses. Some of the stores are handsomely decorated. Stumpp & Walter Co. has arched its entire store space on the street level and with bells and holly and electric lighting produced a most attractive effect.

It is perhaps a waste of warning, but already the menace of pickled stock for Christmas asserts itself. If reports are correct, the lessons of the past have had no effect.

Henry Hentz is sending Moore, Hentz & Nash a specially fine cut of long Beauties. I am told over ninety-five per cent of last week's shipments were specials—a remarkable average.

Daniel J. McIntosh, 1144 Broadway, has been granted a discharge from bankruptcy. Liabilities, $8,780.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, Mass., is reported by A. T. Boddington as a recent visitor.

January 28 has been chosen by the New York and New Jersey Plant Association as the night for the society's banquet, and the St. Denis hotel is likely to be the place of meeting. The members say it will be a grand affair.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

Retailers and Wholesalers to Confer.

The retail florists of Greater New York have formed an organization known as the Retail Florists' Protective Association of New York. The association has been incorporated, as a membership corporation, and the following officers have been elected:

President—Charles A. Dards.

First Vice-President—Marshall Clarke.

Second Vice-President—Joseph G. Leikens.

Treasurer—Geo. M. Stumpp.

Secretary—Herman Warendorff.

These officers, together with Messrs. John J. Foley, John S. Nicholas, William P. Sears, John H. Troy and Thomas Young, Jr., constitute the board of directors of the association.

The objects of the association as they are set forth in its constitution are as follows:

(a) To take proper measures to prevent the invasion by wholesale dealers into the retail trade.

(b) To secure enforcement of the law as to the sale of flowers on the streets by unlicensed vendors.

(c) To establish a mutual credit system for the exchange of information as to non-paying customers, and for the prevention of bad debts.

(d) To establish a reliable collection bureau for the collection of outstanding accounts by high-class legal counsel.

(e) To arrange for a businesslike credit system between the wholesalers and retailers, such as prevails in other lines of business.

(f) To take such steps and adopt such measures from time to time as will conduce to the uplifting of the retail floral business, its protection and preservation.

Any retail florist, whether individual, partnership or corporation, is eligible to membership in the association.

It is the opinion of the board of directors that the best way to cultivate the mutual business interests of the retail and wholesale florists is by developing an amicable and coöperative spirit between them. To this end a committee of seven members, consisting of C. E. Grunewald, J. S. Nicholas, Herman Warendorff, Jos. G. Leikens, C. H. Brown, S. Myer, John J. Foley, and the president, Charles A. Dards, who is a member ex officio, was appointed at the last meeting of the association to confer with the officers of the Wholesale Florists' Association in order to take such steps as may be agreed upon to work out the best interests of both the wholesale and retail florists.

HERMAN WARENDORFF, Sec'y.

OBITUARY.

Frank M. Strong.

Frank M. Strong, one of the best known growers at Grand Rapids, Mich., died at his home, 1214 Madison avenue, at 9:30 a. m., December 13, after an illness of several months of tuberculosis.

Mr. Strong was born in Tioga county, N. Y., April 28, 1860. Twenty-five years ago he removed to Grand Rapids, engaging in the greenhouse business as a florist and vegetable grower. He was the founder of the Grand Rapids Floral Co., which has since passed into other hands, and on the organization of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., composed of the leading growers of vegetables under glass and a number of local florists, in 1907, became its president, which position he held at the time of his death.

Surviving Mr. Strong are a widow, one son, Stanley, and a brother, Harley, all of Grand Rapids, and a sister, Mrs. Greener, of Binghamton, N. Y.

Walter Slade.

Walter Slade died at his home in Attleboro, Mass., Saturday night, December 5, after a brief illness. Before removing to Attleboro, about a year ago, he had for several years been engaged in the florists' business at Franklin, Mass. Earlier in life he had been connected with the woolen mill industry in Pascoag, R. I. He was 63 years old, and leaves his wife, two sons and two daughters.

The Weekly Florists' Review

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress March 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

The price of cypress lumber has had an advance.

This is the season at which the need for experienced help is felt in all lines of the trade.

Neatness and order speak for the character of the stock a man grows, and his business methods.

The growers complain that they are not able to get the Rhea Reid rose to respond the way Richmond does.

The greenhouse builders say that inquiries for estimates indicate another season of active greenhouse building in 1909.

The Manetti having arrived, preparations for rose grafting are now in order. Each year a greater proportion of grafted roses is being planted.

A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., doubtless holds the largest stock of My Maryland rose and expects to propagate close to 300,000 for 1909 delivery.

The Secretary of Agriculture, in his annual report, places the value of the farm crops of 1908 at $7,778,000,000, a sum eclipsing all previous records.

Next Tuesday will be the shortest day in the year, but the two days following will be altogether too short for the work everyone will have to do in them.

"Many men of many minds" certainly describes the conditions as regards the tariff on horticultural commodities. There is no agreement as to what is wanted.

Don't tell your customers that the so-called Japanese air plants, now such good sellers, will flourish and become "nice, large plants." This has been done in stores, happily not numerous, where anything goes, so long as it leads to a sale, but such selling talk does not tend to establish a reputation for veracity.

The United States court has declared the tobacco combine to be illegal and ordered its dissolution. One of the companies named is the Conley Foil Co., which at one time did a large business supplying florists' foil.

ACCELERATING GROWTH.

That the growth of plants may be greatly accelerated by the use of radio-active minerals is the conclusion reached by Joseph Willcox after an exhaustive series of experiments, the results of which were detailed at the regular meeting of the American Philosophical Society at Philadelphia, December 4.

Mr. Willcox found during his tests that pitchblend, or other radio-active material, mixed in the ground in which seeds were planted, induced a growth of surprising strength and quickness. Plants so treated quickly overtopped those left to grow in natural soil, and at the end of a few weeks' time attained a size and strength nearly twice as great.

The discovery, Mr. Willcox said, will probably have no great value other than an experimental one, as the treatment of fields with radio-active minerals would bankrupt the farmers before they could harvest their crops. Pitchblend, however, is not so high in price, he said, that it cannot be used in greenhouses, and it may be that before long "radium" tomatoes and "radium" flowers will be placed on the market at fancy figures.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There is considerable variation in the report of conditions last week, referring to the volume of business. Some houses say they had a good week, while others report demand disappointing. There is, however, a unanimous report that had business been really brisk, the supply of stock would have been entirely inadequate. Even with the houses which had the best run of business the demand lacks the snap which had been expected to come with wintry weather. Supplies have been considerably reduced and a little of the old-time vigor in the demand would set wholesalers to skirmishing for stock to fill orders. This week starts out with little change in conditions. Supplies are light and demand nothing to brag about, though it has been sufficient to clean up all the really salable stock and cause an advance in prices for the best grades.

The receipts of Beauties are decidedly limited. Quality is not of the best and the state of the Beauty market leads to much speculation as to what the Christmas conditions will be. Good Bride and Maid have come into better favor, for the supply is now rather less than the demand for first-class stock. Killarney still has the call over other pink varieties, but Mrs. Marshall Field is doing right nicely; it is in good crop and is holding its color nicely. Richmond sells first rate.

Carnations have enjoyed an advance and are doing better than at any time in recent weeks. Prices are not yet up to where they should be at this season, but a much better clean-up has been made since December 10. Violets are not in large supply and the price has advanced a step. Paper Whites have become a glut. Valley is abundant and there are plenty of Easter lilies. A few chrysanthemums are seen, most of them

Tea Roses

We have a large supply of all varieties—all lengths of stem; fine heads. Maid, Bride, Killarney, Field, etc. We shall be able to take good care of all orders. The special call for red stock will make Richmond scarce; we shall have a large supply.

Carnations

This is one of our strongest lines. We regularly offer the largest lot of strictly high grade stock to be found in any house in the west. Large crops for Christmas and quality the very best. Especially strong on Enchantress; also large lots of fine pink and white.

Violets

We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. Send us an order for 1000 or 50,000—and we will have them for you.

Poinsettias

Large quantity of fine stock, packed at the greenhouses in cases of 50; no rehandling. Special select $4.00, Fancy $3.00, Smaller $2.00 per doz.

Also large supplies of Valley, Sweet Peas, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Stevia, etc. Plenty Green Goods, as always. Use our fine Farleyense for Christmas Boxes, etc.

Go ahead and sell; if you find yourself running short, wire or phone us and we will take the very best care of you. Always remember:

Rush the Xmas Orders

KILLARNEY

Best color, best flower, best stem. If you need strictly fancy stock, we have it. Also shorter lengths of equally good quality.

RICHMOND

Splendid quality in this leading Christmas rose. Fine large flowers, perfect foliage, on all lengths of stem, including the special long, fancy.

CARNATIONS

Day after day and year after year we handle more carnations than any other house in the West. Call on us Now, for Christmas, and all the time.

MAIDS AND BRIDES

You won't find better roses anywhere than those we are shipping to our customers. Large heads, good color, fine strong stems, clean foliage.

VIOLETS

Violets have for years been one of our leading specialties. We handle largest quantities and from the best growers in the United States.

GREENS

Red Berries are fine this year. Can supply Boxwood, Galax, Leucothoe, best fancy Ferns and all other greens in any quantity without notice.

small Bonnaffon, one might say very small. The few really good flowers are selling quite well. Sweet peas are holding back; there is a good demand for those with long stems, which are scarce. Orchids are more abundant.

Within the last few days there has been a marked increase in the business done in boxwood and galax. These articles always enjoy a special demand just before Christmas. All greenhouse greens are plentiful. Farleyense is being used more extensively for fine work.

Christmas Prospects.

In general, Christmas orders are not yet coming in heavily, although the last day or two has shown an increase. There are any number of inquiries for red roses and carnations, but in general the wholesalers will not promise red except where a general line of stock of other colors also is ordered. The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. is an exception to the rule, in that it reports having taken orders for about all the roses it is likely to be able to supply; Killarney is the principal crop. But the wholesalers, as almost always at this time, are a little nervous about supply. It looks as though it may be short. Nearly everyone predicts the late buyers of Beauties will pay more than the prices quoted for advance orders. It also is figured by many that first-class roses will in the end get up above usual Christmas rates. Carnations, it is thought, will equal the demand.

Buyers ought to make their needs known at once, so wholesalers can get some idea where they will be at. The late telegraph orders are what make the trouble at Christmas.

Growers should bear in mind that December 22 and 23 will be the big shipping days. Don't save up white.

Monthly Exhibition.

The Horticultural Society provided all the appurtenances of a flower show at the Art Institute, Saturday, December 12. Nick Miller was there with the entry cards and managerial records. George Asmus was on hand to serve as judge. But the entries proved to be only one in each class. Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., were represented by a nice table of Christmas plants in commercial sizes and kentias, pandanus and other plants called for in the schedule. Schiller put up a nice group of palms and ferns for exhibition only. Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., sent a table of late chrysanthemums, including good blooms of Nonin, John Burton, White Chadwick, Yanoma, Helen Frick, pink; Mrs. J. Bonall, a new pink; W. J. Crossley, Christmas red, and some singles.

The Horticultural Society gave a dinner at 6 p. m. at the Tip Top Inn, across the street from the Art Institute, to which a few of the trade members were invited to discuss what could be done to make future shows more successful. The society has planned a series of seven monthly exhibitions. W. N. Rudd has agreed to take charge of the January show, of carnations, and hopes to gather an exhibition which will include not only the novelties but all the standard varieties as grown by the best local people.

Various Notes.

John Pehrson has sold his store at 25 East Forty-third street to Victor Anderson, and in partnership with Alvin Marine has opened at 1212 Bryn Mawr avenue, where they are making a most satisfactory start. Before opening his place on Forty-third street, Mr. Pehrson was with the George Wittbold Co., and Mr. Marine has been with the same firm until quite recently. The name is Pehrson & Marine.

Most of the growers are enthusiastic over My Maryland, but Wietor Bros. say they will pin their faith to Mrs. Jardine. N. J. Wietor says the more they see of it the better they like it.

Mrs. E. E. Pieser is recovering nicely from the effects of her recent surgical operation. G. H. Pieser has been ill in the last fortnight, but is again feeling better.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is not only winding bouquet green, but is also making up large quantities of laurel wreathing. One of their Christmas orders is for 400 cattleyas.

Harville & Jones, the South Water street firm burned out a fortnight ago, has taken the vacant store at 52 and 54 Wabash avenue for its greens department. They have a big force of girls winding wreathing and making holly wreaths and are doing a big shipping business, practically all with the provision trade.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is beginning to cut Cardinal in fine shape. This variety was planted quite extensively and the flowers now being cut are entirely acceptable to the buyers who cannot get short and medium Beauties.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. is enjoying the longest run of heavy business in its history. Late hours are kept by the entire staff, night after night. A large order for December 15 was for the Hoyt funeral.

says he thinks Beauties will be generally scarce this Christmas. There almost always is a squeeze when it comes to supplying the eleventh-hour needs, and this year he says he thinks it will be much worse than usual.

It is reported that Fleischman's Jackson boulevard store has ordered 60,000 violets for delivery December 24.

E. E. Pieser says his prediction for Christmas is that there will be the greatest scarcity of red ever known in the market, with an overabundant supply of light-colored flowers.

E. Meuret, at Park Ridge, has one of the model carnation establishments of the locality. He ships to E. H. Hunt, C. M. Dickinson being one of his neighbors.

Scheiden & Schoos will plant 1,500 Gladiolus America and Augusta for early forcing.

Peter Reinberg got in early on My Maryland, having 2,500 plants of last year's delivery. He is propagating all that the plants give in the way of cuttings.

Max Awissus has returned to E. C. Amling, after having been with J. A. Budlong for some time. John Michelsen, of Mr. Amling's staff, was at New Castle Sunday to inspect the Christmas Beauty crop of the South Park Floral Co., and came back much enthused.

It is reported from Joliet that J. D. Thompson has gone into the newspaper business in Chicago.

Harry Fisher, of Kalamazoo, was one of the week's visitors.

Bassett & Washburn say they look for the largest Christmas business on record; their orders average larger than last year.

The A. L. Randall Co. plans to make a specialty of rooted cuttings, having already done quite a little in that line.

Messrs. Pruner and Johnson, of Hunt's force, are home from the road to stay till after the holidays.

C. W. McKellar says the cattleyas are coming into crop at just the right time.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a good crop of Maid and Bride.

George Reinberg now is cutting quite a few cattleyas.

Vaughan & Sperry say orders for violets are coming in satisfactorily, but that the buyers seem in no hurry to get in on carnations.

Zech & Mann report December 14 one of the best Mondays so far this season.

The George Wittbold Co. has secured the contract at $1,500 to decorate the Coliseum for the automobile show in February.

Frank Oechslin has a busy week before him. His Christmas orders for plants are exceptionally heavy and everyone wants delivery at once.

Fred Lautenschlager is the inventor of the Lauten fumigator, now being put on the market by an eastern firm.

The A. L. Randall Co. states that its first mail Monday morning, December 14, contained ninety-six letters.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

Ideal winter weather now prevails in Buffalo and vicinity, and seems likely to continue until the holidays. Trade has been rather quiet, but big preparations have been made for the holidays. Christmas red is in evidence everywhere and all stock is being prepared for the occasion. Most places in town have a good stock of poinsettias and azaleas, but begonias seem to be scarce.

Cut stock is plentiful enough to go around each day, and it seems as though it will not be as high as in former years. Violets, for some reason, have kept up in price since Thanksgiving. All the week they have sold for $1.25 and $1.50 per hundred, which is too high for this season.

Holly has arrived in large quantities in the commission market. Low prices prevailed last week, but the stock is small and rather poor.

W. J. Palmer has gone to Bermuda to rest up for the holiday rush. Mr. Palmer has been failing to a certain degree and has needed the rest. R.

GRANITEVILLE, N. Y.—Robert Thompson, florist, was recently indicted for arson, but at the trial in the Richmond county court the evidence proved his complete innocence and he was promptly acquitted.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

For the first time for a long while the demand has been equal to the supply, and even carnations were called for and got nearly the right price for this season of the year. The general conditions seem to have improved all around and prices on roses and carnations were advanced; by Saturday night these flowers were scarce. Fine Beauties were much in evidence, and lilies and Paper White narcissi were still to be had. Taken all around, it was a good week for the wholesalers.

The retail men also admit an improvement. The funeral of several prominent people helped, and there were also several decorations.

The shops are looking their best just now, all of them being filled with beautiful plants, ferns, begonias, primulas and a general assortment of nice things. The shopmen all declare they are going to cut out high priced cut flowers and sell plants. But take it from me, if they see an opportunity to sell a box of flowers on which the profit will be three times what it would be on the plants they would be likely to sell to the same person and not one-third the trouble to pack and deliver, they will not force the plant sale very hard. There is plenty of room for the plants, but the necessity for the cut flowers still exists and they will be in the market for their usual stock whether they want to be or not.

Florists' Club Outing.

The members of the Florists' Club responded to President Burki's invitation to visit the Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. last Thursday. A number of them started early in the morning and took in the places at Allison Park, and then joined the main body, which left on the 1 o'clock train. There was a party of over fifty men, among them the following from out of town: John Walker, Youngstown, O.; John Hellstern and friend, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Geo. A. McWilliams, Natrona, Pa.; C. A. De Muth, Connellsville, Pa. The balance of the party was made up of growers about the city.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. has a 250-acre farm, with a village of one hotel and twelve dwelling houses for their employees, who look after the stock under a quarter of a million feet of glass. The stock grown consists of Killarney, Richmond, Maid, Bride, Chatenay, Jardine, Perle, Cusin and Bon Silene roses, all the best carnations, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. The verdict of those who know a good thing when they see it was that, taken as a whole, they never saw anything better. The houses themselves were considered by some as too good and expensive for commercial houses, and the stock compared well with the houses, particularly the carnations. To anyone not connected with the business it would have been a surprise to hear that lot of growers showering praises on Mr. Burki and his staff of workmen. There certainly is not as much jealousy among the growers as among some other people.

After all the greenhouses, boiler houses, and heating system had been looked into, the party adjourned to the long packing house, about 50x200 feet, where they looked into the cooling system. Then came the tables of lunch, presided over by the ladies of the place, to which ample justice was done.

Before leaving, John Bader, in a few timely remarks, congratulated Mr. Burki and thanked him and the ladies for their kindness on this occasion, the second outing or field day of the Pittsburg Florists' Club. And, just by way of remark to other clubs, if you have never tried this, do so, as it seems to bring the boys closer together and bring out the best there is in them.

Various Notes.

T. J. Allen, of Lock No. 4, has leased his greenhouses to Mr. Linn, formerly connected with the Finleyville Floral Co.

It is reported that Geo. Garland is about to become associated with the Finleyville Floral Co.

Wm. Baker, who has been in the hospital for several weeks, a sufferer from typhoid fever, is convalescent, but shows the effect of his illness.

Karl Klinke, of McCallum Co., is another of the boys who has been under the weather lately.

There is an agitation among some of the members of the Florists' Club for a spring flower show. Why not? If Chicago can, what's the matter with Pittsburg?

The first shipments of Christmas trees are here.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. was in a bad way Saturday explaining things to customers. Their violets did not get in until night; they reported the train snowbound.

William Lauch was a visitor for the first time in two years. He has not been having the best of health for some time, but thinks that is all over, as he now feels like his old, true self. Hoo-Hoo.

MASON CITY, IA.—The Perth Florist Co. will build additional greenhouses during the coming year.

WEST GROVE, PA.

D. H. Green reports that he has completed a prosperous season. He had an excellent crop of mums and received fair prices for them.

As usual, the chrysanthemums of Thos. Baylis & Son occupied a conspicuous place in the decorations at the White House on Thanksgiving day.

C. S. Pickel, of the Dingee & Conard Co., went south last week for the purpose of superintending the packing and shipping of the company's large stock of roses located there.

The Conard & Jones Co. is still shipping, daily, large quantities of hardy shrubbery. Their business in this line has been unusually large this season. At the nursery Antone Wintzer exhibits with pride some fine specimens of new cannas, in full bloom.

Shipments of mushrooms from this point are growing heavier every week. Dingee's giant plant is now yielding a goodly quantity and these, supplemented by the output of several minor establishments, make West Grove grand headquarters for mushrooms. J. M.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

While some of the store florists are complaining of business being rather quiet and collections slow, others have fine trade and report business good. Roses are not plentiful and the wholesale houses cannot supply the demand. Carnations are scarce and bring a good price for this time of the year, selling at 3 cents to 4 cents. Stevia is plentiful at 2 cents a spray. Roman hyacinths are scarce. Narcissi are more plentiful, selling at 3 cents. Poinsettias are now making their appearance, but there is little demand at present.

Chrysanthemums are about gone. They sold readily this year and none went to waste. White mums were scarce and sold at good prices. There have been a great many weddings and receptions this fall, which have made a good demand for the mums.

Greens are plentiful. Bouquet green, holly and wild smilax have arrived here in great quantities and been placed in cold storage. Christmas trees are being stored away in cool cellars, ready for the rush.

The weather has been wonderfully fine and warm. The days are just like spring. The coal man says, "No business."

We are all looking for a fine Christmas trade, as orders are booked already and everybody seems to have money and times are good.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son are furnishing the downtown stores with narcissi and stevias, which are fine.

The Kansas City Flower Shop, at the corner of Eleventh and Main streets, has its large show window well filled with everything in bloom.

mums that we have seen for some time. He reports business good in his new store. His old customers stayed with him and he is getting quite a few new ones.

Joseph Austin reports a good business. A visit to his greenhouses shows that he is making quite large preparations for the holiday business. He heats with steam, using natural gas for fuel, which works perfectly. He is now planning to build two new houses next summer, each 30x108 feet, and also a fine conservatory and office on the corner of his vacant ground. Mr. Austin is located in one of the best districts in the south part of the city and he has a bright future before him.

The Alpha Floral Co. has been displaying more art in its show window for the last few weeks than heretofore, keeping the bulk of the stock in the inside cooler. They say that they are well stocked up on greens, such as holly and wild smilax, in cold storage.

Mr. Smith, proprietor of the Monroe Greenhouses, has everything neat and clean. His carnations are fine and large. His large collection of cyclamens is looking fine, but will not be in on time for Christmas. His Primula obconica are fine, but late in blooming. Mr. Smith, being cramped for room, will probably build in the near future a range of houses out in some suburb of the city.

S. B. Ayres, of Independence, Mo., has opened a store in the arcade of the Scarritt building. It is called the Arcade Flower Shop. W. H. H.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The conditions in the cut flower market this week are rather difficult to describe. Perhaps it can best be understood by taking the case of a wagon, or, let us be modern, and say an automobile, that is caught in a ditch. The wholesalers and growers have hold of the wheels and are pushing with all their might. They realize that they must push, or they will not succeed. Progress in all such cases is slow, but when the car once begins to move, which is expected about next week, it will go forward rapidly indeed.

Prices are advancing. It is most noticeable on roses; both the fancy and ordinary grades are in better demand at higher figures. Beauties are plentiful, and unusually good value for the season, at present quotations. Mrs. Jardine and Killarney come next. Both are fine in the special class. Richmond is also excellent, and selling fast. These four varieties promise to be strong factors at Christmas. Bride and Maid have advanced in price, but they are not likely to be overplentiful next week. It seems more difficult to control these varieties than some of the others. My Maryland will not be a factor, and Kaiserin is but little seen.

Carnations sold better last week, and it really seems as though the turning point had been reached in the long lane of adversity through which the divine flower has passed.

Cattleyas are selling well. They have advanced in price to Christmas figures, with indications that they will not be overplentiful next week. Gardenias are also in demand. More of the small flowers are coming in, such as mignonette, bouvardia, pansies, and, last but by no means least, violets. Poinsettias are more in evidence. Romans and Paper Whites sell poorly. Greens of all kinds are in demand. Before closing, it is only necessary to add that valley is a strong factor.

Indications for Christmas.

While it is impossible to give any certain information concerning Christmas flowers and greens, a careful survey of the field the week before Christmas leads to the belief that flowers generally, barring unexpectedly adverse weather, will be plentiful. There are a few exceptions to this rule, notably poinsettias, which have acted badly this season; and cattleyas, which have sold better than usual before Christmas. Brides and Maids of good quality will also be rather shy. Hardy greens promise to be unusually fine, holly exceptionally so.

Duty on Seeds.

The American Seed Trade Association, the Wholesale Seedsmen's League and D. M. Ferry & Co. have united in petitioning Chairman Payne, of the Ways and Means Committee of Congress, that the duty on vegetable seeds be changed from ad valorem to specific duties. The present duty is thirty per cent ad valorem. In its stead it is proposed to substitute a specific duty that will yield the government practically the same revenue, but will be fairer to those importing seeds. This action was decided upon at a meeting of the committee of the American Seed Trade Association held in New York December 2. Its representatives went to Washington to present the schedule agreed upon. The Seedsmen's League, which met in New York on the following day, telegraphed its endorsement of the association's schedule to Washington. D. M. Ferry & Co. were represented at the meeting on December 2. It is believed that this practically unanimous endorsement of the specific duty by the whole organized seed industry will carry great weight at Washington.

Edgely.

The greenhouses of the Floral Exchange represent a definite idea in the business world. It is the effort of capital to place our calling on a business basis. Viewed from this standpoint, the plant of the Floral Exchange is of absorbing interest. The keynote in the construction of the greenhouses is economy in cost, put into effect in exceedingly large houses, where the amount of glass surface required to cover a given number of plants is reduced to a minimum. This saving in cost of construction goes hand in hand with the saving in cost of operation, the amount of labor required in the large houses of the Floral Exchange being smaller in proportion than in the houses of most of our growers.

Another peculiarity in the management of the Floral Exchange, as compared with most of our growers' plants, lies in the longevity of the stock grown. Houses of roses are here seen that have been growing in the selfsame position and soil for seven or eight years and have attained a size that cannot be duplicated in large places elsewhere in this district. Statistics prove that these houses have done as well at Edgely in their later as in their earlier years, the soil being unchanged beyond the ingredients added in weekly additions by a "soup" of great strength. Still another radical difference between the business methods employed at Edgely and those at other plants, is the systematic way in which the distribution of the product is managed. All the large markets in the east are regularly supplied with flowers from Edgely according to their needs. The great advantage of this method can be seen at a glance, because in times of overproduction at a given point Edgely will not suffer from dependence on that one market.

These are the principal points that impress Edgely most strongly on florists. One remains to be mentioned. Edgely is the creation of the active brain of a man who was not obliged to toil up the floral ladder. The significance of this statement will be readily grasped by every florist who has struggled to overcome adverse conditions, feeling that all his or her growing knowledge of plants was necessary to earn a livelihood. Edgely stands as an example today of the courage and perseverance of one setting out to discover an unknown world and pushing on in spite of all obstacles.

Various Notes.

The Robert Craig Co. paid off all its stockholders in full, principal and interest, December 15. It will be remembered that the creditors of the company were offered stock in settlement of their accounts at the time of the receivership, Mr. Craig assuring them that their stock would in time be redeemed. This has now been fulfilled. Mr. Craig and his son have received hearty congratulations from their many friends on the successful outcome of their efforts.

Samuel S. Pennock believes that Mrs. Jardine is the finest midwinter rose on our market today, excepting only American Beauty.

Fred Ehret, who believes in having a choice assortment to show his customers, has some fine white lilac, grown by Raimbault, of Buena, N. J., in his pretty Fairmount avenue shop.

George Redles spoke before the Germantown Horticultural Society December 14. The annual election of officers took place, the old board remaining practically unchanged.

Thomas Brown, St. Martins, Philadelphia, spoke before the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society December 15.

Among the many visitors in this city recently were Lloyd G. Blick, of Norfolk, Va.; Ernest Ashley, Allentown, Pa.; A. B. Ellsworth and Mrs. Ellsworth, Allentown, Pa.; J. Van Lindley, Pomona, N. C., and a representative of Z. D. Blackistone, Washington, D. C.

William J. Baker has received the first Trumpet Major seen in this market this season. December 11 brought his initial shipment.

Berger Bros. are fortunate in receiving superb holly, which is in demand. Perhaps "fortunate" is hardly the right word. They chose it carefully, had it carefully cut, and shipped at the right time.

Joseph Swearer, manager, has completed his new house, 35x200 feet, at Holland, Pa. The soil is all in, and sweet peas planted.

Alexander B. Scott is much pleased with the success that his blooms of Mrs. Jardine and White Killarney are meeting in the cut flower market.

Victor Groshens, of Roslyn, is adding another house, 29x500 feet. One-half of this house is already glazed. The other half is nearing completion. It is understood that sweet peas will be grown next season, and roses after the first crop is harvested.

Lilley & Upton are receiving fine Richmond and Killarney roses and long-stemmed mignonette.

The Henry F. Michell Co. sent out with its catalogue a suggestive order sheet which is a novelty in its way. It contains twelve pages, with all the leading garden flower seeds, fertilizers, and implements, alphabetically printed, enabling the customer to write his order rapidly and clearly and suggesting to him anything he may have forgotten. Only the numbers have to be written.

Myers & Samtman, Wyndmoor, Pa., have booked orders for 60,000 young plants of My Maryland and orders still are coming in. Some of these plants have already been delivered. Mr. Myers considers this rose a wonder. In spite of the heavy propagation, they could cut a thousand nice blooms for Christmas, but the wood is too valuable.

Victor Groshens, Roslyn, Pa., will have an immense crop of Richmond roses for Christmas. This house, which has yielded but few blooms throughout the fall, now looks like a field of wheat, so evenly developed are the buds.

Casper & George L. Pennock, Lansdowne, Pa., will have a heavy crop of fine Beauties for Christmas. The condition of their houses reflects great credit on the foreman, Herbert Baker.

The retail stores are nearly all busily engaged in tying bows of Christmas red ribbon on scarlet immortelle wreaths and bells. So generous are the supplies seen everywhere that it suggests the possibility of the retailers getting along without any flowers.

A. Farenwald, Hillside, Pa., will have an excellent crop of Killarney for the Christmas holidays.

Myers & Samtman expect to have their usual big crop of Beauties for Christmas. A number of orders have already been booked for specials at $1 each.

Fancy Beauties took the long expected advance December 15, $4 per dozen being readily paid, and $5 a dozen being asked for choice stock. Other roses, select grade, are also advancing.

M. Rice & Co. report that Monday, December 14, saw the largest number of mail orders of the season. They came from all parts of the country, even from so far as California. PHIL.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week was in rather good condition and there was hardly anything in oversupply. It is beginning to look as though business has really started in for a good season. The uptown retailers had a busy week in work for social affairs. The downtown florists report a fairly good over-the-counter trade and a good deal of funeral work.

The wholesalers are receiving shipments of extra fine roses and carnations and are disposing of them at fairly good prices. California violets are having a good run and are cleaning up almost daily, with prices up to 75 cents per hundred. Chrysanthemums are almost over, although some of the houses are still receiving some extra good blooms of Eaton and Mrs. Jerome Jones. But most of the mums and small stuff are only good for funeral work. Bulbous stock is improving in quality and quite a few Romans and Paper Whites are now coming in.

There are plenty of greens of all kinds, including bouquet green and holly.

Club Meeting.

The last meeting of the year of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, December 10, in the Bowman building. The meeting opened at 2 o'clock, with President Young in the chair and twenty-five members present. Several important communications were read, one from the national flower show treasurer, in which it was stated that the fifty per cent paid in was returned to the club.

The committee on smoker reported that arrangements were under way and that the smoker would take place the latter part of January, the date and place to be announced at the next meeting.

Wm. Mackle was elected to membership and Jule Schafer, an employee of Grimm & Gorley, made application.

A. S. Halstead, of the St. Clair Floral Co., of Belleville, exhibited a vase of his new Twentieth Century carnation, of the Lawson pink variety.

W. C. Smith was recommended by the club for state vice-president for Eastern Missouri of the S. A. F.

The club decided to reconsider holding night meetings, as the last one was a failure, so afternoon meetings will prevail from now on as usual, on the second Thursday of each month.

The treasurer's report showed a healthy balance. The club is now in fine shape financially and well up in membership.

The question box, which closed the meeting, brought out a lively discussion.

Various Notes.

A. Y. Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., visited Chicago last week, buying stock for the holidays.

C. Young & Sons Co. is showing a lot of well grown blooming plants at the Olive street store. Trade in fall bulbs has been brisk, also in funeral work.

A great many extra fine funeral designs were made for the Hirshberg funeral. George Waldbart, C. Young & Sons Co. and Mrs. Ayres each had several.

The Bixby ball, held at the St. Louis Club, one of the largest held this season, was decorated for by the Ellison Floral Co. They report that 500 American Beauties were used.

Hugo Gross, W. J. Pilcher and the Ahners, of Kirkwood, are sending the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. large consignments of extra fine California violets and carnations, for which the firm says there is a good demand.

John Connon, of Webster Groves, reports a good run of trade in work for weddings, receptions and funerals. Mr. Connon grows a great deal of stock at his place, but often is a heavy buyer in our market.

Fred Ammann's fine stock of roses are having a good run at C. A. Kuehn's. A. C. Canfield's and Bell Miller's consignments at this place are of good quality.

Baer's Peoria carnations are, as usual, among the best in the market.

Chas. Beyer, Schray and Sanders are well supplied with fine blooming plants for Christmas.

Central; Frank Vennemann, of Kirkwood; Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, were the out-of-town members who attended the Florists' Club meeting December 10.

The Florists' Bowling Club rolls at the Westminster alleys, 4000 Olive street. All florists who wish to bowl will find the boys there every Monday night. President Connon says all are welcome at any time. J. J. B.

NEW ORLEANS.

The big display of Christmas trees at all the flower stores seems to indicate that the sale of them will be large this year. Plenty of pinetops coming from over the lake are also brought up here and find ready purchasers at a smaller price. Poinsettia pulcherrima, helped by several mild winters, is in full bloom all over the gardens, growing as high as ten feet. It seems, if the English method of preserving poinsettia bracts, by immersing the ends for about one inch in boiling water, is in any way effective, that an enterprising man could make some payable shipments to northern localities.

Hardy palms of many kinds, such as phœnix, chamærops, washingtonia, etc., are loaded with seeds. Would it not be more direct to get them from here instead of going far away from the United States?

D. Guthler is building a double house 15x130 with raised benches, using butted glass and installing a Wilks boiler, for raising cucumbers in winter and, no doubt, followed by chrysanthemums.

M. M. L.

CROWERS INCORPORATE.

The Violet Growers' Association, of Rhinebeck, N. Y., has filed a certificate of incorporation with the Secretary of State, at Albany. The incorporators are A. C. Toff, L. Van Vredenburgh, Edwin Marquardt, James Snyder and Stanton Rockefeller. The purposes of the organization are declared to be the commercial welfare of the members and their protection from "the abuses which affect the trade."

GLASS WORKERS ASK MORE PAY.

A general increase of practically twenty-five per cent in wages, to take effect December 19, will be demanded by the National Window Glass Workers. A. L. Faulkner, president of the union, said the members would make the fight of their lives to obtain the higher rate of compensation, and it is feared it will mean a labor war that will affect the glass market. At least, it means a rise in prices.

ROSA LAXA AS A ROSE STOCK.

We notice a recommendation of this stock in an American contemporary, says the Horticultural Advertiser (English), and think it may be as well to warn our readers against investing in same, as it has been tried and condemned by our leading growers. If our recollection is correct this stock was introduced some ten years or so ago by Otto Froebel, and its remarkable vigor and quickness in reaching maturity seemed to promise a considerable measure of utility. It has not, however, made a good standard stem as was hoped, and its abnormal fertility in producing suckers is against its use in other forms. As far as we have gathered, the only point in favor of R. laxa as a stock is that it is ready to bud very early in the season and consequently may be utilized for buds from plants grown under glass. Buds inserted early push the same season and small plants of novelties may thus be had for autumn sale. We do not advocate this system, as the plants produced under it would not give satisfaction under all conditions, but many are willing to sacrifice something in the modern rush to be first with a new thing.

KINDLY discontinue my advertisement of alyssum. It did the work. I sold out clean and could have sold more.—SHEARER THE FLORIST, Winchester, Ky.

CHARLES HENRY FOX, Sign of the Rose, Broad below Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—M. C. Sadewater, whose greenhouses are located on Tenth street, between Charles street and Third avenue, has opened a downtown store at 322 East State street.

MERIDEN, CONN. — William Woodley furnished the decorations at the Winthrop hotel, December 4, on the occasion of the debut of Miss Dorothy Doolittle, daughter of Hon. E. J. Doolittle. This gathering was referred to by the newspapers as the most brilliant social event of the season here, and the decorations were correspondingly lavish and artistic. In the general color scheme, throughout the reception hall, the parlors and the dining room, palms, chrysanthemums and smilax were effectively combined. Ferns, potted plants and a variety of cut flowers were also used.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn.; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE California growers are reported to be holding stiff for the same prices which they quoted last year.

ONION seed values are thought to be in line with last year's. The Globe sorts, if anything, will be lower.

CUCUMBER seed of the pickling varieties looks as though it will go as high in price as it did several years ago. The crop is small and the demand is likely to be large.

THE Barteldes concerns at Lawrence and Denver have issued independent and distinct catalogues this year, each an improvement on anything the firm has heretofore sent out.

THE holly market has stiffened up a bit this week. While most holly is good this year and prices have been moderate, there still is considerable stock not worth what is expected for it by the southern consignee.

SOME varieties of the newer muskmelon, usually high in price, seem to be overplentiful and reports have it that they must come down to the level of the standard sorts. Some of the standard varieties are quite scarce and an advance on them is looked for.

IT appears that certain seedsmen feel it is permissible to pronounce the trade a unit when one and the same opinion is held by the Seed Trade Association, the Wholesale Seedsmen's League and D. M. Ferry & Co. Now, that's no small compliment to Brother Bowen.

THE 1908 bean crop is far short of normal, but in certain quarters it is asserted that some beans have been carried over and that a plentiful supply is in sight. This may be so in some instances, but if the year 1909 develops an average demand for beans there is likely to be full realization of the shortage before the season is over.

THE general 1909 retail catalogue of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, is a distinct advance over its predecessors. It is only a couple of years since this well known firm of seed growers took up the retail mail order business in the Pacific coast territory, and their development of this branch has been watched with interest. The 1909 book contains 128 pages, within colored covers, and a quite complete line now is listed, including florists' plants and nursery stock as

Seeds of Choice Herbaceous and Alpine Plants

We desire to extend our already large business with our Colonies and the United States, America, in the above class of seeds, our great specialty. We know that our seeds have been the means of enabling many lovers of old-fashioned hardy perennials and Alpine plants to obtain a good collection at a very small cost, whereas the expense of getting plants from England is prohibitory in most cases. Catalog, which contains descriptions of nearly 3000 kinds of flower seeds of all classes, including latest novelties, and also much educational matter, will be sent free on application. such opportunities open at the present time.

Push along with the catalogue or you will be behind the procession.

In addition to the valley pips reported last week as arriving from Hamburg on the Patricia, there were 382 cases in care of P. H. Petry & Co.

Early on the morning of December 9 there was a small fire on the second floor of the seed warehouse of the Amzi Godden Co., Birmingham, Ala., but the loss did not exceed $1,000.

Mr. Hogg, of Hogg & Lytle, Ltd., Toronto, growers of peas and other seeds in Canada and Michigan, is visiting the trade in England, but is expected home shortly after New Year's.

It is reported that the canners are placing orders for peas at the advanced prices for next year's harvest. The advance looks high to them, but the conditions all around warrant an advance and there seems to be nothing else for them to do.

The National Canners' Association is preparing for a record-breaking convention at Louisville, February 1 to 6, and many seedsmen will be in attendance. Four special trains will run to the convention, one from Boston, one from New York, one from Baltimore, and another from Chicago.

At the last meeting of the directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League Charles H. Breck presented a full and satisfactory report from the manager of the credit bureau of the league. This report and its recommendations so impressed the Board that a committee was appointed to confer with the manager of the credit bureau as to the practicability of greatly extending its usefulness to the seed trade in general.

R. Nicholson, of the Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, sends a copy of the 1909 catalogue and says: "We pride ourselves on this being the best catalogue we ever have sent out. This is the first year we have had a first-class lithographed cover and we think you will admit it is a fairly good job." It is. It shows Nicholson's Southern Beauty tomato on the front and Mean's watermelon on the back, in a way that seed buyers seem to like.

It is reported from Pinneberg, Germany, that a considerable number of wholesale growers who send lily of the valley in large quantities via Hamburg to England, Norway, Sweden, Russia and the United States have not done the customary amount of business. The reason given is the unfavorable weather in the summer season. As a consequence of the lessening of the supply, the prices advanced so that the one balanced the other. The prices are ten to twenty-five per cent higher than those of 1907.

PURE SEED INVESTIGATIONS.

In his annual report, made public December 14, James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, speaks of the Department's work for pure seeds as follows:

"The pure-seed work has been extended during the past year by the establishment of testing laboratories in cooperation with the Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station and the Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station. At the laboratory in Washington, D. C., a larger number of samples of seed have been tested for farmers and seedsmen than in previous years. As directed by congress, forage-plant seeds have been secured from dealers and examined for the presence of adulterants. Many lots of Kentucky bluegrass and orchard-grass seed have been found to be adulterated, but the practice of adulteration has practically ceased with other forage-plant seeds.

"The efforts of this Department in encouraging the use of good seeds are being appreciated, and a reflection of this is seen in the fact that several of the larger seed houses have recently established private seed-testing laboratories. On account of the lack of instruction in technical seed testing in the agricultural colleges, this Department has offered assistance along this line. So far a number of seedsmen, as well as state agricultural experiment station workers, have availed themselves of this opportunity."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending December 5 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto	9	$ 310	Fennel	20	$ 238
Anise	86	1238	Grass 610		4008
Canary 1689		2839	Hemp 175		756
Caraway ... 400		3538	Millet 200		557
Castor 2725		8911	Mustard 175		1501
Clover 50		1350	Poppy 200		891
Cummin ... 358		4164	Rape 111		660

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $29,094.

ENDORSE SPECIFIC DUTIES.

F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C., has filed with the Committee on Ways and Means, now considering tariff revision, the recommendations of the American Seed Trade Association covering the schedule on seeds and bulbs, which it is sought to change from ad valorem to specific duties, and with it he has filed the following:

Hon. Sereno E. Payne, Chairman Ways and Means Committee House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

The Wholesale Seedsmen's League by its Directors have unanimously adopted the following:

Resolved, That we heartily approve and endorse the American Seed Trade Association's resolutions and schedule for specific duties on seeds and bulbs, dated December 2, and filed with your honorable committee.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and annual election of the New Jersey Floricultural Society, held December 11, resulted in the choosing of the following officers: President, Malcolm MacRorie, reëlected; vice-president, Edwin Thomas; secretary, John Dervan; treasurer, William Reid; arbitration committee, A. T. Caparn, William Reid and John Hayes.

Rev. Charles Lightipe was made an honorary member and Charles MacTaggert, of Thorburn's, was elected to membership.

The new hybrid, Cypripedium insigne Lageræ, of Lager & Hurrell, which is to the dark form of this genus what the Sanderæ is to the yellow variety, was exhibited by Edwin Thomas, gardener for George Graves. J. B. D.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

This last warm, wet spell finishes the mums, a few late varieties of which are still seen in the store windows.

In consequence of the unfavorable weather, roses are less abundant and many are not as strong-stemmed as could be desired. Carnations are fine and in good crop, except red; this color is always scarce at holiday time. Violets are not so plentiful as formerly, but sell well and at fair prices. The demand for Christmas greens bids fair to be as good as last year, and judging from the quantities put in by Brown's seed store and others there will be enough to stock up every grocery store in town. Some good holly is offered at $3.50 per case, a price not before attained in this market. There is another grade offered at $5, fine glossy foliage and better quality than the other, but it is having hard pulling when so satisfactory a grade can be had for less.

Various Notes.

Eli Cross has the front of his store fairly smothered with holly wreaths, green-wreathing, heather and loose holly.

Henry Smith and the Grand Rapids Floral Co. have large quantities of pot plants of Paper Whites, poinsettias, Romans and some azaleas, with the usual quantities of ferns, palms, etc.

Crabb & Hunter have a quantity of well flowered azaleas and poinsettias, also pans of Romans and Paper Whites.

Death has been busy in our midst and taken away one of our most popular florists, Frank M. Strong, president of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co.

Recent visitors included Adolph Goldenberg, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York; E. C. Pruner, of Hunt's, Chicago; Willis Kinyon, of South Bend, Ind.; E. L. Kinyon, Lowell, Mich., and D. D. Johnson, of the Nitrate Agencies Co., Chicago. G. F. C.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Indianapolis Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting at Walhalla hall, Wednesday evening, December 9, with about thirty members present. After the transaction of routine business, bowling and cards were indulged in, and enjoyed by all. We have some crack bowlers and expect to send a team to Cincinnati for the S. A. F. convention next summer.

The club expects to entertain the members of the Carnation Society at a smoker Wednesday evening, January 28, when the society meets in this city.

The next regular monthly meeting will be held the first Wednesday evening, at A. Wiegand's place. All come. Don't forget the date. F. W. G.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The cut flower trade last week showed signs of improvement. There is a fairly good supply of flowers, with the demand about equal. Funeral work is very good, calling for lots of stock.

E. Y. Peirce has a fine lot of Lorraine begonias and primulas.

R. H. Woodhouse's place is in fine shape. His carnations are looking especially well.

The mills here are all running on full time, and the florists look for a good Christmas business.

LETTUCE WITH FLOWERS.

Lettuce will grow in almost any hothouse temperature, if well ventilated, but it prefers the carnation temperature. Many florists could make considerably more out of their houses if they had a few boxes of lettuce on hand, ready to transplant whenever it is seen that a bench is to be empty for several weeks before needed for other plants. Even if only a small quantity is grown, it is a pleasure to have it and the grocer will gladly take it and credit it on the account which is getting so big that it would be a pleasure to him to make the credit as large as possible.

The Grand Rapids Forcing is the favorite variety. It should be transplanted about eight inches apart. Three or four inches of soil will grow a crop, but a little deeper is better. H. G.

FUNGUS ON LETTUCE.

We wish to inquire about a fungus which is ruining some of our lettuce. We have two houses in which it is almost impossible to get plants to start at all, where the previous crop of large lettuce rotted off in spots at the top of the soil. A local experiment station has advanced the theory that the soil contained a disease called the drop, caused by a fungus called sclerotinia, and recommends steaming the soil, as a cure. Do you know of such a disease, and what would you recommend to eradicate it?

We have used Bordeaux mixture and also formalin. Do you think that turning the soil to a depth of ten or twelve inches, leaving the subsoil on the surface, would be of any benefit? If any remedy can be applied, please advise.

H. & C.

I think that your experiment station has undoubtedly diagnosed the case correctly, and for this disease, as well as for many other diseases, especially in lettuce growing, I think that there is no remedy equal to the steam sterilizing, as recommended by your experiment station. Sterilizing by steam, properly done, so that the soil is heated to a temperature above 212 degrees for fifteen or twenty minutes, will not only kill all insects and weed seed, but also all spores and germs of all diseases that may be present in the soil. This steam cooking may easily be done by placing rows of common 3-inch drain tile in trenches, running the full length of the bed, with the lines about two feet apart. Cover these with soil, throw old carpets or mats over the beds to keep in the heat, and then turn the steam into the pipe lines by having a box header at the end of the bench, opening out into all the lines of tile, and attaching the steam feed to this box.

The Sargent sterilizer, made by George Sargent, Belmont, Mass., is a modern device and a good tool for all lettuce growers to have. It is like a farm drag in appearance, but made of gas pipe, and the teeth are perforated to permit the steam to escape. It is placed on the bed and pressed down into the soil as far as it will go, then covered over and the steam turned into it.

When lettuce plants are seen to rot in spots and die, they should immediately be removed and all rotted leaves with them. Then the soil where the plants were removed should be sprinkled with a handful of sulphur, to kill the spores of the disease; otherwise this disease will live on decayed matter on top of the soil, bits of straw and wood or manure, and be on hand to attack your plants again later.

If you cannot steam the soil this season, it would be well for you to clean house thoroughly and scrape off the top soil thinly, then turn it under deep, as you mention. Then, if you have no other plants in the house and no other houses connected, fumigate with sulphur by burning it, and you will have a better chance of getting a crop again.

But bear in mind that a healthy plant is like a healthy person, able to resist attacks of disease. It is when the plants are weakened by being too hot or wet, not ventilated enough or wet at night, that they become an easy prey and fall fast under the ever-present disease germs. A dry foliage, especially at night, with plenty of fresh air at all times and a temperature even and cool, means ideal conditions for the lettuce, but not for the diseases. Diseases flourish in conditions not favorable to plants. H. G.

TRANSPLANTING ASPARAGUS.

We are desirous of knowing whether or not a person will get better results by planting one-year-old asparagus plants or by planting the two-year-old plants. When is the best time of the year to plant? C. H. L.

The majority of asparagus growers use the one-year-old plants when planting out a new bed. It seems to be the general opinion that they are better than two-year-old plants for transplanting. Why they have this opinion few of them can give any good reason, other than that they have always heard that one-year-old plants are to be preferred or that they have read it somewhere.

Perhaps some authority made extensive experiments at one time and published the results, which have been rewritten and taken for granted ever since. At any rate, I cannot see anything in it. After several years' experience in growing asparagus and several trials or comparative tests of one-year-old and two-year-old plants, I am decidedly in favor of the two-year-old plants.

One of the greatest advantages in using the older plants, is that in case the season is unfavorable, by being cold and wet or extremely hot and dry, they stand it much better than the smaller plants and there will be fewer vacancies in the field to refill with live plants the next spring. This is an important point in asparagus culture. If you have three acres of asparagus and about a third of the plants are missing, you really have only two acres.

The time to plant asparagus out is as soon as you can work the soil in the spring—about the same time that the earliest potatoes are planted. Get good, sorted plants, whatever you do. I do not buy of the man who offers them the cheapest, but prefer to pay more for them to the man who can furnish the best. H. G.

HOUGHTON, ME.—C. F. Strout is building a greenhouse, to be used in forcing lettuce.

MAITLAND, FLA.—Albert Buckwell reports that orange growers are not getting very good prices this season, but everyone seems to be busy at the packing houses.

PACIFIC COAST.

Holly in the Pacific northwest is splendidly berried this year.

The Park Board at Tacoma, Wash., proposes to issue bonds to the amount of $500,000 for the improvement of the park system.

San Jose, Cal.—Frank W. Street, a well-known florist of this vicinity, has accepted a position with the Fairview Greenhouse Co., of Victoria, B. C., and will make that city his home.

PLANTS FOR CARPET BEDDING.

For the last few seasons there has been a good demand for carpet-bedding plants on the Pacific coast, and it is surprising that many of our larger dealers do not devote more space to this kind of stock. Of the easiest growth and requiring so little attention, it pays well because of these advantages and also because of ready sale.

Achyranthes in several varieties are usually not killed by frosts in California. Often they are not affected at all, in which case cuttings can be taken at any time during December or January and put in flats in coldframes, or, better still, given a little bottom heat. If the indications are for cold weather, a good supply of cuttings should be taken in the fall and rooted during the cold spell under glass.

Geraniums of the many varieties used are treated in the same way as the achyranthes, the only care necessary being to see that they do not get too much moisture when they are in the process of rooting. Alternantheras are slightly more delicate than either of these and do not root quite as readily. They are quite susceptible to cold weather and should be given a little bottom heat.

Salvias are of the easiest culture and can be rooted in two weeks easily. Dusty millers will root as well in the open as under glass. Lobelias can be either broken up from large clumps or grown from seed. Usually the latter is preferable. Golden feather is best grown from seeds; also better plants can be had in this way. Ageratums can be grown either way, but seedlings make the best plants. Begonias are best grown from seed, which should be planted in January under glass. They are rather delicate at first, but grow rapidly, and can be put outside after they are a couple of inches high. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business for the first week in December has been quiet. There is but little doing aside from funeral orders. The public apparently is keeping its spare cash with the intention of making a big showing at Christmas time. Flowers are comparatively cheap, especially in the line of carnations. The best fancy carnations can be had at the rate of $3 per hundred and poorer stock is sold as low as $1.50 per hundred. We have had only a few nights' frost this season, and the weather since then has been so mild that there has been no tendency to cut flowers short.

Roses are holding their own well, and the prices during the last few days have shown some signs of stiffening. The best Beauties cost the stores from $2 to $3 per dozen. Brides and Maids can be had at 50 cents to $1 per dozen, and the same prices hold for other sorts.

Inside mums are in shorter supply than they have been. Appleton, Mrs. Jerome Jones and Bonnaffon cost the retailers from $1 to $3 per dozen. Outside mums are still plentiful enough, but the prices have advanced probably fifty per cent within the last two weeks.

Violets are plentiful and good. Nothing sells except Princess of Wales, and these wholesale at 75 cents per dozen bunches. Valley moves slowly. Smilax is getting more plentiful. Maidenhair fern and asparagus are scarcer. Red berries are being used in large quantities by the florists and hucksters. Tons are sold every day in San Francisco and vicinity. Some Paper White narcissi have made their appearance and are being sold at $1 per hundred, wholesale.

From indications around the stores, there will be a good Christmas trade. Crowds of shoppers are seen on the streets every afternoon, when the weather is pleasant, and if numbers are any criterion as to future business we are going to have a good Christmas and New Year.

Various Notes.

The Piedmont Floral and Seed Co., of Oakland, has moved to the Central Bank building, at the corner of Broadway and Fourteenth street.

The Wickstrom Floral Co. is now located at 810 Van Ness avenue.

C. C. Morse & Co. have issued their catalogue for 1909. It is fully up to the mark set by this firm and is one of the most elaborate floral books printed on the coast.

C. D. Weaver, of Los Angeles, passed through San Francisco on his way to Portland and Seattle. He expects to be away from home about three weeks. G.

TACOMA, WASH.

Current Comment.

The business taken as a whole is in the best shape and largest volume since the writer has been interested in Tacoma, and that is a period of five years. The stocks in general appear to be in a healthier and better condition, too, and up to the present the local supplies have been equal to or more than the demand. We lately made a visit around among the growers and everywhere found the general appearance better than ever before. Good cuts of carnations seemed to be in sight everywhere, and better flowers than usual. The kinds planted were comparatively few and not a place had the latest, except that one place had a few hundred Victory, which certainly showed promise to be a winner. The red carnation is not planted except in limited numbers and the way matters stand now the red will set its own price, and get it, too, within the next few weeks. As a rule red is not a seller except at holiday times, when, of course, the supply is never equal to the demand, so we suggest that someone give us a liquid so that we may color a lot for the occasion. The green won't go at this date.

Enchantress seems to be the favorite and will sell every day in the year, and in our opinion it—or one of its color—will always sell well. The White Perfection and Lady Bountiful are two that are going to stay a while.

Dear old Lawson! Truly, it sounds harsh to hear: "Lawson? Why! You can't give them away." I found two years ago it was getting hard to sell and most growers have dropped it. The color is not wanted any more and no varieties of similar colors can be sold readily; it wouldn't make any difference if they had a stem equal to and a flower as big as a 12-inch sunflower.

Everyone has reported poor business all summer, but we had a severe frost very early, which killed off the outdoor stock almost entirely, so that it made business jump suddenly in the stores and at retail growing establishments.

We can see right now that the demand will not nearly be supplied for Christmas. Several of our growers will have a fine lot of good mums and that will mean good money, for we notice that since the election in November the call increased and that the best was none too good.

I hardly know where roses will soar to for Christmas, as few are grown locally and this market is almost always shy on good roses. The same may be said of violets, but the violets from California are good and people buy them freely. Of course the odor is left in California, or on the train, but we sometimes are obliged to revive them with the atomizer and some water. Some few customers know it—and don't object—and some say they think them fine and fresh, and are contented and happy. Of course every one is glad to see others happy and pleased.

Already we know of preparations being made for a larger stock than ever of outdoor grown flowers for next season and we want to brighten our beautiful city up all we can for the admiration of the tourists certain to come to see Tacoma next year during the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition. S. L. H.

SALEM, MASS.—J. Joseph Gorman has opened a flower department at the store of David G. Whelton, on Essex and Summer streets, and is making some handsome window displays.

EVERETT, MASS.—Clifford Tilton was recently swindled out of more than $40 by means of forged checks. Twice within two hours a well dressed stranger, of middle age, appeared at Mr. Tilton's store and purchased flowers for a "dead sister," in each case paying for the flowers with a check which bore the forged signature of Mayor Charles Bruce. Both checks were made payable to "Daniel Clark," and were on the Winthrop National bank of Boston.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

W. P. Gibson, a Californian, will start a nursery at Phoenix, Ariz.

B. F. Blount has been in the nursery business at Eagle Lake, Fla., for twenty-five years, growing citrus stock.

Growers of ornamentals express every confidence that 1909 will prove a better year than any heretofore experienced in that department of the nursery business.

The Globe Nursery Co., of Bristol, Tenn., which conducts a nursery at Wyndale, Washington county, Va., has purchased a farm near Blountville, Tenn., paying for it $25,000. The farm contains 500 acres and will be used for nursery purposes.

The apple growers complain of unsatisfactory market conditions, but when the city housewife finds a peck of Northern Spy or Baldwin, costing 50 cents to 60 cents at the corner grocery, contains not one perfect fruit, can you blame her for thinking the consumer is the one who has a kick coming?

INSECTS ATTACKING CONIFERS.

Some species of conifers are liable to attack from different insect pests. During the last two or three years, the arborvitæ has been infested by a small caterpillar which bores into the tips of the young twigs and turns them yellow and rusty, and soon gives the whole tree a very sickly appearance. It is said to be a serious pest in some parts of Canada. Dr. James Fletcher, entomologist of the Experimental Farms in Canada, gave a brief account of it in the annual report of the Experimental Farms for 1906. Dr. Fletcher states that large numbers of parasites are found active in connection with the insect and there is every reason to believe the outbreak will soon come to an end. John Dunbar, of Rochester, in an address before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, said he had seen its ravages in natural arborvitæ plantations in western New York. "I do not know to what extent it prevails in this country," he said, "as the account in the Canadian report is the first published description I have seen of it. From the nature of its operations it can be seen that it is difficult to deal with by any spraying methods."

The mite known to gardeners as red spider is a serious pest of some spruces and junipers in many parts of this country. It is always worse in a dry season. It can be readily controlled where there is a strong pressure of water under command, applied with a hose, but that is rarely available. Water applied with a hose from a powerful spray pump will dislodge it. John F. Johnston, superintendent of Paul Dana's estate in Long Island, who is an expert cultivator of conifers, has lately been using sulphur to destroy it on spruces and junipers. He blows it on with a bellows in the morning when the dew is on the branches, followed at intervals throughout the summer with occasional strong, hose sprayings of water.

The white pine weevil causes serious injury in many parts of the country. It sometimes attacks spruces and other pines, but not to any serious extent. The beetle lays its eggs in the month of May on the shoots of the previous year. During the month of June and first part of July the larvæ feed on the inner bark, and the shoots turn yellowish and brownish and soon die down to the base of

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

Price, 75c for 5 (of one variety); $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. (Immediate delivery).

Alfred Colomb. Carmine.
Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; very fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
FRAU KARL DRUSCHKI. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose-pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale-flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

STANDARD OR TREE ROSES

(Grafted on Rosa Canina or Rugosa Stock.)

Large, well-grown, selected plants in the best and most serviceable varieties 35c each, $3.25 for 10, $25.00 per 100.

ENGLISH MOSS ROSES

Assorted white, pink and red. Large dormant plants, from open ground. 10c each, 85c for 5, $12.00 per 100.

CRIMSON RAMBLER

Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink, holding a long time without fading. $1.25 for 10, $10.00 per 100.

PHILADELPHIA RAMBLER

Extra fine, American-grown stock.

	10	100
3 to 4 feet	$1.75	$15.00
4 to 5 feet	2.00	18.00
5 to 6 feet	2.25	20.00

WEDDING BELLS

A seedling of the Crimson Rambler. The most floriferous Rose yet produced. The color is white with the upper half of the petals soft pink. Fine for forcing. Perfectly hardy. Extra strong, 3-year, field-grown flowering plants, 4 to 5 feet, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY

A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 ft., $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; extra strong, 6 to 7 ft., $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

MARECHAL NIEL

Color, bright, rich golden yellow. Field-grown, 15c each, 65c for 5, $12.00 per 100.

GLOIRE DE DIJON

Color, buff, orange center, very sweet-scented. Field-grown, 15c each, 65c for 5, $12.00 per 100.

THE BABY RAMBLER

(Mme. Norbert Levavasseur)

Strong field-grown plants, $1.50 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grown as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100.

A New Baby Rambler Rose

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 infestation. If the infested terminals are cut off as soon as detected in June and July and burned, the broods of the weevils will be destroyed. Prof. A. D. Hopkins, entomologist of the United States Department of Agriculture, states that this course, however, may destroy large numbers of valuable parasites. He recommends placing those infested shoots in a tight barrel securely covered with wire fly-screen netting, so that the parasites may escape, while the beetles perish. By the first of October the weevils will be dead, and the netting may then be removed, but the barrel and its contents should be left until the following June to allow the escape of the later developing parasites.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The usual calm before a storm seems to have struck Detroit. While some of the florists have been very busy at times, things in general have been a little more quiet than for some time.

The commission houses report a falling off in orders. Short grades in roses, mostly pink and white, commenced to pile up. Carnations have also been a little too plentiful. Any good stock has found a ready market and the chances are that much of the stock on hand could be moved if it were first-class.

If the number of Christmas shoppers seen at the stores in other lines about town is any criterion, then this Christmas will be a winner. Some of the large stores are already overrun with orders.

Up to the present writing the holly seen about town has been poor, but this was mostly North Carolina holly. Christmas trees appear to be plentiful. So, also, is ground pine.

Various Notes.

Louis Colquitt died at the family residence, 2076 Gratiot avenue, Sunday morning, December 13. Mr. Colquitt was 42 years old at the time of his death and was a son of the late William Colquitt. He had been confined to his bed for the last two months.

B. Schroeter has added a horse to his stables.

H. S.

WASHINGTON.

Business Brisk.

Weather conditions are favorable for the production of flowers and the stock coming in is of excellent quality. Demand is good, all the retailers having a heavy run of social work, making good the prophecies that this will be our banner season.

J. H. Small & Sons had the big decoration at the New Willard last week for the annual dinner of the Gridiron Club.

George Cooke says he has all that he can do. He was rushed all last week with dinners and debutante teas and also had the large decoration for the Boardman reception in honor of President-elect Taft. For the latter 500 red and white carnations, with Farleyense, were used on the tables, American Beauties being used through the house. All the leading retailers had a share of the work for the funeral of Mrs. C. S. B. Fish. Cooke had the family order.

Mr. Marche opened his new store at the corner of Fourteenth and H streets December 14. He has an especially fine ice-box, built with a winding staircase on one side, with his office on top. He has as assistants James Meikeljohn, from the Knickerbocker hotel store, New York, and C. Louis Roy, formerly with J. Fuller, Leominster, Mass. His new wagon, in black and gold, looks quite nifty.

A look in at Center market shows everybody there at work on immortelle, box wreaths and other Christmas designs.

F. H. Kramer has an extra force adding to an already large stock of Christmas goods.

J. Henry Small, after an absence of six months, is back in the store feeling fine.

One of the most elaborate decorations of last week was for the annual dinner of the Order of Carabao at Rauscher's, where the Gude Bros. Co. decorated the tables set in the midst of the Philippine jungle.

New Department—Rooted Cuttings

So many customers and other growers have asked us to supply Young Stock (rooted cuttings and 2½-inch plants), that we have decided to add this department as a regular line of our business. We shall handle only such Young Stock as we know to be first-class in every respect—from growers we know to produce and ship nothing but the best. At the same time, our outlet is so large we can make quick sale for all growers who have first-class Young Stock of desirable varieties.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The annual meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was held Tuesday evening, December 8. President Allan was in the chair and a large attendance of members present. Mr. Allan, to whom much of the prosperity enjoyed by the society during the last year is due, declined reëlection. Mr. Coughlin, who also made a most acceptable recording secretary, declined reëlection, on account of illness.

The result of the election is as follows: President, James Robertson; first vice-president, Samuel Speers; second vice-president, Wm. G. Postings; recording secretary, P. F. Reynolds; financial secretary, A. S. Meikle; treasurer, A. K. McMahon; sergeant-at-arms, W. F. Smith. Executive committee, John T. Allan, James Boyd, Bruce Butterton, W. S. Sisson, A. MacLellan, Stewart Ritchie, John P. Hammond, W. J. Matson, Wm. F. Smith, and the officers, ex-officio.

The election of James Robertson to the office of president has given great satisfaction to the members, without exception. Mr. Robertson has steadfastly labored to further the interests of the society and, now that he is at its head, his endeavors in the same direction cannot fail to be in evidence.

The report of the financial secretary showed the society to be in a good financial condition.

Thomas Galvin was awarded a certificate of merit for carnation Wm. H. Taft.

J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., was also awarded a certificate of merit, for the new white carnation, Georgia.

Mr. Alois Frey's New Anemones and Single Chrysanthemums

It affords us pleasure to announce that we have arranged with Mr. Frey to disseminate his new SINGLE and ANEMONE CHRYSANTHEMUMS. These varieties created a sensation at the National Flower Show, and were awarded TWO FIRST, ONE SECOND PRIZE, and $50.00 SILVER CUP. They were also recipients of many complimentary remarks made by amateurs and experts alike. These two types are coming more and more into favor each year and we feel confident that these collections are a great improvement over those now in commerce. Owing to the limited stock, they will not be delivered until April 1st.

AMEMONES

O-346—Mrs. Jacob Wellauer. Fine lilac, very late.
O-370—Lida Thomas. Small yellow, late.
O-715—Gertrude Wilson. Deep yellow, long stem.
O-352—Miss Katherine Simmons. Soft pink, yellow center, quilled.
O-357—Mrs. E. F. Swift. Pale lavender. First to bloom. Won prize.
O-360—Beatrice Asmus. Pure white. One of the best.
O-361—Mrs. August Knab. Creamy white; honeycombed center.
O-711—Miss Ida Kroeschell. Light yellow; loose, large center.
O-706—Ada Sweet. Silvery pink. Fine for pots.
O-553—Hans Griesser. Pink, center tinted yellow and bronze.

SINGLES

O-544—Miss Dorothy Deneen. Silver-pink.
O-467—Miss Ella Uihlein. Pink.
O-750—Bishop Henninghaus. Brown-red. Much admired.
O-832—Florence Ware. Deep pink; rich yellow center.
O-850—Mrs. Alice B. Huston. Daybreak pink; medium in size. Very fine.
O-852 Miss Venita Johnson. Pink; light center. Good bloomer.
O-418—Lady Lu. Purest white. Best.
O-425—Minnesota. Good blood-red.
O-453—Mrs. J. A. Peterson. White; medium size.
O-456—Mrs. T. Eward Wilder. Large, daybreak pink; petals quilled.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good for the last two weeks, with enough stock to go around. There has been a good supply of roses and carnations, with quality up to the standard. Paper Whites, Romans and callas are now added to the list of cut stock.

The stores are taking on their Christmas garb of decorating material, etc. Azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens, primroses and other Christmas plants are looking fine and there will be a good supply in the market, which no doubt will help out the store men in good shape.

Several of the large dry goods and clothing houses have put up elaborate decorations, which used a big lot of holly and festooning. There have been a number of weddings lately that have made quite a demand for decorative material. Mums are getting decidedly scarce and there will be only a few left for Christmas.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club is contemplating another dance in the near future, when they hope to outdo the last one.

Mrs. E. M. Krauss is able to be at her post again, but is still far from well. She reports business as improving.

E. Metzmaier is cutting some fine carnations at this time and looks for a heavy Christmas trade.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has a fine block of Lorraine begonias which are just right for Christmas trade.

Robert Schenck closed out his business December 1 and is at present undecided as to what he will do.

Mr. Gibson, lately with the Livingston Seed Co., has gone back to Philadelphia.

The Livingston Seed Co. has had several special sales on carnations at 35 cents per dozen.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports business as good. J. M.

BATAVIA, ILL.—The Batavia Greenhouse Co. has incorporated, with $8,000 authorized capital stock. The incorporators are Henry Wenberg, Charles Johnson and Selma Wenberg.

Trade Conditions.

All the stores have received their holiday stock of potted plants, ferns, etc., and the moderate weather has already given the dealers an opportunity to move many orders. Prices range well and buying is active. In cut flowers, carnations and roses, with narcissi, hold the sway. A few chrysanthemums straggle in and occasionally lilies make their appearance. Violets from local beds have fallen to less than half the normal cut, owing to the dark, damp days that have been experienced during the last fortnight.

Various Notes.

Representatives of Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, and Reed & Keller, of New York, were in the city last week, calling upon the trade.

John F. Wood has opened his new store at 167 Westminster street. It is one of the best locations in the city and Mr. Wood has had the interior attractively arranged.

A. Holscher is bringing in some good violets, although rather short in crop.

The Keller Co. is arranging to open its new store, at 220 Weybosset street, the first of the week.

O'Connor's windows, filled with poinsettias and English primroses, were one of the show attractions of Westminster street last week.

The monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club will be held Monday evening, December 21, at which time plans and arrangements will be discussed for the annual banquet.

J. F. Schellinger & Son, of Riverside, are cutting some excellent carnations.

Charles H. Hunt, on Burnside street, has had a big run during the last two weeks on small potted rubbers. Strong, vigorous plants found ready sale.

The monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society was held on Wednesday evening, December 16.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

LENOX, MASS.

The annual meeting of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held Saturday, December 5, and was largely attended, President Jack occupying the chair. Letters were read from several of the judges at the recent exhibition, congratulating the members on the magnificent display and questioning if the same could be duplicated out of Lenox.

The treasurer and secretary read their annual reports, which proved the society to be in a prosperous condition, both financially and otherwise.

The following were elected officers for the ensuing term: President, Allan Jenkins; vice-president, Ernest Marsh; treasurer, F. Herremans; secretary, Geo. H. Instone.

Before leaving the chair, President Jack thanked the members for their loyal support during his term. He stated that, although out of office, his interest in the society would not diminish, and he trusted that the same good feeling would always exist among the members. He also dwelt at length upon the work of the society as done to further the interests of horticulture and the high esteem in which the society was held, which every member might be justly proud of.

The newly elected president, A. Jenkins, has lately been appointed superintendent on the S. P. Shotter estate, Lenox.

E. J. Norman, Erskine Park, was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for some exceptionally fine Flamingo carnations, the color being especially good.

EVERETT, MASS.

Two checks, purporting to be drawn upon the Winthrop National bank of Boston, and bearing the forged signature of Mayor Charles Bruce, of Everett, were foisted upon Clifford Tilton, December 8. Late in the afternoon an elderly, well-dressed man entered Tilton's shop and ordered a funeral piece which cost $9. The purchaser said that he had no ready money upon his person, but produced one of these checks, made out to Daniel Clark for $27. This Tilton cashed and gave "Daniel Clark" back his $18. Soon after the same man returned and ordered another piece, for which he presented the other check, for $21.40 By this ruse he received in change $6.40. After the stranger had left the florist called up the mayor to make sure of the checks and found them to be bogus.

The new crested Scottii Fern Nephrolepis Scholzeli

This crested sport of Scottii will hold the same position to all the crested forms of Nephrolepis that Scottii now holds to the Boston. It is entirely distinct from all others and will become even more popular than its parent, with which it is identical in every way except that the pinnæ are subdivided, giving it a beautiful crested appearance.

NEPHROLEPIS SCHOLZELI

We have shown the plant at the Exhibitions noted below and have been awarded the following honors:

SHAW GOLD MEDAL. St. Louis Horticultural Society, November 3rd, 1908. For "Best plant, of decided merit for cultivation, not previously an article of North American commerce."

SILVER MEDAL. Offered by the Society of American Florists, through the St. Louis Horticultural Society, November 3rd, 1908, for "The most meritorious plant, or flower of American origin." Certificate of Merit, of the Horticultural Society of St. Louis, November 3rd, 1908.

SILVER MEDAL. Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Philadelphia, November 3rd, 1908, for the best new plant.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With mums practically at an end for this season, shipping trade last week was decidedly better, but the local trade, from the wholesalers' standpoint, is still unsatisfactory. The little dabs of mums grown by retailers in and about this city have a depressing effect on both shipping and local trade as long as they last; once gone, the market for other cut flowers becomes more active. Most stock cleaned up well last week, with the exception of stevia, which was in excess of the demand.

The unusually warm fall hastened on all stock and consequently there is no shortage anticipated for the coming holidays, so the man who does any pickling will be up against it, as usual. It's quality that will count.

Various Notes.

Will Zimmerman is using poinsettias to good advantage in his window decorations.

J. M. Fox had the decoration for the annual charity ball held at the Hippodrome, December 9. It consisted of large quantities of wild smilax and palms, with white bunting for a background.

C. C. Pollworth Co. says that holly and other greens have moved well so far.

Holton & Hunkel reported the arrival of a car of wild smilax December 10 and that the quality is fine.

A fact worth mentioning is that all the wholesale growers of North Milwaukee are in on Enchantress and the quality is worth while talking about.

There will be more pot plants, such as azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias, etc., this Christmas than in previous years.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. is figuring on doing a rushing business in pot plants for the holidays. It has quite an assortment, which are of good quality.

Harry Lutey, of North Milwaukee, of late manager of the Lutey plant, has taken a trip to England. He has not been in the best of health of late. His brother, of Houghton, Mich., has taken charge for the present. E. O.

OGDEN, UTAH.—B. Van der Schuit, on Twenty-eighth street, has just completed a new greenhouse, 29x100, with concrete lower walls and cypress framework.

GERANIUMS

Our stock is the largest and most complete in the country. We have an immense lot ready for shipment from 2-in. pots. We do not send out rooted cuttings. We have good standard sorts at $2.00 per 100, $18.50 per 1000, and up to newer varieties at 50c each. We will send 1000 good plants, 50 each of 20 good varieties, our selection, single and double, for $18.50 cash. A splendid collection to stock up on.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

The indications for Christmas business are good among the local florists. The display windows are beautiful in their holiday attire of poinsettia blooms. Sweet peas, violets and Beauties are coming on finely and carnations could not be better. Holly, southern smilax and ground pine are selling fast for church and store decorations.

Various Notes.

The Erie Elks held their annual Lodge of Sorrow in the Majestic Theater building last Sunday. The floral decorations were artistic and much admired.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallis have moved from Erie to West Park, O.

Miss Frances Burger, who has been absent on a prolonged vacation, is seen again as saleslady in Offerle & Schaal's store.

A. J. Baur is sending out many carnation clips and pliers.

Miss Elizabeth Moran and Miss Anna Schultz are helping Baur's over the Christmas rush.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business last week could be called neither good nor bad. It ran along in a slow sort of fashion, but at the end was what we would call fair. The demand is just about enough to clean out the stock received at a fair price. Prices are not as high as they were this time last year, though the last few days there has been an inclination to bump them up a little. Carnations appear to be doing better than roses, at least so far as the fancy ones are concerned. There are still quite a few mums coming in and there will be plenty to take care of the demand till after the holidays. Double violets are not doing so well, but single ones sell out clean and bring the highest price. Bulbous flowers sell fairly well, with a good demand for lilies of all kinds. Small flowers, such as Baby primroses, wallflowers, snapdragons, etc., sell well and at good prices.

In a week we will be in the midst of Christmas business, but, even though it is so near, it is hard to figure out what kind of business we are going to do this year. From present indications, there will be a good supply of stock and it ought to be of good quality. It looks as if Maids might be scarce and, owing to the heavy demand for red roses, there will hardly be enough of them, as is usually the case. In other lines of stock this market will be well provided and we will be especially strong on carnations. But in view of this, it will not be good policy to wait till the last minute before placing your order. Many thousands of carnations are shipped out of this market every holiday and the out-of-town orders are coming in every day. It is well to get your order in as early as you can; then you will be sure of getting at least a good portion of what you want. As is usual, there will be a good supply of poinsettias, and of the little odds and ends there will be enough to take care of all orders. All in all, we ought to do a good business.

Various Notes.

George & Allan had a narrow escape from losing their entire planting at their greenhouses at Oakley, by freezing. This occurred Monday, December 7. A break in the water main necessitated the city supply of water being turned off, which was done without notifying the above firm. They noticed that the supply of water in their boilers was going down, but before the cause could be discovered and remedied several of the houses had dropped below freezing. In some houses there was a good coating of ice. The rose houses went down to about 38 degrees. The water was turned on in time to save the entire place from freezing, but not in time to prevent a great deal of damage being done; how much, it is as yet impossible to say. It looks as if they would have a good case against the city for damages and they have already put in a claim. Had they been notified that the water was to be turned off, they could have prepared for a supply of water from a different source and thus have saved themselves from any loss.

A regular meeting of the Florists' Society was held in the club room Saturday evening, December 12, but, owing to the absence of both the president and the secretary, not a great deal of business was done. However, the vice-president, C. E. Critchell, presided and Wm. Murphy acted as secretary, and the eight members present indulged in the discussion of various subjects and had a successful meeting.

G. R. Gause, of Richmond, Ind., was a caller.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Have the best in Philadelphia and can fill all orders. Remember that we also are headquarters for this much admired Christmas novelty. For the past five years we have made a careful study of this plant and under our Special Treatment we obtained such results that we are now able to offer to our patrons the Begonia Gloire de Lorraine of a highly improved type, with a rich, rosy color, which will stand well in either heated or cold rooms. They are partly in bloom now and will be in their full glory, in bloom, for Christmas and New Year's, and will keep until February and March. Will stand shipping well. The plants are all nicely staked with three green painted stakes and wrapped in tissue paper when packed for shipment. Shipped either in their original pots or in paper pots, as purchaser desires. Please advise. Prices: 5½-in., bushy, 50c; 6 to 6½-in., very large and bushy, 75c to $1.00 each; 7-in., $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Begonia Rex, 5-in., 25c each. Only one, but best variety.

Begonia Flambeau, good seller, 4-inch pots, 20c each.

Primula Chinensis. Everybody looks for a Chinese Primrose at Christmas. We have a middle bench full of them and in better condition than ever before. In bud and bloom, just right for now and the holidays. John F. Rupp's best Improved Strain. Prices for 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, $2.50 to $3.00 per doz. Primula Obconica, in bloom, 4-in., 15c; (without bloom, 10c; will bloom later); 6-in. pots, full of buds and flowers, 25c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown. Remember, only pot-grown. Can successfully be forced for Easter blooming, nicely branched, 6 to 7-in. pots, 25c, 35c to 50c.

Azalea Indica in Bloom for Christmas.

All our Christmas Azaleas are placed in cold houses as soon as they show color to harden off for shipment, and are in fine condition for Christmas.

Remember we have to select for Christmas forcing the strongest and healthiest plants. Small, weak plants will not force successfully for Christmas. We have Mme. Petrick, which is a new variety and very difficult to obtain in Belgium. Best and earliest of all the pinks and is a free bloomer. Have only large plants, 14, 16, 18 to 20 inches, $1, $1.25, $1.50, $2 to $2.50 each.

Vervaeneana (large variegated double rose), Deutsche Perle (double white), Simon Mardner (large double pink), 75 cents, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Christmas varieties can also be kept for Easter. Azaleas for Easter Forcing. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, Empress of India, Professeur Wolters, Apollo, De Schryveriana, Niobe, Andre alba, Dr. Moore, John Llewelyn, Helene Thelemann, Memoire de L. Van Houtte, Empereur du Bresil, and others, 40c, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00.

Cineraria Hybrida, H. F. Michell's improved strain, 2¼-in. pots, $3.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Cyclamen in bloom and bud, large, 4-in., 25c.

Jerusalem Cherries (Solanum), full of berries, 6-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 40c and 50c. Multiflorum, the best improved variety.

Daisies, yellow and white, 2½-in., $3.00 per 100.

Periwinkle, or Vinca variegata, 4-in., 10c.

Have six houses full of choice Xmas plants. BOSTON, SCOTTII and WHITMANI FERNS to beat the band. RUBBERS, PALMS, etc., at half of the usual price, to make room for Easter stock.

All Goods Must Travel at Purchaser's Risk. Cash With Order, Please.

Please state if you want stock shipped in or out of pots.

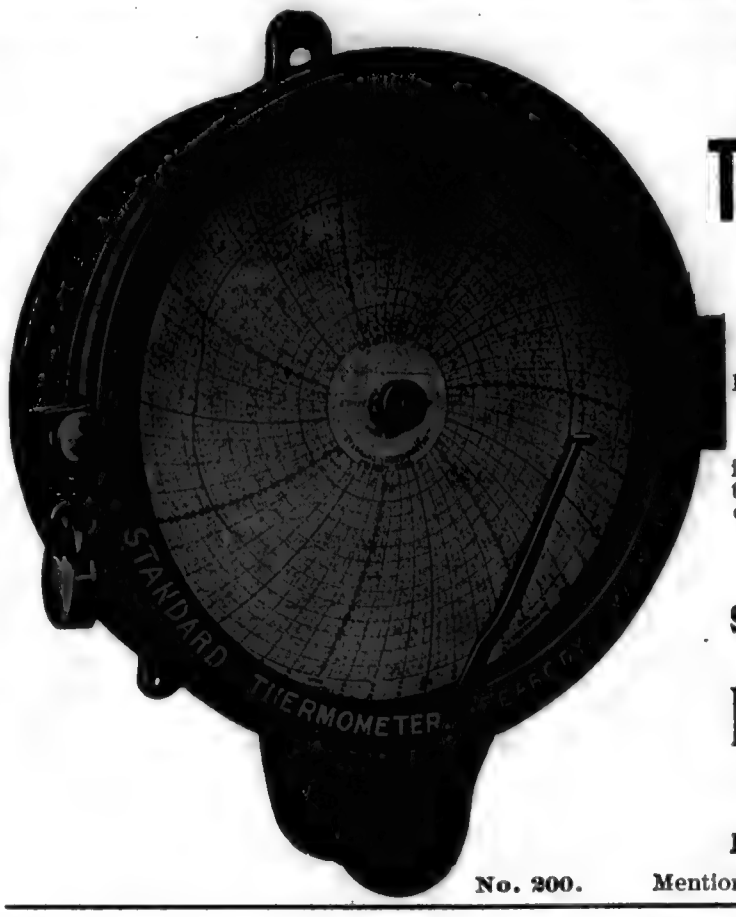
Greenhouse Heating.

COAL THE BEST FUEL.

Do you know of anyone who is using crude petroleum or gasoline as fuel for steam boilers in his greenhouses? If so, how does the price compare with that of coal? What sort of burner is needed and how much compression? Does such fuel give satisfaction? I am located in Michigan. S. J. P.



Unless you have cheap natural gas, I know of no fuel as cheap for greenhouse heating as coal. During the year of the coal famine many attempts were made to utilize crude oil and oil products as a substitute for coal, but as soon as coal was available everybody, so far as I know, returned to coal or gas. Throughout Texas crude oil is used as a substitute for coal in most locomotives and stationary power plants. The oil, a heavy one, is sprayed into the fire-box with steam under considerable pressure, and thus produces a combustible mixture which maintains a high heat at a moderate cost, as the oil is cheap. I do not think, however, that it could be used with low pressure steam or hot water as easily as on high pressure plants and locomotives. L. C. C.

A LEAN-TO WITH A PARTITION.

We are planning to build a lean-to next spring. We intend to put it up against a building which faces south. On the west is a greenhouse fifty feet long, and on the east are two connected houses, each fifty feet long. These three houses run north and south and are connected with the building against which the lean-to will be built. The range is located in Massachusetts.

The lean-to will be 20x28, with a partition running the length of it, so as to make the north room fifteen feet wide and the other five feet wide. We intend to grow cucumbers in the wider room and violets in the other. We will dig into the ground three feet, thus bringing the benches on a level with the top of the ground. We intend to have the partition of glass, or do you think wood would keep the heat out of the violet room better? How much piping will be required, using hot water, to maintain the right temperature in the two rooms, with the outside temperature 10 degrees or more below zero? Would it be better to have the flow overhead and the returns under the benches?

The boilers are in the basement of the building against which the lean-to will be constructed, and will be not more than eight or ten feet from the lean-to.

If we build the lean-to, the house at the west end of it will be used for carnations and the house at the east end of it will be used for Easter lilies and miscellaneous plants. The house that is farthest east will be used as a cold house, with a temperature of about 40 degrees at night. Thus the plants requiring most heat would be nearest to the boiler. Do you think it would be too warm for violets in such a place? E. L. J.

I should use a glass partition between the two parts of the house, if it is desirable to divide it in this fashion. I am at a loss to know just how well it will work, but see no reason why it should not figure out all right. I should use 2-inch pipe and pipe each room separately, placing two 2-inch pipes fed by a 2-inch flow in the narrow part, and seven 2-inch pipes fed by a 2-inch flow in the wider portion. CAPITOL BOILERS

Consider the Facts

The liability of accident to boiler is a serious contingency with the florist. The Divided Section in Capitol Boilers means that this contingency can be taken care of promptly, and repairs made in short order—in fact, so quickly that there is no danger of injury in the greenhouse, even in zero weather.

Again, Capitol Boilers will take any kind of fuel, and by reason of construction, giving the utmost limit in prime heating surface, there is no fuel waste, every heat unit counting.

Again, Capitol Boilers require very little attention. Here is safety with economy.

Herbert S. Nase, Sellersville, Pa., writes: "The Capitol Boiler has given me entire satisfaction; so much so that I purchased one more today for heating my greenhouse No. 2."

Call or correspond with any of our Branches or Sales Agencies and they will furnish you with the testimony of hundreds of satisfied florists who are using Capitol Boilers and speak from experience. It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler.

nected with it, one of them thirty-five horse-power and the other forty-five horse-power, and the larger one seems to get the greater part of the draught. The boilers are of the return tubular type.

W. H. M.

It is not customary to partition a smokestack into flues, but in the construction of house chimneys this is a common practice. From what you say of the size of your boiler and the size of the stack, I fear the stack is too small for both boilers. The forty-five horse-power boiler should have at least a 24-inch stack, and the thirty-five horse-power boiler should have about a 22-inch stack. It may be desirable to put an iron stack on one of these boilers, in addition to the brick chimney.

L. C. C.

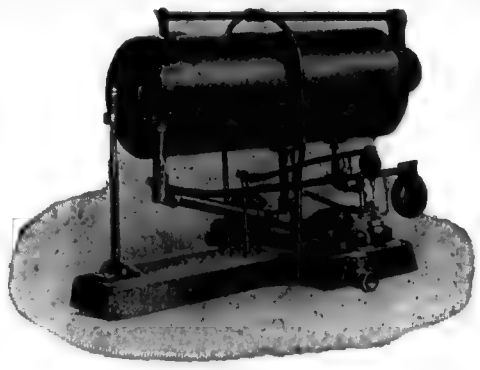
THREE CONNECTED HOUSES.

We are erecting a range of three greenhouses, each 33x110, connected and running north and south. We are using 18-foot rafter bars. There are glass gables and two feet of glass in the sides. We intend to use the houses for growing carnations and a general line of bedding plants, and we wish to heat to 56 degrees in zero weather, using steam. How many runs of 1¼-inch pipe will be required? We will have five rows of benches and would like runs under each bench. The boiler room will be at the southwest corner of the greenhouses, with a potting shed 16x99 feet. We should like all pipes connected with a cut-off, so that any pipe can be used as desired.

Can these pipes be fed by a 4-inch pipe running across the north end and returning to the boiler? If so, do the 1¼-inch pipes returning to the 4-inch pipe require to be reduced to a ¾-inch pipe to keep it from pounding? Where should the air valves be placed?

A. J. B.

There is nothing to indicate the location of this plant except "zero." My plan for piping this plant would be to carry a 4-inch pipe from the boiler to the center of the first house, carrying the pipe nearly as high as the comb of the house; here take off a 2-inch flow to run under the ridge of the house to the far end and return by fifteen 1¼-inch pipes under the benches. From the center of the west house continue the main flow-pipe in the potting shed by the use of 3-inch pipe to the comb of the middle house, and take off a 2-inch flow for it, to be carried to the far end and return by twelve 1¼-inch pipes. From the comb of the middle house carry a 2-inch line to the comb of the last house and continue it to the far end of the house, to feed fifteen 1¼-inch returns. The range will thus be provided with an independent flow for each section and fifteen, twelve and fifteen returns, respectively, or forty-two 1¼-inch returns in all. These returns can all be emptied into a 2-inch main return, and as many as desired may be valved to provide a range of temperature for the control of the plant.



L. C. C.

The Market.

Another satisfactory week has passed. The first part of the week saw a slight scarcity in general stock, which was relieved somewhat towards the latter part. The weather is all one could desire; it is bringing stock out in fine shape, and with these conditions the prospects for Christmas are good. In reviewing the November business, it is safe to assert that trade throughout the month exceeded by far that of previous seasons. Social affairs were numerous and of exceedingly good proportions. Funeral work was plentiful and shippers report a greatly increased business. An occasional shortage in some lines was noticed, but generally the supply was well up to the demands.

Carnations are selling well. The quality is first-class and the supply fully up to the demands. Some extra fine Enchantress are to be seen. White Perfection seems to have made a hit with a number of the growers. Violets are good and the demands are brisk. Mostly singles are grown here.

Roses are still in large supply. Bride, Maid and Golden Gate are most plentiful. Of Richmond and Killarney there are enough to go around. American Beauties are not overplentiful. Sweet peas are arriving in large quantities and meet a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Richard Vincent, Jr., gave a talk on what he saw while traveling in Europe at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club Monday night, December 14.

I. H. Moss, of Govanstown, has some of the finest carnations to be seen in Maryland and is cutting one of the heaviest crops he has ever had.

John Cook had one of the finest window decorations on Charles street last week, composed of My Maryland and his new seedling red rose.

Prof. P. N. Novik, a teacher in the Maryland Agricultural College, was killed on December 9, while walking on the railroad track, on his way from Washington. Prof. Novik was a native of Norway and had been an instructor in horticulture at the college for three years. He was unmarried and was 40 years old. Q.

The Market.

Business has been good. There was a good call for funeral work last week and some good work was turned out. Much stock is shipped to the small neighboring towns. The quality is good.

All the florists are busy preparing for Christmas and the holidays. It seems as if stock of all kinds will be plentiful. Holly is coming in and the quality is good. Some good Beauties are coming in at present. The demand for them is good. Other roses are plentiful and clean up fairly well. Mums are all cleaned out. Carnations are in good supply and demand. Callas, Harrisii and other bulbous stock are coming in. Violets do a little better. Some good sweet peas and stevia help to fill out in funeral work.

Green goods are plentiful. The favorable weather we have had here this fall has cut down coal bills considerably.

There will be some good azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias, primulas and other blooming plants for Christmas this year. Some of the florists are busy making holly wreaths.

Various Notes.

S. S. Kelley grows a general line of stock and has the place in good condition.

Anderson & White have been busy with funeral and decorative work.

J. A. Keller contemplates building a large house for carnations next summer. The firm was busy with funeral work last week. Mr. Keller's business seems to be increasing rapidly of late.

Joe Leclere was a visitor last week. He says everything is dull in Versailles at present.

Honaker's had a good window of Beauties last week at the store. It is reported that they have a new rose grower, from Chicago.

The new greenhouse at the State University is nearly completed. This is an adjunct to the botany department and will greatly facilitate its experimental work.

Lucien Leclere has booked several orders for flower beds to be planted the coming spring. BLUE GRASS.

What Our Dip Prime Means to your Materials

It means thoroughness.

An absolute protecting prime.

Go into any other factory where the priming is done by hand, and you will find boys doing it. Boys spreading it on thick and thin, and every once in a while spots are skipped altogether.

Our Dip Prime gets at and soaks into every inch of the wood—ends and all. Soaks up three times more oil than if done by hand.

Then we use only a pure oxide of iron and a special tested linseed oil.

It pays to have us prime for you, for on that prime coat depends, in a great measure, the lasting qualities of the next coats.

Send for our paint booklet—it is full of just this kind of paint sense.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The much looked for shortage in cut flowers seems to be close at hand, which no doubt means an advance in prices at once. Carnations are moving better than heretofore, with indications of better prices. Roses have improved greatly in quality. Beauties are still coming in poorly. There are quantities of good lilies, valley, stevias, Romans, Paper Whites and callas, all of which are selling more readily than they have been.

A Visit to Painesville.

A jaunt to Painesville was greatly enjoyed by a party of Cleveland boys December 11, visiting the different places in that vicinity. They called first on the Storrs & Harrison Co., where they were taken in hand by the ever agreeable Ed George, who showed the party around. Quantities of good stock were in readiness for Christmas, among which was a fine lot of Lorraine begonias, just right for the holidays. There were also some good Jerusalem cherries, peppers, and an exceptionally fine lot of araucarias. A bench of ficus was in the best of shape, as well as many houses of young palms, which seemed to be in the most healthy condition. Mr. George then conducted the party to one of their cold houses for nursery stock, and the extent of such stock carried here goes to show what an enormous quantity of trees, shrubs, etc., is disposed of each year by this firm. The packing department is an ever busy place, as a great part of their business consists of mail orders.

At C. Merkel & Son's place there are some excellent Christmas plants, among which were some good azaleas and potted ferns. The Lorraine begonias grown at this place are among the best ever seen in this market.

Carl Hagenburger has a fine lot of stevia that is just ready for the holidays and also great quantities of Boston ferns that will be about right for spring trade. A bench of Boston Market seedlings shows prospects of some good results.

Various Notes.

Smith & Fetters were unusually busy last week, having had a large dinner, a wedding and a funeral on the same day, which consumed quantities of first-class stock.

F. W. Griffin has been showing some nice windows of novelties for Christmas.

The quality of violets received from the east is of the best, but the demand has been rather slow. B.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

Not Luck or "Happen So" has been responsible for the remarkable growth of our business and given us so large a number of satisfied customers. It is not the result of getting promiscuous orders here, there, anywhere, anyhow — all profit or no profit at all—it is clearly due to the high quality of our material and the "square deal." Please bear in mind that of the forty years we have been in this business every one has seen an increase of orders. The manufacture of greenhouse material is our whole business—not a side line. We print this in the hope that you will inquire further. Our catalogue will be sent if you are interested.

is the best guide any florist can have as to what is best and cheapest :: :: ::

Why are over 50 miles of the "Garland Iron Gutter" doing service in the leading greenhouse establishments today?

Because its introduction opened up a new era in greenhouse building, and our method is today being generally used by all greenhouse builders.

Write us today, asking us for our illustrated catalogue describing our various makes of gutters, posts, angle iron purlin, etc. Also for our pamphlet entitled "Modern Bench Construction," illustrating our method of making concrete benches.

We also make a truss formation, to do away with purlin posts.

Get our prices on grate bars before ordering elsewhere: also steel and cast iron pipe and fittings. In fact, everything for the greenhouse, with the exception of mill work.

All inquiries will be cheerfully answered.

51 Wabash Ave., Chicago

Dec. 14th, 1908.

Mr. Geo. M. Garland,
Des Plaines, Ill.

Dear Sir:-

Yours of recent date to hand. I am pleased to advise you that I have in use 24,000 feet of your Iron Gutter. Part of it has been up for eight years and up to date I have not spent One Dollar for repairs. All of the gutter is in first class condition at this time. While the original cost is somewhat greater than that of a wooden gutter I consider your Iron Gutter cheaper in the long run.

Yours very truly,
Peter Reinberg

AS A CHRISTMAS RED
It Has No Equal :: ::

The best Red Carnation now grown. Read what was said about it at the National Flower Show:
"FIRST PRIZE WINNER as the Best Red." "Head and shoulders above all others." "In a class by itself."

Comes in full crop for Christmas and remains steady for the balance of the season. We have 50,000 plants now benched to grow especially for early cuttings. Ready to distribute January 1, 1909, by the originators. We invite the trade to visit us and see it growing. Prices:

A POTTERY CHRISTMAS.

We have for some years been hearing about "plant" holidays, but this is a pottery Christmas. Baskets and hampers have been so universally used in the last few years that the leading retailers have been looking about for something to give variety and novelty. They have found what they were after in the many lines of fine pottery which have been offered by the florists' supply houses and by the high-class pottery works.

Of course, a great many hampers and baskets have been sold, but the tendency has been toward pottery and some of the leading stores have shown not only more of this class of ware than ever before, but for the Christmas trade put in stocks of it which a year or two ago would have been thought wholly unwarranted by the possible demand. The pottery is of infinite variety and of quality in keeping with the character of the stores—there is nothing too good for the high-class retail trade.

There is just one feature about the sale of pottery in flower stores which is not pleasing; pottery in the majority of cases calls for small and not costly plants. But it has the great advantage that attractive combinations of lasting character can be sold at moderate prices. This assures the customers' satisfaction and a large volume of business.

CHRISTMAS YEARS AGO.

[Reminiscences of B. Schroeter, related before the Detroit Florists' Club December 16, 1908.]

My Christmas remembrance dates back as far as the year 1873—a long time, thirty-five years.

Since then the florists' business has had several evolutions. The largest commercial greenhouse establishment in Detroit in my early days was that of Hubbard & Davis, on the corner of Twenty-fourth street and Fort street west, where the plant of Mr. Taplin now stands. Mr. Taplin was manager for Hubbard & Davis at that time.

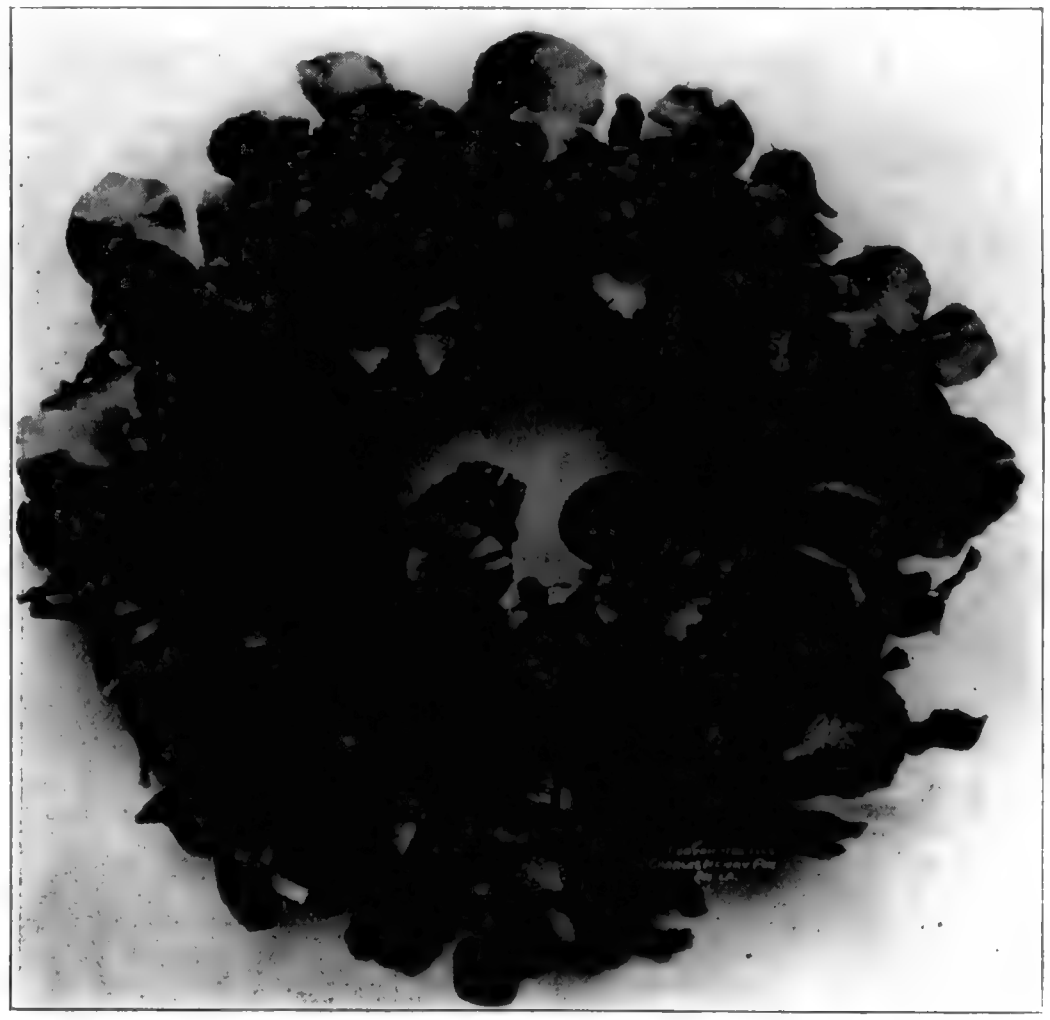
New Year's the Day.

In those days New Year's business was ahead of Christmas, but as time wore on Christmas began to forge ahead until the two days were about even. New Year's day was the great day for calling, and, of course, the more well-to-do people sent many flowers, or took them with them on their calls. I say many flowers were used. We considered it many in those days, for flowers were then counted by the twos and threes and not by the dozen or hundred. It was not long before the calling became a nuisance to about everyone but the florists and soon the fad died out. This ended the New Year's day business and Christmas became the banner day.

Stock Available.

The few flowers at our disposal at that time were poinsettias, double primroses, camellias, bouvardia, Roman hyacinths and a few roses, such as Marechal Niel, Lamarque and Gloire de Dijon, all running roses grown on the rafters. Few carnations were to be had. In white we had only De Graw. The only pink was one known as La Purite. Its shade was similar to that of Lawson, but of course the flower was much smaller. There were also fuchsias, heliotropes, abutilon, callas; in fact, anything that had any resemblance to a flower was carefully guarded, or, speaking in twentieth century language, it was pickled until the holidays. The term cut flowers was hardly known in those days, few loose flowers being sold; the long stems of today were not available.

Making Up Baskets.



I used to make up quite a few baskets, but not as they are made up now. The baskets themselves were made of wire and then painted white. The ordinary Swiss moss baskets, such as are still in use in small sizes, were also obtainable in large sizes. Sheet moss, which we ourselves gathered in the woods, was placed in the basket and for a foundation or background the whole plants of lycopodium, which we grew under the benches in the greenhouses, were used. The flowers all had to be wired and the wire stuck into the moss. Toothpicks were not known for florists' use in those days. The baskets looked about all alike. In the center a poinsettia flower was stuck and around this were several rows of some small flower, like double primroses, and to set off the whole and add a touch of beauty a camellia was stuck right in the center of the poinsettia. Perhaps you will not believe it, but some of these baskets brought as high as $6 to $8. No ribbon was used in any of our work.

Green and Plants.

Green was about as scarce as flowers. We never thought of using the wild ferns, of which so many millions are used now. Neither did we have much smilax. The most popular green was tradescantia, wandering Jew. Rose geranium leaves, rose leaves, or anything green we could find in the greenhouse, were used.

Christmas green was unheard of thirty-five years ago. The first ground pine I remember on sale in our city was shown by a grocer named House, several years later than the period I am speaking about. Holly and mistletoe came in still later.

There was hardly any sale for plants. In blooming plants we had only primroses. Poinsettias, heliotropes, etc., were not grown in pots. Palms had not been heard of and the few ferns sold were Pteris tremula.

Supplies and Delivery.

The few loose flowers sold were wrapped in manila paper bearing the name of the florist, providing a ream of this paper was bought at one time. If less than a ream was purchased we had to pay extra for printing, and such extravagance we could not stand. The next step was the shoe box, for which we sometimes paid a small sum to some shoe dealer.

The delivery question did not worry me as much in the early days as it sometimes does now, although we had no covered wagons for delivering. The first covered or top wagon that I can remember being used in the florists' business was a wagon owned by Mr. Tabor, whose place our friend, J. F. Sullivan, rented in later years. This wagon, I think, Mr. Sullivan has told me he still has in use.

The first florists' establishments included a few low houses, a barn and a potting shed, at one end of which was a small part reserved for office purposes. There were no flower stores in the heart of the city, as now.

Some years later William Gladewitz opened a store under the old Russell House, on the Cadillac Square side. This store was later bought by John Breitmeyer, who, in the course of time, moved to Bates street.

All the holiday business done in the early seventies, by all the florists combined, would probably not amount to more than that done by one of the smaller florists nowadays.

THE BRUNS STORE.

One of those itinerant photographers, who go about the country taking pictures in the hope that someone will buy when they see the prints, not long since poked his camera in at the rear door at the store of H. N. Bruns, Chicago, and pressed the button. The result is shown in the accompanying illustration. The snapshotter caught Mr. Bruns in one of his few idle moments, but it was inevitable that there should be a pot of valley at his right hand and it was equally characteristic that on the other side of the store the assistants should be just completing a wreath of the same flower, while on the display case at their backs is shown the diploma for valley awarded to Mr. Bruns at the World's Fair flower show at St. Louis, where he also won a medal.

One of the interesting features of the illustration is the showing made of jardinieres, fern dishes, grass-growing heads, etc. One side of the store carries several shelves on which stock of these is carried and Mr. Bruns finds this line to be not only useful but salable and profitable. There is no reason why a retail florist should confine himself to cut flowers. While the custom so common in many European countries of combining flowers and fruit in one store is not thought permissible in good stores here, there is no reason why the retail florist should not add to his profits through the sale of accessories, such as jardinieres, pedestals, fern dishes, window-boxes, wall pockets and other similar articles. Goldfish also, with aquarium supplies, furnish a suitable and profitable side line.

A NEW PORTLAND STORE.

Clarke Bros., at Portland, Ore., recently have completed the fitting up of a retail store which in its appointment will compare favorably with anything to be found on the Pacific coast, and with nearly all the best stores in the eastern states. The accompanying illustrations show the store as it appeared Thanksgiving day. One picture shows the interior from the rear, the other the show window from the street. The firm spared no expense for fixtures and other fittings and says that the money spent for a handsome and attractive store has already proved to be a good investment, for sales have been increasing at a lively rate ever since the store was completed.

Clarke Bros. have a large range of glass just outside of Portland and another plant in California, with a second retail store recently opened at Oakland, Cal.

Houghton, Mich.—The Lakeside Floral Co. has increased its capitalization from $25,000 to $40,000, the increase of $15,000 being preferred stock.

THE LONDON MARKET.

The Covent Garden market, in London, has been in about the same condition as American markets this fall—worse if anything. As late as the first week in December A. Hemsley wrote: "Trade has been quiet—unusually dull. One grower of some years' experience remarked that he had never before experienced such a bad trade. It is impossible to give accurate prices, for there is no amalgamation among the salesmen, some of whom waste their flowers rather than sell them at unremunerative prices, whilst others clear their stocks at almost any price."

It is interesting to note that Richmond was making better prices than any other rose, the best blooms making up to 7 shillings ($1.68) per dozen in the market. Liberty is worth just a little less. Maid and Bride have made up to 3 shillings, or just about the price that has prevailed in the largest American markets. The best blooms of American carnations bring more at Covent Garden than in this country, say from 4 cents to 7 cents December 1 for fancy stock. The flower over there is not the leading item it is here, but the production is rapidly increasing. Chrysanthemums, because of the conditions under which they are produced, always sell cheaper in London than in large American cities—even cheaper than they sold this off year. December 1 special fancy mums did not fetch over 8 shillings ($1.92) per dozen at Covent Garden, while medium sized flowers sold at 2 to 3 shillings. Cattleyas could be had at $2 to $2.50 a dozen, gardenias at 72 cents to $1.20 a dozen. Long strings of asparagus were worth not over 1 shilling (24 cents) each, smilax 5 shillings ($1.20) per dozen.

LILIUM MULTIFLORUM.

On November 25 I potted Lilium multiflorum in rather moist soil and placed in a cellar, not watering them. The ordinary temperature is 45 degrees to 50 degrees, but in cooler weather it runs down to 35 degrees. Is this temperature too low? Examining them December 5, I found the soil had reached a dry state and some roots were starting. What is the treatment needed now, next and later? What is the lowest temperature they will stand, also the highest, as I will not want them to come in bloom at the same time? What is the earliest date they could likely be flowered? The bulbs were not planted deep, in 4-inch pots, showing the bulbs, intending to shift later into a larger size. B. M. A.

Your treatment so far has been all right, except that it would be better not to let the temperature fall below 42 degrees to 45 degrees. It is an advantage to keep them somewhat on the dry side until the pots are well filled with roots. If kept saturated in the early stages of growth, the roots will nearly all decay, particularly if in as low a temperature as 40 degrees to 45 degrees. When the tops appear I would move the plants into a light, sunny house, kept at about 50 degrees at night. I don't like to grow lilies any cooler than this at any time, except late in the season, when the flowers are expanding and retarding is necessary.

Shift your plants from the 4-inch to 5½-inch or 6-inch pots before the roots become too matted, and water carefully until the roots find their way to the sides of the larger pots. Cover the bulbs and an inch of the flower stem when you repot. In forcing, as high as 65 degrees to 70 degrees at night can be given, but flowers grown under these conditions lack the substance of those produced in a lower temperature. I prefer 60 degrees at night as a maximum. Allow six weeks from the time you can first see and count the buds until flowers will be expanded, in a temperature averaging 60 degrees at night. C. W.

PANSIES FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Would you kindly tell us the right time to sow pansy seeds under glass, to have them in bloom for Memorial day, and also the temperature they should be grown in? A. E. R.

The best pansies for Memorial day are sown the preceding August. If you will purchase seedlings of these from any reliable dealer they will give you better results than those raised now under glass. Seed sown now should be given a night temperature of 50 degrees. Move into a rather lower temperature when the seedlings have made their second leaves. A house kept at 40 to 45 degrees at night will suit the pansies. The best growers, who handle them in big quantities, always sow in the fall, and we would suggest your doing the same another season.

HYDRANGEAS FOR EASTER.

Will you please have someone, well posted in the forcing of Hydrangea Otaksa, answer the following question? How should Hydrangea Otaksa be treated to have them in bloom by Easter? This is my first experience with them. They were gotten from a well known eastern firm and were supposed to be pot grown, but did not have any soil on the roots. They had plenty of dark green foliage and the lower wood seemed to be well ripened. I potted them on arrival, November 7, and kept them in a temperature of 40 to 45 degrees until a week ago, when I moved them to 50 degrees. I kept them well watered at first, but lately I have kept them a little on the dry side. The foliage is all turning yellow and falling off and has a bad appearance generally. Is it natural for them to lose their foliage? The hydrangeas had plenty of roots and seven to twelve crowns and were about seven to ten inches high. H. D. S.

The hydrangeas you received were probably field grown, and if you had treated them differently you might have had good success with them. After potting them, you should have placed them in your coldest house, or in a coldframe. It would have been an advantage to expose them to a little frost, just sufficient to cause the leaves to fall. The plants should then have been kept somewhat dry, but given all possible sun in order to thoroughly ripen the canes.

It is natural for these hydrangeas to lose all their foliage before being forced. We would advise removing your plants to a lower temperature. Keep them rather dry and just clear of freezing. Let them rest here for a while, say until the middle of January, when you may start them in a temperature of 50 degrees. We question if you will get these in for Easter, and unless you are anxious to have some thus early we would advise you to hold them back for Memorial trade. If they had been pot grown, with good balls, they would force far better than the plants you received. C. W.

FOR A SMALL GREENHOUSE.

I have a small greenhouse which I use for starting vegetable plants for summer crops, but have some few common flowers which I started last fall from cuttings. Please let me know what would be the best paying flowers to raise in a house of the following dimensions: Space under glass, 10x24 feet, three feet at eaves, seven and one-half feet to top of ridge, with two-foot center walk, two side benches four feet wide, containing seven inches of soil; height from soil at eaves to glass, five inches; raised beds and heated with a brick flue under one side bench. I can hold the temperature at 60 degrees in the coldest part of the house. I am located in a town of 4,000 population. G. C. H.

A house of the dimensions you name and heated by a flue will have an uncertain temperature and arid atmosphere. Such flowers as roses, carnations, violets or chrysanthemums would be out of the question with a temperature as high as 60 degrees at the cold end of the house. Could you keep it at 40 to 42 degrees at night it would answer well for violets. Under the circumstances I think it would not pay to bother with any of these crops. It would do nicely for bulbous plants, such as tulips and daffodils, or anything not requiring much headroom. If you have a sale for bedding plants, such as geraniums, cannas, coleus, heliotropes, etc., why not confine yourself to these? Remove the soil from the benches to allow more headroom. If you have glass in the sides, to lower the benches may help. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SPECIMEN PLANT MRS. TRANTER.

The plant illustrated was grown by A. Herrington, of Madison, N. J. It carried over 800 flowers and was nine feet ten inches in diameter. I consider it as near perfect as it was possible for a plant to be. The variety is Mrs. J. R. Tranter, which is particularly adapted to such work, being very dwarf and breaking freely after pinching.

It is, of course, possible to have a plant of almost any size by combining several plants in July or August and putting them together into one enormous tub. The plant illustrated was grown from a single stool and is to all intents and purposes a single plant, and something that to the uninitiated is impossible to produce in the space of one year.

Such a plant in the national show at Chicago would have been the sensation of the show, and it is a matter for regret that millionaires are not so public-spirited as some of us smaller fry, or it certainly would have been on exhibition.

Chas. H. Totty.

NONIN WILTING.

Is it characteristic of cut blooms of Jeanne Nonin to wilt in two or three days if placed in a room at 60 degrees? I had some six inches in diameter that two and a half days after cutting were wilted to the size of medium carnations.

O. H. C.

While it is not characteristic of Nonin to wilt so quickly, still cases where it does so are by no means unusual. It is caused by the wood being so hard at the point where the stem is severed from the plant that the water cannot pass up to the flower. Nonin is not alone in this respect, many kinds showing this more or less, depending largely on how they are grown. A plant grown cold and on the dry side will have wood much harder than one more plentifully supplied with water. A plant that has received plenty of nitrogen in the shape of sulphate of ammonia or some such chemical is always more pithy and will take up water more readily than a plant not so fed.

We hear much less about Merza wilting than we used to and I put it down to the fact that more growers use chemicals than did a little while back. O. H. C. should split the stem up several inches and, if there are any joints in the stem, run a knife through the joints and get them below the water line in the jar. This gives the flower every chance and if it still wilts there is little that can be done.

EXHIBITION VARIETIES.

Please let me know what is the largest white chrysanthemum for exhibition, and what color is Chadwick, also Rosiere, Beatrice May and Touset? Are any of them good exhibition varieties? I have been looking over my catalogues, but can not find any descriptions of them.

M. C. J.

The largest one stem white chrysanthemum is Mrs. Norman Davis, with Merza a good second. W. H. Chadwick is a late white flushed with pink. Beatrice May and Touset are early whites and Rosiere an early pink. Beatrice May is the only good exhibition variety, as Chadwick is always too late and Rosiere and Touset too early.

A good lot of varieties to select exhibition kinds from is given in the Review of December 10, some fifty varieties being there described.

TREATMENT OF NERINES.

We have 100 bulbs of nerine, Guernsey lily. Kindly inform us how to treat these to have them in bloom by Easter.

G. A. L.

The natural flowering period for the nerines, or Guernsey lilies, is from the end of September until the early part of November and I doubt the possibility of either retarding or forwarding the blooming time. If your bulbs are still unpotted, I would advise putting three in a 5-inch pot or five in a 6-inch pot of such varieties as Fothergilli major or corusca. Grow these along in a cold greenhouse or any pit from which frost may be excluded. The growth should be completed about the end of May, when water can be gradually withheld, and by the middle of June lay the pots on their sides on a dry, sunny bank, where they are to remain undisturbed until the flower spikes begin to show, usually about October 1, when they may be housed and watered.

These bulbs will only flower freely when the pots are a perfect mat of roots and I doubt if your plants will flower more than sparsely the first season. Were it possible to have nerines in flower for either Christmas or Easter, they would make desirable novelties. Blooming when they do, they are useful, as flowering plants are scarce early in October.

CINDERS FOR CONCRETE.

I have a large pile of cinders and want to build a boiler shed of concrete. Can I use the cinders? How shall I proceed with the work? What proportions of cinders and cement should be used?

R. O. H.

If the cinders are from hard coal, the proportions should be one part of cement to seven of cinders; if from soft coal, one part of cement to five of cinders.

When made from hard coal cinders, the concrete sets quickly and makes a tough, porous wall, which withstands the action of even the hardest winters in your Illinois climate. See that the concrete is thoroughly mixed before putting it in the frames. A thin skin of a finer mixture, in the proportion of one part of cement to five of cinders, applied to the surface of the wall, makes a nice finish.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Zonal Pelargoniums.

The clearing out of considerable flowering stock for the Christmas trade will give some needed additional bench space for the bedding geraniums. It never pays to neglect this best selling and most universally popular of all bedding plants. A little extra space given to each pot now will mean much to the ultimate value of the stock. If still in 2-inch pots, a shift to 3-inch will be timely. Be sure not to use cold soil, that which has been freshly carried in from outdoors. Many failures can be traced to using this. Keep the plants a little dry after the first watering until root action is active, to prevent damping off. Any cuttings carried over in flats should be potted forthwith. If these can have a bench under which hot water pipes run, to give them a little bottom heat, it will be found an advantage.

Old stock plants potted or being grown in benches in a cool house will now have a plentiful supply of cuttings. Put these singly in 2-inch pots. Use sandy loam for compost. Give a little bottom heat and full sun. A night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees will suffice. Under these conditions ninety-five per cent should root. Never water until the soil has well dried out. All that is necessary is to prevent shriveling until the cuttings root.

Show Pelargoniums.

Show pelargoniums lack the persistent flowering qualities of the zonal section, but are so showy that they always meet with a fairly good sale in April and May. Many customers buy them at bedding-out time for piazza use, and if carefully tended they last in flower a long time. A cool house grows these best; nothing over 45 degrees at night is required. Keep the plants pinched for some time yet and pot them along as needed, using a compost of fibrous loam, broken cow manure and sand, to which can be added a dash of fine bone or Thomson's plant manure. Keep a watch over green aphis. These plants are special favorites of this pest and will quickly be smothered with them if not regularly fumigated.

Specimen Plant of Chrysanthemum Mrs. J. R. Tranter.

Cinerarias.

Midwinter is the time when cinerarias make their most rapid growth. The early batch will soon be in bloom and will prove useful for retail trade in January and February. Later plants are ready to go into their blooming pots. Owing to their fast growth, it is now necessary to respace them quite frequently. When so doing, scratch over the surface soil and remove any bad foliage. When well established in their flowering pots, liquid manure can be used freely, for cinerarias are gross feeders. There are some attractive colors in cinerarias and some much the reverse. Some day we may get a hybridizer who will give us scarlet and golden yellow shades. These in the stellata type would be specially valuable. Cinerarias should always be grown cool and do not like a bright house.

Hybrid Roses.

Hybrid roses are not grown by country florists to anything like the extent that they were fifteen to twenty years ago. The reason customarily assigned is that there is no money in them. To some extent this is true, and under existing market conditions it may be inadvisable to grow them except to a limited extent for home trade. There are always, however, some wide-awake retailers who are on the lookout for some of them. There is a freshness about them that is lacking in the regular forcing roses, although their keeping qualities are hardly so good. Plants potted late in the fall and kept in a cold pit, close to freezing, since housing, will now have the canes well hardened and a small batch can be started at any time. To get strong shoots, prune back fairly hard. Cut away weak shoots altogether. Leave four to five buds on the strong canes and two to three on those of more moderate growth. Start cool; 40 to 42 degrees at night is ample until they break. Spray over at least once a day. Any plants carried over summer in pots will, of course, break much stronger than fall potted ones and give better flowers.

Azaleas.

Quite a number of the early azalea plants will have been cleared out for Christmas by this time. It is, of course, much too early to think about starting any for Easter. These must be held in a cold house or pit, just clear of frost. There is always a sale during the winter for a limited number of nicely bloomed azaleas, however, and it will pay to start a few plants each week to fill these demands. Look over those being held back for Easter trade once a week at least. They will not require much water in a cold house, but if once allowed to become dust-dry the flower buds will probably be destroyed.

Lorraine Begonias.

It is just a trifle early to commence the propagation of Lorraine begonias from leaves, but do not sell all your strong, healthy stock, leaving weaklings for working up stock from for another year. Remove the flowers from as many as you want to propagate from and keep them in a light, sunny bench, so that the foliage can become tough. Leaves such as these will not damp off as will the soft, green ones generally used. While the Christmas market for Lorraines is the one most growers depend upon for cleaning out their stock, this fine begonia is really in better condition early in January and nicely flowered plants will sell for a couple of months yet. Do not keep the plants in a warm, moist house when in flower; a carnation temperature will be found better.

Poinsettias.

The poinsettia trade finishes with Christmas; in fact, apart from that holiday there is little call for the brilliant bracts of these flowers. Sufficient plants should be retained to give an ample supply of cuttings for another season. The pots or pans can be turned on their sides under one of the benches. If the plants have been grown on the benches, they can be lifted and closely set in flats of soil and kept dry until a crop of cuttings is wanted. Some growers use the same old stools year after year for culture in beds. We saw some a few days ago with bracts running up to twenty-two inches in diameter, produced on stools which were at least a dozen years old, each plant carrying six to twelve bracts. The old stools were to be thickly packed in dry soil in a shed, we were told, until the time came around to start them again. We doubt, however, if it pays to carry over plants so long. Cuttings are so easily rooted that it would seem more economical to start a fresh stock annually, even for bench culture.

Gardenias.

December and January are critical months for gardenia growers, who are banking on an abundant winter crop. Practically anyone can flower these plants freely in spring if only they have the necessary heat, but some skill is required to have a good midwinter crop when prices rule high. No matter whether grown in pots or benches, watering must be carefully done. If the soil is kept constantly moist, dropping buds and yellowing foliage will result. Our experience has been that if kept a little on the dry side and given a steady night temperature of 65 to 68 degrees, there will be a small loss of buds. When the benches have dried out well, soak thoroughly and do not give any dribblings to keep the top moist between waterings. To keep mealy bug in check, one good syringing a week, if carefully directed through a spray nozzle, will suffice. Injudicious feeding is another cause of buds dropping. To keep foliage green, a little surfacing of soot or watering with soot water is useful, but it is better to avoid the use of chemical and animal fertilizers during the dark months.

Bougainvilleas.

Where the wood on bougainvilleas was well ripened and the plants have been resting for some time in a cool house, these will now be in a good condition for starting. Do not give too warm a house at first; 50 degrees at night, advancing to 60 degrees as growth proceeds, will suffice. Keep the plants sprayed over, but on the dry side at the root until they have broken freely. B. Sanderiana, of dwarf habit, makes a pretty commercial plant and one selling well at Easter, when nicely flowered.

THE LOVERIDGE STORE.

The accompanying illustration shows the interior of the store of C. Loveridge, at Peoria, the second city of Illinois. The picture was made about the middle of August, when no retail store appears at its best, but Mr. Loveridge is doing a nice business. In years gone by his principal work was in outdoor planting, in window-boxes, cemetery-vases and bedding, but for the last two years he has done practically none of this work, and has turned his attention to the retailing of cut flowers and the better class of plants. He dropped growing bedding plants for the reason that the prices at which they have been retailed in Peoria left what he thought to be an inadequate profit. By concentrating his efforts upon the retail cut flower end, he has been able to build up that department and make it satisfactorily profitable.

There is no doubt that competition is the life of trade, but it is a mistake to conduct competition along the lines of price cutting; it would far better be in the matter of good service. Cut prices bring no man a profit.

REFRIGERATION FOR FLORISTS.

W. L. Kroeschell is one of those happy individuals who have the gift of seeing into the future; his dreams often come true. He gives it as his conviction that before many years artificial refrigeration will be employed instead of ice by all large florists, as it already is by hotels, restaurants, etc. It is true that only a few flower stores now have artificial refrigeration, but the Kroeschell Bros. Ice Machine Co., which is owned by the same men owning the Kroeschell Bros. Co., boiler works, receives frequent inquiries from florists, and it is thought the day is not far distant when florists' cooling rooms and display cases will regularly be equipped with artificial refrigeration. Indeed, a few wholesale florists have already installed ice machines, and several retailers use the system where it is a part of the equipment of the building they are located in. The Auditorium Annex, Chicago, operates the Kroeschell refrigerating system and a branch of it cools the ice-box in the Hauswirth flower store. Philip Breitmeyer recently approved the installation of a Kroeschell cooling system in Belle Isle park, Detroit. He already has artificial refrigeration in his office building, operating the retail flower store cool-rooms in connection with it.

Most of the artificial refrigerating plants use ammonia, but the Kroeschell system employs carbonic anhydride in place of the ammonia. It is contended that it is more economical than ammonia, and that the dangers of an ammonia plant are eliminated. The Kroeschell Bros. Co. has just completed installing a twenty-ton plant at Newport, R. I., for the United States government. The plant is required to cool 300 gallons of drinking water per hour to 40 degrees, to keep the storage-room at 22 to 28 degrees and to freeze two and one-half tons of ice a day, these requirements giving some idea of the many uses to which such a system can be put. The Kroeschell Co. states that it recently has been figuring with the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and a number of other florists who have ambitions to possess their own cooling facilities independent of the ice-man. And it is figured to be only a question of time when every large concern in the florists' line will be thus equipped, for it is mighty convenient for the florist to have control of low temperatures.

GLADIOLI FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

When will it be time to plant gladioli to have them in bloom for Decoration day? A. C. E.

The large flowering gladioli of the Gandavensis type will be in time for Memorial day if planted early in February, in a house kept at 48 to 50 degrees at night. The small flowering gladioli of the Colvillei, cardinalis or nanus section should be planted at once in flats and grown in a cold house until March, when they can be moved into a house such as is recommended for the large flowered type. These small varieties can be kept in a cellar for a few weeks, but as they start to grow, soon after planting, should have a light position. C. W.

ANTIRRHINUMS.

Please tell me when I should sow antirrhinums, to have them in bloom for Memorial day? O. H. C.

Get the seed in at once. Sow in flats in a temperature of 60 degrees. When germinated they will do better in somewhat cooler quarters; 50 degrees at night is sufficiently warm. Pot off singly when large enough to handle. This is a much better plan than pricking off in boxes and from these transplanting to the benches. Purchase the tall antirrhinum seed, and you will find separate shades of colors take better than mixtures. C. W.

USEFUL OUTDOOR FLOWERS.

We want to sow some flower seeds outdoors next spring, to be used as small flowers in floral designs. Can you give us the names of the best varieties for that purpose? We always use roses and carnations, but it takes a small flower to give it the finish. S. F. C.

Sweet peas are the best and most persistent flowering of hardy annuals and suitable for design work. Many of the hardy perennials are useful. A few specially valuable ones are: White phloxes of the decussata type, Achillea Ptarmica, the Pearl; Delphinium Chinense, blue and white; several of the spiræas, such as astilboides, compacta, venusta and the new Queen Alexandra; Physostegia Virginica alba.

In sowing sweet peas a good selection would be: White, Dorothy Eckford; lavender, Lady Grisel Hamilton; orange-pink, Miss Willmott; soft pink, Gladys Unwin; blue, Navy Blue; scarlet, King Edward VII. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Plants for Propagation.

While it is early to begin propagating, it is time to decide what varieties are to be continued. During the interval between now and the starting of propagation, the plants which are to furnish the cuttings should be chosen.

The hybridist, in selecting the parents of a new variety, is very exacting in his choice of both the plant which is to bear the seed and that which is to furnish the pollen. Every characteristic is considered—vitality, habit, leaves, distance between joints in stem, rigidity of stem, bloom, etc.

It is not enough to be guided by perfect blooms alone, as at times a small, insignificant runt, or a plant below the standard of excellence and health, will produce a chance bloom or two of high quality.

Keen Perception Needed.

The grower, in selecting cuttings which are to make the plants for his next year's stock, must in a measure possess the keen perception of the hybridist if he is to hold any claim to the title of a skilled propagator, which means that he should not only perpetuate the good qualities of his varieties, but aim to improve them.

The mere act of taking cuttings promiscuously from a lot of plants, and inducing a large percentage to take root, does not entitle a man to be called a skillful propagator, although he may be so considered by those whose interest in the carnation is confined chiefly to the sale of rooted cuttings. Success with carnations depends on vitality. If the plants lack vigor through the ravages of insect pests, thus becoming peculiarly liable to attacks of disease, or if they have been pampered by rich food and too high temperature, it is only courting failure to propagate from such as these. The evil effects of such conditions would, however, be apparent to the most casual observer.

Where Many Fail.

It is in the case of plants which have produced an unusual number of blooms early in the season that many propagators are led astray and fall down. The conclusion is immediately reached that these early producers are the ones to increase in preference to all others, when in reality they are not true representatives of their variety; we would define them as being precocious.

It is unreasonable to suppose, in propagating from plants which during a short period have produced a considerable number of blooms, that the offspring will prove profuse bloomers. We would, however, be safe in assuming that this abnormal yield was due to local conditions or environment rather than to any inherent quality. It might, also, indicate a cropper.

The Ideal Plant.

It is the plant which in the field was conspicuous by its thriftiness and trim appearance, and which, when benched, took hold of the soil readily, but instead of running prematurely into bloom, proceeded to fill the space allotted to it with numerous strong flowering shoots in various stages of development—this, to my mind, is the style of plant from which to propagate, provided, of course, that its bloom passed inspection.

It is true that, among a hundred, there are not many plants of this description to be found, especially in the case of newly acquired varieties, and for this reason I have always advised purchasing in quantities large enough to afford latitude for selection when propagating.

Now, it would be unreasonable to expect to purchase in the market rooted cuttings from such carefully selected plants. Not only would the price be prohibitive, but the supply would be inadequate. We must not expect too much from the dealer in rooted cuttings; he is not responsible for lack of care or the abuse that his goods may receive at the hands of the grower.

There is much to be said concerning this and relative subjects and I shall endeavor to treat them fully during the next four weeks. GEO. S. OSBORN.

SUCCESS WITH CARNATIONS.

[A paper by Edgar McConnell, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., read before the Florists' Club of Scranton, Pa., December 11, 1908.]

Carnations are grown and sold in greater numbers than any other flower, not excepting the rose. Millions of blooms are produced every season and millions of dollars are invested in their culture. The large sized flower now produced and its many beautiful colors, with its good keeping qualities, make it the most popular flower in the market. The ever increasing demand each season for more and better flowers is causing many carnation growers to ask the question, "What is the best way to grow them?" I shall, in answer, try to impart my method of growing, with the success and failures that followed.

At this time of the year, when all carnation growers are propagating new stock or getting ready for that work, it is well to remember that what you do now in selecting cuttings and varieties will result in healthy or sickly plants, and houses that will or will not pay. My way, where possible, is to take cuttings from blooming stems only, and from plants which are nearest the true type of the variety used and which seem to be perfectly healthy. In this way you will improve your plants, for there is no doubt that the cutting reproduces the plant from which it was taken, in so far as inherent health is reproduced.

The Propagating Bench.

The cutting bench is another thing which requires careful attention. A northern exposure is preferred, but any bench with one or two heating pipes underneath, with drainage, will do. Three inches of sharp, clean sand, pounded firmly down and level, will make a good bed in which to insert the cuttings, provided you have applied to the bottom and sides a heavy coat of whitewash. With such a bench, failures are seldom made.

A temperature of about 55 degrees over the bench, and a few degrees warmer underneath, is about right. Water the cuttings freely. Never allow them to wilt. Keep the air fresh and pure, without draughts. With such care, bench fungus is not likely to appear. This bench fungus, in my opinion, is the primary cause of the stem-rot that cuts the plant off at the surface of the ground.

An Experience With Bench Fungus.

I will cite one experience that led me to this opinion. Bench fungus appeared in a portion of my cutting bench. Immediately all cuttings infected, together with a wide margin in the apparently healthy cuttings, were removed. In planting the rooted cuttings, a number of the plants that surrounded the infected spot were boxed by themselves. As soon as they began to grow, stem-rot developed. Late in March or early in April, the boxes, with what live plants remained, were set outside of the houses, subject to such weather as is usual at that time of the year. Stem-rot ceased. At late planting time in the field, they were apparently good, healthy plants. Set in the field, all of them died with that same disease before planting time in the houses. The cuttings from other portions of the bench were healthy plants, free from the rot. This experience, with others of the same nature, leads me to believe that bench fungus is at least the primary, if not the immediate, cause of this peculiar disease. For this and for bench fungus there is no cure and they must be exterminated by propagation from healthy plants and burning all infected stock.

Culture in the Field.

With well hardened stock, plant early in the field and early in the houses. From about July 20 to September 10 all that work should be done. Field culture requires no great skill. Have the ground rich enough to produce a vigorous growth of the young plants. This is necessary, as the early planting in the houses gives the plants only a short time to gather health and strength for the work expected of them in the future.

The way of planting, the distance between plants and other details of the work in the field are left to your own way of doing such work. Shallow cultivation in the row, merely breaking the crust of earth around the stems of the plants, will produce the best results. During drought the frequent use of the cultivator will help the plants to maintain a healthy growth. The topping or cutting back of the plants in the field should be attended to regularly. Never allow the branches to develop buds in the field. Aim to have upright, bushy plants, the best that can be grown.

Housing of the Plants.

To transplant the plants from the field to their permanent quarters in the house requires careful work. In this operation careless workmen are worse than none.

With clean houses and the benches thoroughly whitewashed, the work of soiling the benches may proceed. This soil should be taken from a field which bore a cultivated crop the previous year. Such soil, with an application of from four to six inches of well rotted barnyard manure in early spring, well plowed under and frequently replowed, with a liberal amount of raw bone, medium fine, thoroughly mixed with the soil, has, in my experience, always given good results. With such soil the plants will need no feeding, except a light sprinkling of wood ashes, till January.

In the field lift the plants carefully with a spade. If possible, leave a lump of earth on each plant. This will be a material aid to the plant in recovering from the shock received in lifting.

Shade the houses only in extremely hot sunshine. Plant firmly, the same depth as in the field, with the roots well down in the soil. Water thoroughly the first time, spraying frequently for two or three days, but less as the plants recover.

Treatment in the House.

All draughts of air on the newly-set plants are a positive injury. After they have taken hold of the soil, good ventilation and bright sunshine are an actual necessity for a sturdy growth. Water freely now, when needed. Keep ventilators open day and night. Destroy weeds by light cultivation. When the outside temperature drops to 45 or 40 degrees, artificial heat may be used. After this heat is once used, be sure to maintain your usual night temperature when it is cold enough to do so. From this time on, all water should be applied under, not over the plants, except in syringing for red spider.

Stem-rot and its twin brother, bench-rot, will be more or less busy. Remove and burn all infected plants at once, as all the lime or other so-called remedies applied externally will not cure a disease that is in the blood of the plant. Spot, fairy ring, and softening of the leaves of the plant, caused by damp, putrid atmosphere, can be checked by a light fumigation of sulphur at night and good ventilation in the daytime. For bacteria, so-called, pull out and burn infected plants. Such treatment, as before mentioned, I have given plants in my care for many years, with good results and no serious failures.

Some Brief Rules.

Let me now repeat a few things I consider an actual necessity for successful cultivation of the carnation. First, use ripe cuttings, from healthy plants only. Discard all rooted cuttings that have any signs of disease. All soils used, whether in pot, flat, bench or field, should be fresh; that is, carnations should not have been grown in it for two or three years previous; neither should it be newly plowed sod. Use shallow cultivation in house or field. Take no plants to the house that show a weak or sickly condition. Reset in the house as fast as lifting in the field proceeds. Plant firmly always. A good, friable, well pulverized soil, well enriched, is always right. Cultivate thoroughly always. Plant early in the field for best results. Retain varieties that do best on your soil. Keep an even temperature in your house at night. Keep up with the times in trying out the newer varieties, and success should, and I hope will, crown all in the cultivation of this most popular flower.

THRIPS AND THE MITE.

We are sending you some carnation buds and blooms affected by thrips. Of this we are positive, but we fear that they are also affected by the insect sometimes referred to as the carnation mite. This we believe from the fact that we have found the small, white eggs in many of the buds that have rotted. We are now using hydrocyanic acid gas to kill the thrips, according to the directions prescribed by the late William Scott, and we find this to kill many of them, but our great trouble here in the south is to keep them out of the house, since they come in from the outside so freely. We have had little cold weather so far, and only last week we found several in a rosebud that was growing in the field. This bud was practically killed by the frost, yet the thrips seemed to be very much alive. If this gas does not kill the insect that lays the eggs in the buds, what would you recommend other than to pick off the buds as soon as they become affected?

For the benefit of some growers who might fear to use the hydrocyanic acid gas, we will tell how it affected some plants other than the carnations. In the same house were some palms, ferns, cyclamens, araucarias and Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. None seemed to suffer but the plumosus, and since we began to spray them with water before the fumigation none seem to be affected by the gas.

We will thank any of the growers to help us in finding the cause of the rotting of the carnation buds and prescribing a remedy to eradicate them from the greenhouses. We find that they are worse in the Enchantress, White Enchantress and Mrs. Patten than on any other varieties we grow. H. & B.

Inasmuch as you are positive that your trouble is caused by thrips and the carnation mite, I will discuss them only. I do not consider hydrocyanic acid gas as being nearly so good to fight thrips as nicotine, in whatever form you may be able to reach them best. Your proposition seems a rather difficult one, on account of the pests coming in from outside. The only difference I could recommend, however, would be simply to keep after them as long as the weather conditions are such as to allow them to breed outside. Whatever will destroy them inside, should also stop them from coming in. It seems that if, after having destroyed those inside, you would thoroughly spray the plants with a nicotine solution twice or three times weekly, it should be quite uninviting to those which are outside. I would advise spraying thoroughly those on the side benches especially. The same remedy should prove effective against the mite, but burn every rotted bud you come across. Then you will be sure of that many destroyed.

ASPECT FOR HOUSE.

At what angle should we run a house for best results for carnations, the house to be even-span? I refer to the different angles as to the sun. Please advise me in your columns which one is best, as I want to build for the best results.

C. J. R.

It is generally considered that the east and west house is the best for growing cut flowers, such as roses, carnations, etc. This is proven by the fact that fully ninety-eight per cent of all the houses built for that purpose run that way. There is considerable difference in opinion as to preference between even-span, short-span-to-the-north or short-span-to-the-south, and also between ridge-and-furrow or detached houses. Each has its adherents and its preferences, but on the direction lengthwise, opinion seems to be practically unanimous in favor of east and west.

The other angles are entirely out of the question, in my opinion. If I could not run my houses east and west I would run them straight north and south, even-span, and using as large glass and as little wood as possible. In such a house good stock can be grown, as I have seen on one or two occasions. In this case I would also build my house quite wide, up to fifty-six feet, making the roof as flat as practical and with wide alleys between the houses if more than one is built. I would build this way only in case it were impractical to run them east and west, however. A. F. J. B.

J. W. ADAMS.

To have lived four-score years, a half century of which has been devoted to a single business, is an achievement which it is given to few men to accomplish. John W. Adams is active and alert, mentally and physically, and might easily pass for a man twenty years younger. For fifty years he has conducted the business of a nurseryman, getting his start when a boy by reading some works on horticulture. With the aid of his father he developed a small nursery in his New Hampshire home and the experience thus obtained proved most valuable in the years that followed, when he engaged in the business for himself. Now he has thirteen acres under cultivation at Springfield, Mass., with large greenhouses in connection.

John William Adams was born in Stratham, N. H., June 20, 1828, being the youngest of the six children of John F. and Mary Lane Adams. Mr. Adams' father was for seventy years a Methodist preacher. He lived to be 91 years old and his later years were spent in fruit growing.

The boy John waxed enthusiastic over the nursery business when he was still at home with his parents. A small nursery was planted on the home farm and his father added several acres to what the boy developed. To dispose of the trees when grown, Mr. Adams bought thirty acres of land in Portland. There were no sizable nurseries in Maine and the prices paid for trees were quite generous. Several acres were planted in nursery rows to young trees and were well cultivated and made good growth. But the succeeding spring the larger proportion of them were thrown out by frost. Upon consultation it was deemed advisable to abandon the clay loam field and to begin again on sandy soil, nine acres of which were bought nearer the city.

The climate proved to be ill-adapted to the nursery business, and in 1866 Mr. Adams bought a section of Marshall P. Wilder's nursery in Boston and made arrangements to move there. His plans were suddenly changed, however, by the offer of a tempting salary as superintendent of the Crown copper mine at Lenoxville, P. Q. Mr. Adams made a success of the mine.

July 5, 1867, he moved to Springfield and first occupied a house on Water street. He afterward bought seven acres on North Main street and these same acres are still in his possession and under cultivation, together with some six more which he leases.

Mr. Adams has been successful in other lines, as well as in the business which has constituted his life-work. At the age of 21 he was chosen superintendent of schools in his native town. Several years later he was elected a member of the school committee in what is now part of the city of Portland, Me., and held the office for five years. He began teaching at the age of 19 in Amesbury, receiving $20 a month the first winter and $25 the second. He also gave private lessons in penmanship. Later he taught in Watertown and Greenland, N. H.

Mr. Adams was a member of the Massachusetts house of representatives in the years 1892 and 1893. Otherwise, he says, he has "kept clear of political affairs."

Mr. Adams married Miss Sarah Frances Waterhouse at Portland, Me., September 5, 1865, and they had six children, four sons and two daughters.

J. W. Adams.

Two of the sons died early in life. Walter Adams and Charles Adams, the latter a member of the common council from ward 1, are associated with their father in the nursery and florists' business. The oldest daughter is the wife of Edgar J. Oatman. The two daughters, Mrs. Oatman and Miss Nellie Adams, are also members of the firm of J. W. Adams & Co., and all the children, excepting Mrs. Oatman, take an active interest in the operations of the business.

Mr. Adams is a member of Greenleaf chapter of Masons of Portland, Me., of the Society of Cincinnati, Trinity Methodist church, the Hampden Harvest Club, and of several local and national horticultural societies.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opened with glorious Christmas weather. There was not much stock arriving at the first of the week, but all of it that was good sold at about holiday prices. Some pickling was in evidence, as usual; it is second nature with some men.

Roses made encouraging progress last week and start the present week with a good demand and gradually rising prices. Some of the veterans, whose predictions may reasonably be accepted, say Maid and Bride will probably range, for the best, between 20 cents and 25 cents before the Christmas demand is satisfied; that Killarney, Richmond and the new ones may go to 40 cents, and Beauties should hold up to $1. These figures are for the top grade and selected stock. They prophesy, too, 10 cents for the carnation novelties and $1 per hundred for violets, with a possibility of $1.25 for the highest grade.

Orchids are abundant and prices reasonable. James McManus says the out-of-town demand is excellent. The best gardenias have risen to unusually high rates. The few chrysanthemums that are left can demand any price they ask and get it. Lilies held at top quotations early this week. The few White Killarney sent to the Cut Flower Co., by the F. R. Pierson Co., sold at 50 cents at the beginning of the week.

The plantsmen were hustling, as the week opened, with cheerful faces. Nothing left, seems to be the general report. Enormous quantities of flowering plants of medium sizes and of every popular variety fill the retail stores. I have never seen such general and thorough preparation for the Christmas demand. Business conditions are far better than a year ago. Public confidence is growing and the Christmas spirit of liberality and good fellowship finds no more delightful expression than in the sending of the natural and manufactured concoctions of the florists' trade. Fancy boxes, baskets, hampers and jardinieres are much in evidence. Ribbon embellishments were never so varied and profuse.

Tarrytown and Scarboro.

Up at Tarrytown, the headquarters of the F. R. Pierson Co., there is a fern factory, the like of which probably can be found nowhere else in the world. Starting with old Boston, here are Scottii, Piersoni, Elegantissima, Superbissima and several new discoveries of 1908 that have not yet been named or classified. There is a big stock of specimen plants, for which Mr. Pierson says the retail demand grows constantly. Many of the plants are in 10-inch and 12-inch pans. A big business in these was done for Christmas. Many thousands of the smaller sizes are grown for the wholesale trade. Great improvements are contemplated here during the coming year.

Up at Scarboro, where are the four enormous carnation houses, 56x350 feet, each covering nearly half an acre of ground, preparations have already been made for the construction of two more of equal dimensions, one of which will be commenced immediately, the ground being already graded and cement benches prepared. In the carnation houses there was a big cut of fine stock for Christmas. One of the big houses is devoted entirely to the Killarney rose, half of it in White Killarney. Strange as it may seem, the blooms of this white sport are twice the size of the pink Killarney. Mr. Pierson says the Killarney now is the best pink rose on the market, and he believes it will supersede all other pink roses. Twelve large houses here are devoted entirely to American Beauties, in fine crop for Christmas, making Joe Millang especially merry.

The big carnation houses contain each from 18,000 to 20,000 plants, Winsor, of course, predominating. Half of one house is given up to the new varieties, which number thirty, including Governor Hughes and a fancy averaging four inches, and, in Mr. Pierson's opinion, head and shoulders above the rest in stem and color. This one will be named The Pierson and will be on the market in 1910. He also thinks well of his dark and light Winsors, which, like Winsor itself, are remarkably prolific. Other varieties grown here are White Perfection, White Enchantress, Beacon, Victory, Winona, Afterglow, President Seelye, Melody and Variegated Lawson. The daily cut now averages 3,000, nearly 100,000 monthly. Prices have averaged satisfactorily of late. The whole plant is a model. No one can afford to visit New York and not give a day to Scarboro.

Various Notes.

William Wallace Burnham, who has been identified with New York floriculture for twenty-one years and during the last thirteen years manager of the plant and cut flower departments of Bloomingdale Bros., has just received an appointment as general superintendent of the store of Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, one of the largest department stores in the world. Mr. Burnham is receiving the congratulations of his many friends with his usual modesty.

The wholesale plantsmen on West Thirtieth street report a tremendous business for Christmas, and have sold out several times since December 1. The biggest Christmas ever, is Sam Woodrow's estimate.

Already a meeting of the executive boards of both Wholesalers' and Retailers' associations has been held, and harmonious plans formulated, looking to mutual benefit.

It is reported that Joseph Fleischman will open another retail store at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. This is the hotbed of the uptown retail section. Next door is the beautiful store of Thomas Young, Jr. Across the way is the firm of Wadley & Smythe, and a block or two away, on the avenue, are the handsome stores of Charles Thorley and Alex. McConnell.

An edict by the insurance companies, making collection of money because of fires caused by Christmas trees impossible, does not seem to have decreased the sale of these forest beauties, and, in fact, so great has been the demand that Saturday the price for those remaining unsold was advanced to double the first quotations. Years ago $50 per hundred bundles was the figure. This year $75 was the asking price, and December 21 $150 was obtained. Gottlieb Myer, of Madison avenue, had his trees purchased and marked for him when cut, and Hanft Bros. took the precaution to select their stock as it was unloaded. Both these firms have big branch stores for their overflow.

M. A. Bowe has opened a branch on West Thirty-fourth street, close to his headquarters, where Arthur Merritt is in charge. The stock of blooming plants was enormous.

Harry Gessner had many effective basket combinations in the Imperial, and a window of orchids and roses that displayed his artistic skill to advantage.

John King Duer reports many debutante decorations of late, and an old-fashioned reception, where the bouquets, made up in the style of our grandmothers, made a pronounced hit with the society folks. George C. Simms, formerly with Charles Thorley, is the artist here.

The Lord & Burnham Medal.

At Hart's and Hession's, on Madison avenue, and Christatos & Koster's, near Sixty-third street, the same elaborate plant decorations as noted elsewhere prevail.

Joseph Leikens is back from Newport after a satisfactory season. His new store, at 718 Fifth avenue, is a beauty, and is near Stumpp's and Thorley's Plaza Hotel place, where the millionaires congregate.

The favorite plants this year seem to be the orchids, oranges, azaleas, poinsettias and Lorraine begonias. Azaleas are as well developed as at Easter. Heather, too, is popular, and the brilliantly colored dracænas and crotons are used with the new ferns in basket work. Ardisias and cyclamens, too, are abundant.

The Cut Flower Exchange has changed its hour of opening again, to 6 a. m. Hard to change the habits of generations.

The New York Florists' Club will meet for its initial performance of 1909, January 10, at the Grand Opera House building.

The Cleary Horticultural Co., on Vesey street, did a large retail business in Christmas holly, evergreens and mistletoe. The store will be maintained as a downtown retail center this winter, with Ambrose Cleary as superintendent. It is possible a cut flower department may be added to the business.

J. Austin Shaw.

S. Osgood Pell & Co., real estate brokers, have leased for James J. Coogan the second loft in Nos. 55, 57 and 59 West Twenty-sixth street to the New York Cut Flower Association; the third loft to the New York Flower Market Co., and the first floor store to Moltz & Kessler, wholesale florists.

Adolph E. Asmus, of West Hoboken, has filed suit for divorce against his wife. There has been one hearing already, at which Mrs. Asmus applied for alimony pending the outcome of her husband's suit for divorce. Vice Chancellor Garrison ordered that the husband pay her $35 a week. She asserts that his income from the business is $4,000 a month, and that he has a large interest in an estate worth $400,000. The family is prominent socially, as well as in the trade, and the Jersey newspapers make much capital of their troubles.

MEDALS BETTER THAN CASH.

Nine times out of ten a flower show exhibitor would rather have a medal than the cash and those who offer premiums for advertising purposes have found that medals or cups, which can be properly inscribed, serve a real advertising purpose, while a contribution of cash is little more than of financial assistance to the management. The trophies give at the same time at least equal help financially, for a cup will do for a prize in a class where the cash that bought it might be inadequate.

In 1907 the Lord & Burnham Co. offered a gold medal, shown in the accompanying illustration, to the Lenox Horticultural Society. It has an intrinsic value of about $30 and was so well liked that it was offered to a number of societies this year, and was awarded as follows:

By the Tarrytown Horticultural Society to Wm. Inglis, gardener to J. J. Riker, Portchester, N. Y., for thirty-six roses in three varieties; to Thomas A. See, gardener to Mrs. M. E. Sand, Ardsley, N. Y., for four varieties of mums, three of each.

By the Lenox Horticultural Society to Thomas Proctor, superintendent for R. W. Patterson, for twenty-four mums.

By the National Flower Show to H. Skjoldager, gardener to E. G. Uihlein, Chicago, for best collection of orchids grown by a private gardener.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

The will of the late Louis E. Marquisee was admitted to probate December 5, but the value of the estate could not be given, as Mr. Marquisee was a beneficiary under the wills of his three half brothers, whose estates are not yet settled.

Owing to continued ill health, Mrs. Marquisee feels compelled to give up the idea of continuing the business, and has disposed of the ground on which the greenhouses stand. They will remain till July 1, which will give ample time to disseminate the new carnation, Marchioness, and dispose of the bedding stock.

State of Trade.

Last week there was a marked improvement in business, which is steadily increasing with the approach of Christmas. Plenty of funeral work and a few decorations may have been the direct cause of the improvement. The florists all report Christmas orders coming in well and, as for the supply of stock, carnations could not be better in size and color, and the cuts are most encouraging. Roses, as far as the crop is concerned, are just the reverse; the dull weather has affected them considerably, and the supply is much too small for the demand. Beauties also are scarce and the price asked for them is high, but the customers seem glad to get them at that. Narcissi, Roman hyacinths and valley are plentiful, and there is good sale for them. Giganteum and callas are also selling well. Poinsettias and azaleas, with other Christmas plants, are all holding their own, as usual.

Various Notes.

The new office and packing-room of the Miami Floral Co. was completed in time for the rush of shipment of Christmas orders. The cellar under this room is twelve feet deep and sixty feet long. They are cutting a fine crop of carnations. A new steel tank, with capacity of 16,000 gallons, has just been completed, with a tower thirty-five feet high. The tank was made and erected by the Graver Tank Co., Hammond, Ind.

Our florists have all taken a special pride in the appearance of their retail establishments this season and in most cases Christmas decorations are elaborate. H. H. Ritter, in the Algonquin hotel, has his store decorated with an abundance of holly, roping and Christmas bells, while red incandescent lights here and there add to the beauty of the display. W. G. Matthews' store, in the Phillips House, is profusely decorated with poinsettias and Christmas greens. He also has a large display of fancy hampers. C. M. Schaefer's stand in the Arcade is artistically decorated to carry out the wreath effect.

The Dayton Floral Co. reports last week's business good. A wedding decoration at the Standard Club is said to have been one of the largest in Dayton for some time. Besides cut flowers and palms, twenty-five cases of southern smilax were used.

The Advance Floral Co. has realized a good business on specimen cyclamen in the last two weeks.

Everything promised a big Christmas trade, said the Heiss Co.

Mrs. E. Young is among those who report a good business last week.

The Dayton Florists' Club at its December meeting made arrangements for a New Year's banquet, to be given to its members January 11, at the Phillips House.

Mrs. William Ritter has returned from her trip to Chicago, and reports a pleasant visit.

C. M. Jack, of Mechanicsburg, O., was a visitor last week, and George L. Huscroft, with William Hagemann, New York, made his annual rounds among the Dayton florists. R. A. B.

OBITUARY.

A. M. York.

A. M. York, of Hancock, Mich., died in that city December 16.

Mr. York was born in Staffordshire, England, February 10, 1853. He came to America when he was about 21 years old and made his home at Pittsburg for a time. Later he moved to Ohio and studied at Oberlin college. From there he moved to Detroit and he afterward took a veterinary surgeon's course at McGill University, Montreal. After graduating he practiced his profession at Marquette for a number of years. Failing health caused him to embark in business as a florist. He settled in Hancock twelve years ago and built up an extensive business, with large, modern greenhouses at Ripley and stores in Hancock and Calumet. While erecting a new boiler house last winter he overexerted himself and weakened his constitution to such an extent that it was impossible for him to withstand the ravages of the illness with which he was taken about a week before his death.

Besides his wife, Mr. York is survived by four children, Alfred W., of Houghton; Mrs. M. Nordquist, of Calumet; Bertram and Grace, at home. He also leaves a brother, Richard M. York, of Ripley, and two sisters, Miss Eliza York, who made her home with her brother at Ripley, and Miss Mary Ann York, who resides in England. Mr. York was a member of the Knights Templar, Mystic Shrine, Royal Arch Masons, David Kendall Council, Eastern Star, Quincy Lodge F. & A. M., Hancock Lodge Knights of Pythias, Portage Camp Modern Woodmen of America, Hancock Lodge of Elks, National Union and Mistletoe Lodge, Sons of St. George.

Harry C. Smith.

Harry C. Smith died of heart failure, at his home in Medford, Mass., December 5, after an illness of two months. He was 55 years old. He was born in England and served for fifteen years in the Royal Artillery, being stationed most of the time at Halifax, N. S. He removed from Boston to Medford three years ago and had previously lived in Bar Harbor, Newport, and other places. Up to the time of his illness he was employed as florist and gardener for Erving P. Morse, of Forest street, Medford. He leaves a widow.

A. J. Taylor.

Archibald J. Taylor, aged 45 years, of Burlington, Vt., was killed soon after midnight December 5, by the overturning of a speeding automobile, and his two companions, Albert T. Henderson, age 25, owner of the machine, and Robert J. Ross, age 60, both of Burlington, were critically injured.

ROOTING GERANIUM CUTTINGS.

Ernest L. Johnson, florist at the State Hospital at Palmer, Mass., has been experimenting in the rooting of geranium cuttings in each of the various ways described in the recent discussion in the REVIEW. He reports that those put in the sand in the shade rooted about ninety per cent, while those put in soil were practically a total failure.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—W. F. Kasting had fireproof Christmas greens for those who wanted them and made quite a hit. He did a big business in Christmas specialties of all kinds.

demand grows constantly. Many of the plants are in 10-inch and 12-inch pans. A big business in these was done for Christmas. Many thousands of the smaller sizes are grown for the wholesale trade. Great improvements are contemplated here during the coming year.

Up at Scarboro, where are the four enormous carnation houses, 56x350 feet, each covering nearly half an acre of ground, preparations have already been made for the construction of two more of equal dimensions, one of which will be commenced immediately, the ground being already graded and cement benches prepared. In the carnation houses there was a big cut of fine stock for Christmas. One of the big houses is devoted entirely to the Killarney rose, half of it in White Killarney. Strange as it may seem, the blooms of this white sport are twice the size of the pink Killarney. Mr. Pierson says the Killarney now is the best pink rose on the market, and he believes it will supersede all other pink roses. Twelve large houses here are devoted entirely to American Beauties, in fine crop for Christmas, making Joe Millang especially merry.

The big carnation houses contain each from 18,000 to 20,000 plants, Winsor, of course, predominating. Half of one house is given up to the new varieties, which number thirty, including Governor Hughes and a fancy averaging four inches, and, in Mr. Pierson's opinion, head and shoulders above the rest in stem and color. This one will be named The Pierson and will be on the market in 1910. He also thinks well of his dark and light Winsors, which, like Winsor itself, are remarkably prolific. Other varieties grown here are White Perfection, White Enchantress, Beacon, Victory, Winona, Afterglow, President Seelye, Melody and Variegated Lawson. The daily cut now averages 3,000, nearly 100,000 monthly. Prices have averaged satisfactorily of late. The whole plant is a model. No one can afford to visit New York and not give a day to Scarboro.

Various Notes.

William Wallace Burnham, who has been identified with New York floriculture for twenty-one years and during the last thirteen years manager of the plant and cut flower departments of Bloomingdale Bros., has just received an appointment as general superintendent of the store of Abraham & Straus, Brooklyn, one of the largest department stores in the world. Mr. Burnham is receiving the congratulations of his many friends with his usual modesty.

The wholesale plantsmen on West Thirtieth street report a tremendous business for Christmas, and have sold out several times since December 1. The biggest Christmas ever, is Sam Woodrow's estimate.

Already a meeting of the executive boards of both Wholesalers' and Retailers' associations has been held, and harmonious plans formulated, looking to mutual benefit.

It is reported that Joseph Fleischman will open another retail store at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. This is the hotbed of the uptown retail section. Next door is the beautiful store of Thomas Young, Jr. Across the way is the firm of Wadley & Smythe, and a block or two away, on the avenue, are the handsome stores of Charles Thorley and Alex. McConnell.

An edict by the insurance companies, making collection of money because of fires caused by Christmas trees impossible, does not seem to have decreased the sale of these forest beauties, and, in fact, so great has been the demand that Saturday the price for those remaining unsold was advanced to double the first quotations. Years ago $50 per hundred bundles was the figure. This year $75 was the asking price, and December 21 $150 was obtained. Gottlieb Myer, of Madison avenue, had his trees purchased and marked for him when cut, and Hanft Bros. took the precaution to select their stock as it was unloaded. Both these firms have big branch stores for their overflow.

M. A. Bowe has opened a branch on West Thirty-fourth street, close to his headquarters, where Arthur Merritt is in charge. The stock of blooming plants was enormous.

The Lord & Burnham Medal.

At Hart's and Hession's, on Madison avenue, and Christatos & Koster's, near Sixty-third street, the same elaborate plant decorations as noted elsewhere prevail.

The Cleary Horticultural Co., on Vesey street, did a large retail business in Christmas holly, evergreens and mistletoe. The store will be maintained as a down town retail center this winter, with Ambrose Cleary as superintendent. It is possible a cut flower department may be added to the business.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

MERRY Christmas!

EASTER, 1909, falls April 11.

THE business in Christmas greens has been immense this year, undoubtedly eclipsing all previous records.

TROUBLE with the workmen making window glass seems more certain than at any time since the demand for higher wages was made. It will mean the increased cost of greenhouse sizes.

"PLEASE answer this as soon as possible," writes a man who was in so great a hurry that he used a piece of plain block paper and "forgot" to date his letter or sign his name. There is no good reason for failure to sign full name and address to any legitimate inquiry.

THE Connecticut Fire Insurance Co., Hartford, has decided to write hail insurance—not on greenhouses, but on growing crops. Thus far none of the big companies has undertaken to compete with the economically managed mutual Florists' Hail Association.

COLLECTIONS within the trade are reported as considerably easier than they were a month ago, but there is a general disposition to insist on the more prompt meeting of obligations than has been the case in the past. Those dealing with the public should also make January 1 the occasion of turning over a new leaf in this respect.

BEFORE John Cook, of Baltimore, put the My Maryland rose on the market he offered the entire stock to Gude Bros. Co., Washington, to Peter Reinberg, Chicago, and possibly to others, who felt that the dissemination of a new rose is so much a matter of hazard that they did not care to make the investment; so Mr. Cook distributed it himself, though his stock was small at the time. No one feels regret at missing a good thing, for it is everywhere recognized that "hindsight is better than foresight." With most successful new roses the demand the second season is far greater than it was the first one.

NEXT NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The cup offered by Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, New York, not having been won at the late national flower show, has been turned over to the undersigned, by the donors, to be offered as a first prize at the next national flower show.

There has been much talk of the next national show, but so far as the writer knows this is the first really tangible offering which has been made.

Should any other firms or individuals see fit to make any offers in connection with the next proposed show, the writer will be very glad to accept them temporarily and turn them over to whatever organization may be made for the purpose of conducting another show.

W. N. RUDD, Sec'y.

Morgan Park, Ill.

TANNERY WASTE AS FERTILIZER.

Please give me all the information you can regarding the use of tannery waste as a fertilizer. This waste consists of about three-quarters leached lime, and the remainder is leached hen manure and cow manure that washes off the hides; also grease, hide-scrapings, hair, blood, etc. Would this be valuable as a fertilizer and at what rate should it be applied? J. B.

This mixture of waste would be of little practical value for crops under glass, but might be available for outside crops. To make it perfectly safe as a fertilizer, it ought to be mixed with at least ten times its bulk of good soil, then thoroughly incorporated and allowed to lie over until spring, turning it over frequently in the meantime.

Apply at the rate of about three tons to the acre. RIBES.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There was no special feature in the market last week, except possibly a little flurry in Easter lilies. Demand was no more than normal and the holding back for holiday supply did not produce anything that could be called a shortage. There were larger supplies than is ordinarily the case in the week preceding Christmas.

The current week opened with light supplies. There always are lighter receipts on Monday than any other day in the week, and this time the Sunday cut evidently was held in reserve for Tuesday's special demand. There was some Christmas shipping as early as Monday, but it was hard to work the city buyers up to the Christmas price level. Where stock was tight enough to hold until Christmas, the week opened with stiff prices, but a large part of the early receipts were of stock too open to be salable except for immediate use and on this grade the Christmas prices could not be realized. The result was that the average prices at the beginning of the week were considerably under the Christmas list. A few Trumpet narcissi arrived.

Tuesday's Market.

Tuesday saw the beginning of the real Christmas shipping. It is the general opinion that a greater number of orders were on file than at any previous Christmas, and that the orders averaged larger. There was almost an entire absence of city demand December 22, so the day was

Carnations

Order of us—that's all. We regularly offer the largest lot of strictly high grade stock to be found in any house in this market. Large crops are on and quality the very best. Especially strong on Enchantress; also large lots of fine pink and white.

Tea Roses

We have a large supply of all varieties—all lengths of stem; fine heads. Maid, Bride, Killarney, Richmond, Field, etc. We take good care of all orders. Don't forget, we shall be "headquarters" on Roses in 1909.

Violets

The Violet is the Special New Year's flower. We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. Send us an order of any size—and we will have them for you.

Farleyense

Have you noted how the best stores are using Cut Farleyense for their best work? It's the finest green. They get it of us—$6.00 to $8.00 per 100 cut fronds.

Also large supplies of Valley, Sweet Peas, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Stevia, etc. Plenty Green Goods, as always. Always remember:

devoted entirely to shipping. There always is a certain proportion of the stock which is not good enough for shipping and which is set aside, with the result it cuts down the average materially if the city buyers are not in urgent need of stock. This was apparent Tuesday. An immense amount of shipping was done, but out of each consignment something was set aside as not up to shipping grade, with no one to buy this culled out stock.

Tuesday there was enough stock in practically all lines except medium Beauties and first-class Maids. The call for Christmas shipping is always for nothing but the best. Open Beauties will not ship, nor will soft, off-colored Maids. There were quantities of Maids which no wholesaler dared put on his shipping orders, even though he had to send the orders out short. Even the best roses were hardly up to grade and the weak and short stuff proved a problem for which the wholesalers had found no solution Tuesday night; this grade of stock was still on hand.

There never are enough Richmond for the Christmas demand, and red carnations always are scarce, but the supply of red carnations this year was greater than usual and more nearly sufficed to meet the demand. Of other carnations there were enough for Tuesday. Poinsettias sold slowly and there was little special demand for other flowers.

Taking it altogether, the orders for Tuesday's shipments went out in good shape, with no oversupply in the market, save low grade stock and white carnations. These latter hang fire even if of good quality.

Wednesday's Market.

Wednesday was an even heavier shipping day than Tuesday and receipts of flowers were larger. It never is possible to make the stock just match up with the orders when there is such an enormous volume of business—but it came as near doing it December 23 as it ever does on that date. Generally speaking, there was plenty of stock. Orders for good roses could not be filled, though the supply more nearly went around than it had been figured it would a few days before. Long Beauties were to be had for all the buyers who cared to pay the price. Carnations were equal to requirements, with the usual surplus of white and some low grade of stock for which there was no use. The absence of city buyers caused the low grade stock in all lines to accumulate badly. Few shipping orders called for poinsettias. There were plenty of violets for the outside demand. Supplies in general proved so abundant that there was little special call for lilies, Romans, Paper Whites, valley, stevia and such items. Considerable extra call developed for boxwood, but not much for other greens.

The day before a holiday is the one that really tells the story. The Christmas shipping business has certainly been as great as it ever was, with all strictly first-class stock bringing good prices. There was little indication Wednesday night of any material break in prices Thursday, when the city buyers are looked for to come into the market for large quantities of stock. Several large local orders for long Beauties are reported to have been placed at $125 per hundred, for delivery Thursday.

Various Notes.

Mrs. C. W. McKellar, the champion lady bowler of the S. A. F., has been improving her scores in recent matches. One evening last week she rolled 213, 215 and 197. That is a record for three games that entitles her to challenge the wearer of the men's championship medal.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the advance orders for Christmas violets insured them the largest Christmas business in the history of the firm.

John Evert is still cutting chrysanthemums in considerable quantity. They have sold well this week.

A crate of green went through one of the show windows of the Chicago Rose Co. one day this week.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has received some excellent blooms of Chadwick chrysanthemum this week, but reports the buyers would not take them except at a concession from the prices the same grade has brought at this date in previous years.

The E. F. Winterson Co. decorated the store front with green wreathing and holly, making it one of the most attractive in the downtown district. They have done an enormous retail business in Christmas greens, in addition to the large wholesale business.

Mrs. E. L. Eaton has recovered from her recent severe illness and was on deck for the Christmas rush at Eaton's Flower Shop.

E. C. Amling said on Monday morning that the orders then on file indicated to him that the Christmas trade would break all records for this market.

O. P. Bassett has been confined to his home since December 16 by a severe cold in his chest.

August Jurgens has returned from a trip to Boston, Providence, Fall River, Newport and New York.

the store, as at least a part of it usually is, was all arranged in the showhouse, where more room was available.

Sam Pearce says the Christmas business has been a record-breaker. Poinsettias and azaleas have sold splendidly, in spite of the fact that the supply of poinsettias in pans is larger than ever before; every retail store was full of them.

W. E. Lynch, of E. H. Hunt's, slipped on the ice December 20 and sprained his right hand severely.

Mike Rocklin was here from Sioux City to buy Christmas supplies.

Miss Gunterberg, in the Flower Growers' Market, has recently discovered an Evanstonian who grows valley, or been discovered by him. Whichever it is, she has the valley.

John H. Miller, the Rosehill carnation grower, is suffering with rheumatism in his right hand.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. has a larger Christmas crop of carnations than in any previous year, but the roses are off-crop.

Hattie Carlson's flower store at 92 Jackson boulevard was closed December 19 by order of the Municipal court. When the bailiff put up the notice Miss Carlson tore it down, with the result that the affair attracted the attention of the whole neighborhood and the daily papers. She was able to adjust her affairs so that she reopened the store December 22.

Peter Reinberg paid John Schillo an election bet, December 21, entertaining a party of eight at dinner and the theater.

Fleischman's Jackson boulevard store made a special feature of Rice's basket, the one in which the weave comes up the handles so that the azaleas, poinsettias and ferns only protrude on two sides. Fleischman had some large arrangements in these.

Bassett & Washburn's afternoon shipment December 22 was two hours late because of delays of the express company, and they had their hands full when the stock finally arrived.

A. L. Randall says December 23 his firm shipped more orders than in any previous day in its history.

Peter Reinberg says Mrs. Field has long been recognized as a good summer rose, but that this week it has proved itself to be a Christmas rose as well.

N. J. Wietor says he looks for good business right along now, for rose crops are off with a good many growers besides those for this market and that will turn all the buyers this way.

O. J. Friedman took a somewhat unusual way of attracting public attention to a novelty by publishing a large advertisement in the Tribune December 19, as follows: "Legal notice to the florists of the United States. Having applied for letters patent covering the use of feathers as a background for flowers in corsages to prevent soiling of gowns, notice is given that infringement of same will be vigorously prosecuted." Of course had the notice been intended for the trade instead of the public it would have been published in the REVIEW.

Fred Lautenschlager, of Kroeschell Bros. Co., spent a couple of days at Grand Rapids last week and sold three boilers and several generators.

L. Baumann & Co. say that December is the biggest month, in point of sales, since they have been in business. They have been unusually busy for three months.

The Market.

Twelve months ago Christmas business came as a surprise to the florists, a rather pleasant surprise, too. Many of the stores were hardly prepared for the rush which came so unexpectedly after the shadow cast by the general slump in business. If predictions were true this year we have a rollicking Christmas.

There was a shortening up in all kinds of good stock last week, although business was anything but brisk. There was a remarkable scarcity of funeral work for several days the latter part of the week of December 13, and as a result white flowers commenced to pile up.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting December 16 it was voted to move into larger quarters. It was found that a suitable room could be had in the Cowee building, where the first meetings of the club were held. There were twenty-two votes in favor of moving and four against. Hereafter the meetings will be held Mondays, as the new room cannot be had on Wednesdays. The first meeting in the new place will be held Monday evening, January 4. Christmas business will be discussed.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, where the meetings have been held for the last three years without any expense, was given a hearty vote of thanks. A vote of thanks was also extended to Albert Sylvester, who took such good care of the club's furniture.

January 7 will be ladies' night. A dancing party and entertainment will be given at Harmonie hall. The entertainment committee has been allowed a goodly sum for refreshments, music, talent, and so on. All those desiring admission cards for their friends can obtain them at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

The subject of the evening was a paper entitled, "Reminiscences of Christmas Thirty-five Years Ago." Mr. Schroeter's paper was received with much applause. President Brown raised the only objection in that he said the paper was entirely too short.

Various Notes.

A number of pretty Christmas windows were seen about town this week. E. A. Fetters had an effective window, an assortment of Christmas arrangements set off with a background of imitation snow. Breitmeyer's Sons' many large windows contained the usual number of fine specimens. Sullivan set off his holiday goods with a white screen covered loosely with smilax and interspersed with artificial poinsettias. Walter Taepke had as the center of attraction in his windows two tall lights with red shades. These caught the attention of the passers-by, who were then treated to a fine variety of baskets and flowers. The bare branches of trees covered with asbestos, giving a pretty snow effect, were arranged on the sides of Schroeter's windows. Numerous small red lights gave a Christmas tone. Brown's, Peterson's and several other stores all took advantage of the occasion and showed pretty windows.

The trials of Christmas business will still be ringing in the ears of Schroeter's force when they commence on the elaborate decoration for the Stearns ball at Strassburg's hall December 28. About fifty cases of holly and southern smilax will be used, also about as many Christmas trees, besides hundreds of yards of red ribbon. From the ceiling will hang immense clusters of holly. The dining-room will first be entirely covered with red before the smilax is applied.

There was a noticeable falling off in the call for violets just before the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer left suddenly for Philadelphia the first part of the week, owing to the serious illness of Mrs. Breitmeyer's mother, whose home is in the Quaker City.

Another flower shop has been added to the list of such establishments in Detroit. The latest acquisition is the SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Club Meeting.

A notable event in the annals of the Springfield Florists' Club occurred on Tuesday evening, December 15, when a congenial company of forty-eight people assembled in the office of the Good & Reese Co. An invitation to be present had been extended to the wives and daughters of the members, while Pearl Young represented the floral press, Stanley Pettigrew the amateurs and the Misses Fennimore, Howell, Jacobs and Sherwood the retail flower trade.

The attraction of the evening was the address of E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., on the subject of "Observations in Europe," in which he was assisted by Prof. B. B. McIntire with the stereopticon.

The views consisted chiefly of buildings, bridges, towers, statues and similar beautiful objects of architecture in Paris and its world-famous rose gardens nearby. Mr. Hill stated that lecturing was a new rôle for him, but he succeeded in making his talk highly interesting, instructive and amusing, as he portrayed the characteristic traits of the French people, among whom he has so frequently and closely mingled. He especially commended the prevailing habit of beautification and the artistic touch which is given to everything, no unsightly object or unfinished spot being permitted to exist, and cost seemingly not being considered. The rivalry on the continent between such cities as Berlin, Vienna, Florence, Paris and other places was spoken of, but Paris, "The City Beautiful," keeps in the lead. Springfield might well imbibe considerably more of this spirit when again she shall consider the subject of park extension.

The views taken in the Rosarie de L'Hay, the rose gardens owned and maintained by Jules Gravereaux, proprietor of the Bon Marche and known as "the Marshall Field of Paris," illustrated the lavish outlay and intense interest of one rosarian whose motives are purely those of a flower lover and a philanthropist, the gardens being open to the public. These views would astound the average American millionaire, and the thirty-five acres of roses in the "Garden Bagatelle," a portion of an immense park, owned and maintained by the municipality at an enormous expense, would literally take the breath of the petty "knocker" and voter against playgrounds, parks, walks, drives and other things beautiful.

Mr. Hill urged the members and guests present to help by interrupting him at any point to ask questions, which privilege was freely taken advantage of by the florists, most of whom are old and familiar acquaintances of the speaker, and by this means much interest was added and valuable information obtained.

For a good story illustrating the artful traits of the women of Paris, whom Mr. Hill pronounces beautiful, ask him to relate his experience in attempting to assist a friend by acting as interpreter while making a purchase of shirts and other linen articles.

After the address had been concluded, all present were invited to the dining-rooms and served with ice cream and cake by the entertainment committee, consisting of C. W. Schmidt and E. J. Kriegbaum. Upon dispersing, comments were freely made as to the value of such gatherings in furthering the welfare and fraternal feeling of the local florists.

GE DALE.

CALUMET, MICH.

The capitalization of the Lakeside Floral Co., with headquarters here and greenhouses at Chassell and Red Jacket, has been increased from $25,000 to $40,000. The increase is all in preferred stock, making the capitalization now $25,000 in common stock and $15,000 in preferred. Of the $25,000 common stock all has been subscribed and actually paid in, while of the new issue of preferred there has been subscribed and paid in $12,000.

The directors of the company, whose signatures appear on the amendatory articles, are: President, John G. Stone; secretary, Charles H. Moss; B. F. Chynoweth and Claude V. Seeber. This increased capitalization, President Stone says, was necessary in order to take proper care of the firm's rapidly developing business.

The florists' business in northern Michigan is increasing rapidly and everyone is expanding.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

"Fresh Cut Holly!" "Mistletoe!" It is heard all along Market street, where the crowds throng about the fakers' stands, surging back and forth, reminding one of a great holiday gathering for a circus or for Founders' week. The amount of greens that have been harvested this week is enormous. Never before in the history of the City of Brotherly Love have such immense quantities of holly, mistletoe, and all the other varieties of greens, berried and unberried, been shipped into and out of the city, to say nothing of the quantity that has been consumed therein. But this is a digression, excusable only because of the extreme difficulty of writing intelligibly about a battle on the eve thereof.

Let us leave the battle until next week, and report briefly the doings in this market from December 16 to 22. The demand has been light and irregular; prices have slowly advanced, especially on fancy orchids, gardenias and roses. The quantity of poinsettia coming into the market is larger, despite the casualties, than was at first anticipated. It seems probable that the supply will equal the demand. Callas have developed a surprising scarcity, Pittsburg being appealed to in vain. Easter lilies are fine and quite plentiful. Violets are excellent and in fair demand. The Hudson river continues to supply this market with large quantities of Marie Louise, while Hightstown-grown Lady Campbell and fancy singles are increasing in numbers. There is a noticeable holding back of carnations from some of the growers, which is greatly to be deplored. While the market for these flowers is not good enough to warrant high prices, except on a few reds and fancies, they are sure to cause dissatisfaction with them when they come. Fortunately this evil is decreasing. Sweet peas are more plentiful than ever before at Christmas, some of the stock coming in showing unusual quality. Most of the smaller flowers on the price list are in excellent supply. Greens are abundant.

The Plant Trade.

Plants have never sold better before Christmas than this season. The retail stores have stocked heavily with nearly all choice varieties of plants, and a good demand has been noticed for the small sizes of choice foliage plants to be made up prettily in hampers and baskets. Crotons have figured especially in these combinations, and the variety named after the chief of the horticultural department at Girard college, Edwin Lonsdale, has been favored for its beautiful red coloring. The supply houses have catered to this demand by producing many original designs in hampers and plant baskets, giving the retailers opportunity to display artistic skill of a high order. Charles Thorley, the famous New York florist, when talking recently with a Philadelphian, said he believed there was a great future in the making up of plant combinations for holiday gifts. Nothing is considered too good for these arrangements, the best in plants, baskets and millinery being combined to produce a telling effect.

Horticultural Society Election.

The election of officers of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society took place at the annual meeting December 15 and resulted as follows:

President—Clement B. Newbold.

Vice-presidents—Randall Morgan, Dr. J. Cheston Morris, Henry F. Michell, J. Gardner Cassatt.

Coal.

A member of the firm of Smith, Linceaweaver & Co., in discussing coal conditions with a representative of the REVIEW, said that while local conditions varied so that it was impossible to speak accurately without knowing all the details, he believed that in a general way the hard grades of anthracite coal were the most economical for the florist. Given certain conditions, where a quick fire is demanded a soft grade of anthracite may be better. Given certain other conditions, such as too small a boiler capacity, limited grate surface and plenty of draught, bituminous coal is cheaper. The point was strongly brought out that where the coal man knows the conditions surrounding the florist he can save him many a dollar by suggesting the kind of fuel best suited to his needs.

Various Notes.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving fine gardenias from W. E. Fowler, manager, Morton, Pa.

Alfred M. Campbell has been handling some fine poinsettias.

Samuel F. Lilley, of Lilley & Upton, has the sympathy of his friends in the death of his mother, which occurred December 17. The funeral took place December 21.

The first white lilac seen in this market, reported last week, should have been credited to W. F. LaCroix, Buena, N. J.

The Henry F. Michell Co. reports the largest sale of holly in the history of the house.

M. Rice & Co. were more than pleased with their Christmas business. The demand for their immortelle "kow" bells was enormous. Red immortelles, waterproof paper pot covers, mats, plant baskets and ferneries were in great demand.

Robert A. Craig reports the largest December plant business in the history of his company.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have experienced a heavy demand for immortelles. They received a large number of cases, 457, I think, ten days ago. This week they had all been sold, and many more could have been used. Mr. Bayersdorfer expected an immense rush at the last moment, but the rush which the firm actually experienced far exceeded his expectations.

A. Farenwald, Hillside, Pa., has blossomed into a sweet pea expert of the first rank. A house of roses got tired last August, after a lengthy struggle, and were replaced by winter blooming peas, peas that grew, and grew, and grew exceedingly and now are in full crop, with stems of marvelous length supporting fine flowers.

At the December meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society the following were elected to serve during the year 1909: President, Rev. Francis Heyl; vice-presidents, Chas. J. Wister, Edwin C. Jellett and N. DuBois Miller; secretary and treasurer, George Redles. Reports of the various committees show that the society is in flourishing condition, the finances being in excellent shape, and the attendance of the members and their friends enthusiastic.

The Market.

The near approach of Christmas has galvanized a little life into cut flower conditions, but they are not nearly so satisfactory as could be wished. The quantity of material coming in still is too great for the market to consume, and prices are not what they ought to be. This is particularly true of carnations. It is unusual to see good flowers, even of whites, offered at $1 per hundred during Christmas week. Red and pink shades are selling well, but prices will hardly equal those of a year ago, unless a quick change occurs. Roses are doing a little better. Richmonds, of course, are especial favorites and best quality blooms almost equal Beauties in value. Killarney is of exceptional quality, quite a few being seen with stems three feet long. White roses, as usual, are rather slow sale.

Violets are selling well and are not overabundant. Poinsettias are more abundant than for some years. Prices vary from $2 to $6 per dozen. A few straggling, late mums are seen, but the present week will finish them. Bulbous stock is something of a glut, particularly in the case of Romans and Paper Whites. Trumpet Majors are plentiful and a few Golden Spurs and La Reine tulips are arriving. Lilies are in good supply and there is quite a little in the way of stevia, antirrhinum, mignonette, single white azalea and other flowers seen. Sweet peas are good and valley is in fair demand.

The Best Plant Stand

On the market today. Comes in three sizes; is adjustable, and is made of Galvanized Iron or Oxidized Copper. With its aid you can place a plant from 6 to 48 inches from the floor. See illustration. Wire, write or phone us, and we will tell you our nearest agent.

Growers of pot plants are pretty well cleaned out of stock. Demand for these has been much better than a year ago. The taste runs stronger for these each year, in preference to flowers. Azaleas are remarkably good and are selling well. So are poinsettias in pans, Lorraine begonias, cyclamens, ardisias, Otaheite oranges and Erica melanthera, the bright colored plants, of course, selling best. The retailers seem to be well satisfied with their business up to date.

A tremendous business is being done by the dealers in holly, mistletoe, laurel and other evergreens. The demand for anything is immense. Some nicely berried holly is seen and imported mistletoe is excellent.

Arthur E. Mr. Thatcher has an extensive knowledge of trees and shrubs and will undoubtedly prove a valuable man in his new position.

his Norfolk Downs establishment. The variety, Mme. Petrick, is specially good, quite an improvement on Hexe. He also has a nice batch of Bougainvillea Sanderiana.

W. H. Elliott had a fine crop of magnificent Killarney and Richmond with exceptional stems from Madbury, N. H. Some nice Safrano also came from the same establishment. The Brighton plant, as usual, gave a heavy crop.

Peirce Bros. sold several thousand azaleas for Christmas. They sent a large auto-load to Providence December 19.

H. E. Fiske Co. had an attractive display of pot plants in the windows for Christmas, including a good assortment of dwarf Japanese trees.

W. T. Good, for some years with W. E. Doyle and T. F. Galvin, has opened a retail store on his own account on Boylston street, near Fairfield street.

Farquhar & Co. will double their store capacity for the coming season, having leased the entire building at 8 and 9 South Market street, adjoining their present store. This added space will give them splendid facilities for handling their increasing trade.

F. W. Fletcher is still marketing Cosmos Lady Lenox. A committee from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will inspect his violet, Baronne Rothschild, shortly.

Julius Zinn, on Beacon street, has some well flowered Ivy Geranium Galilee for Christmas, also good cypripediums and cyclamens.

W. T. Walke, of Salem, is handling quite a number of Euphorbia Jacquiniæflora at the Music Hall market.

W. W. Edgar & Co. have sold an extra fine lot of poinsettias, azaleas, Lorraine begonias, ivy-leaved geraniums and other stock the last few days. Herman H. Bartsch is foreman over this establishment.

Littlefield & Wyman, of North Abington, have a splendid crop of white and pink Fair Maid, Enchantress, White Perfection and other carnations for the holidays.

Ladies' night and installation of officers, January 19, will undoubtedly draw a big crowd to the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting.

Patten & Co's seedling crimson carnation, Sara Nicholson, is proving a most prolific bloomer. The flowers may lack a little in size, but for quantity few varieties can compare with it.

Lemoine Bros., of South Framingham, are first in the market with wallflowers, always a favorite with many buyers.

Sidney Hoffman's windows at his big Massachusetts avenue store are always worth inspecting. At present they contain a tempting array of finely flowered azaleas, poinsettias, Lorraines, ardisias and other seasonable plants.

The Waban Conservatories, at their salesrooms, are handling an immense cut of splendid roses, the Beauties, Richmonds and Killarneys being superb. Orders for young stock of White Killarney continue to come in freely.

William Nicholson has, in addition to his big crop of fancy carnations, some splendid mignonette for the holidays.

H. L. Cameron, of North Cambridge, sailed on the steamship Columbia for Glasgow December 19. Mr. Cameron will spend New Year's at his mother's home in Kilmarnock, Ayrshire, and will return in February. Mrs. Cameron is now 95 years of age and quite feeble.

ALFALFA is a word of Arabic origin and means "the best fodder."

THERE are reported to be considerable quantities of Gladiolus Colvillei still in the hands of the Holland growers.

FARQUHAR & Co., Boston, have leased the building at 8 and 9 South Market street, adjoining their present quarters, and will double their space.

ON the whole, peas are not becoming any cheaper, although concessions are to be had on a few of the sorts in less active demand. The canners' kinds are still going up.

THE Wholesale Seedsmen's League has designated Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va., S. F. Willard, Wethersfield, Conn., and Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia, as a committee to observe and report on any proposed legislation in congress on the subject of pure seeds.

THE Holland bulb salesmen, who have been arriving in the country earlier and earlier each season, are now quite numerous in the west, but are reported as not being welcomed with open arms by the smaller buyers, who would rather delay placing orders till March or April. The big seed houses are expected to buy more liberally than last year, as a result of the unexpectedly good demand for outdoor planting.

Resolutions on Tariff.

F. W. Bolgiano filed the schedule with the Ways and Means Committee at Washington December 3. It was accompanied by the following resolution:

At a meeting of the committee on tariff and customs of the American Seed Trade Association, an organization which consists of the leading seed growers of the United States, as well as seed dealers, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The members of this association are satisfied that the present duties on seeds and bulbs afford an adequate measure of protection to the American farmer and deprecate any radical change in the existing rate of duty on seeds and bulbs, and

Whereas, Owing to the methods of production abroad there is great difficulty, if not impossibility, in fixing equitably market values in the country of production because there are no open markets or exchanges where they are dealt in from day to day as is the case with many staple products, and

Whereas, These conditions, which are inseparable from the industry, have in the past led to great difficulty on the part of the appraising officers of the customs, in some cases to great injustice to importers and to serious inequalities in the administration of the tariff, and

Whereas, These undesirable results seem to be inevitable when the duty on seeds and bulbs is assessed on an ad valorem basis, now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the judgment of this association that all dutiable seeds and bulbs should pay duties on a specific basis, and further be it

Resolved, That we strongly recommend to the ways and means committee the following schedule of duties on seeds and bulbs which has been compiled on the basis of average values abroad and with the desire to maintain the equivalents of the existing ad valorem rates, and finally be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this association that, whatever duties on seeds and bulbs may hereafter be decided upon they should be assessed on a specific and not an ad valorem basis.

These resolutions were supported by the following telegram filed on behalf of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League and signed, also, by a number of representative houses:

The Wholesale Seedsmen's League by its directors have unanimously adopted the following:

Resolved, That we heartily approve and

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

endorse the American Seed Trade Association's resolutions and schedule for specific duties on seeds and bulbs, dated December 2, and filed with your honorable committee.

The Schedule on Bulbs.

T. J. Outerbridge, representing Henry & Lee, New York, appeared before the Committee on Ways and Means and made the following statement:

"I shall, as briefly as possible, draw your attention to section 251 of Schedule G, relative to tariff revision, as touching all classes of bulbs and bulbous roots, which are cultivated for their flowers, whether imported from Japan, China, Bermuda, France, Holland or Germany, which are the principal markets of production, and from which sources of supply are derived the majority of bulbs that now enter the United States for consumption and for the production of blooms or flowers for decorative purposes.

"First. Lily bulbs and their product may be correctly termed as an article of luxury to a greater or lesser degree, and as such, in our opinion, should pay a duty of from twenty-five to thirty per cent ad valorem, which amount enters to such a small degree in the price of the flowers to the consumer as to be hardly noticeable.

"Second. The business in lily bulbs is largely done by solicitation of orders from seedsmen and florists for a period of the first six months of the year, or from January to June, at which time advance orders are booked and orders placed abroad for the supply, which is imported into the United States and entered for consumption from June to December.

"Third. With a protective tariff of twenty-five to thirty per cent, it is our opinion that the interests of the people engaged in this trade are better protected, inasmuch as such a duty will serve as a means of protecting the importers and the purchasers of the bulbs, and the florists who force the bulbs into bloom, from the likelihood of detrimental consignments of cheap and inferior bulbs being thrown on this market at or near the close of the season, and so interfere with the sale of the higher qualities brought into the country under advance import orders.

"We therefore respectfully request that the committee either retain the present tariff of twenty-five per cent ad valorem on all grades and varieties of lily bulbs, or if there is to be any change in the tariff that the rate be increased to thirty per cent ad valorem, as it is at present assessed on all agricultural and garden seeds."

In reply to a question, Mr. Outerbridge said he "had reference to the bulbs imported from the places named. The bulbs imported from Japan are longiflorum, auratum and speciosum; those imported from Bermuda are the Harrisii and longiflorum; those imported from Holland are lilies and different varieties of hyacinths, tulips and narcissus. From France there are imported Roman hyacinths and narcissus, from Germany lily of the valley and from China Chinese narcissus. We are asking for a continuation of the duty, and if you wish to raise it to thirty per cent, five per cent more."

Nurserymen Propose Free Bulbs.

William Pitkin, representing the American Association of Nurserymen, appeared before the Ways and Means Committee and, preliminary to asking a number of changes and increases in the rates on nursery stock, stated:

"We ask that the following items be placed on the free list, for the reason that they are not propagated in this country, and we must depend on foreign countries for our supply, viz.: Rhododendrons, azaleas, tulips, crocus, hyacinths, narcissi, jonquils, lilies, lily of the valley."

THE SEED SITUATION.

The general situation in the seed trade has not changed materially from the reports of a week ago. Christmas trade has kept many busy in lines somewhat removed from shortages and surpluses of seeds, and consequently little stir has taken place. It is likely that we will be well into the new year before the seed dispensers will get busy to cover where shortages exist, or to push out surpluses.

Peas are probably the most annoying item to get a proper line on. Beans are not worrying anyone very much, judging from current reports. Many varieties of water melon are hard to locate, and what can be located is quite inferior as to germinating quality. Some of the musk melons are scarce and high. Beets of some sorts are short; in one or two instances very much so. Sweet corn is developing more plentiful than some of the growers originally reported it. The canners' sorts, such as Evergreen, Old Colony and Country Gentleman, are turning up at points where they were not looked for.

Contract orders for 1909 crop are coming in freely at prices much higher than those prevailing at the same time last year. Onion seed has steadied and the prices reported at present values correspond to those named in the Review of some weeks back. The summer varieties of squash are reported scarce. Hubbard and Marrow will be easy; Warty Hubbard not so plentiful, and a choice article of this sort scarce.

The demand for the canners' varieties of tomato has increased to such an extent that, although a fairly good supply is in sight, a shortage of some of the most popular varieties is quite likely to develop. The cucumber situation is such that extremely high values may be looked for long before the demand is over. The White Spine sorts are not so scarce as

We desire to extend our already large business with our Colonies and the United States, America, in the above class of seeds, our great specialty. We know that our seeds have been the means of enabling many lovers of old-fashioned hardy perennials and Alpine plants to obtain a good collection at a very small cost, whereas the expense of getting plants from England is prohibitory in most cases. Catalog, which contains descriptions of nearly 3000 kinds of flower seeds of all classes, including latest novelties, and also much educational matter, will be sent free on application. Established over 50 years.

the black spined varieties and in the latter class the pickling sorts are more scarce than the long varieties.

The outlook all along the line is good and reports generally indicate that the trade generally is looking for 1909 to be the best year in the history of the seed business.

CUCUMBER PRICES.

It is the opinion of some of the leading seedsmen that the shortage of cucumber calls for not less than the following wholesale prices:

Varieties.	Per lb.
Early Russian	$0.70
Early Green Cluster	.70
Early Frame	.70
Thorburn's Everbearing	.70
Early Green Prolific	.75
Boston Pickling	.75

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

The cloudy weather last week had a telling effect on the Christmas cut of roses. The Beauty growers in this section will have enough to go around. They are listed at $12 to $15 per dozen for the best, wholesale. Poinsettias were never better; large vases and baskets are to be seen in all the windows.

There is an abundance of holly this year. It is fine and well berried. Farmers with wagon loads can be seen on the streets all day long and it sells for almost any price. Mistletoe is also plentiful and good. While there is plenty of the winter berries to be had, they have a tendency to drop more freely than other years.

Christmas trees are only handled by a few of the florists to any great extent. W. W. Kimmel is probably the largest dealer in this line. He wholesales and retails. George C. Shaffer and Z. D. Blackistone handle quite a few. The trees this year are fine; they bring about the same price as last year.

Azaleas are plentiful. The Gude Bros. Co. will have an unusually large number to wholesale this year.

Last week was a busy one. The chief of the District of Columbia Fire Department died very suddenly, which called for a large number of pieces. There were four heaped wagon loads sent to the cemetery and every florist in town had some. There were wreaths, bunches, ladders, gates ajar and every other known funeral design. Two of the designs were particularly attractive. One of these was a fire alarm box on a post, with the number of his last alarm. The other was a horse and chief's buggy. The horse was made of white carnations and the buggy of Enchantress carnations. The harness was of purple chenille. The base was of white mums, roses and orchids.

Quite a number of pieces were sent

This year's farm crops in America are worth Eight Thousand Million. Leave us alone and BUSINESS WILL BOOM.

READ THIS GIGANTEUM FOR 1909

Giganteum is today the best commercial lily produced in quantities for florists' use. Any grower should be able to force them for Easter. Retarded bulbs can be forced in from 12 to 16 weeks. Good Gigs can always be depended upon.

Inferior bulbs are planted near the top of the soil, so they will round out and grow to the required size quicker and bring quicker returns. Superior bulbs are planted deep down in the soil, requiring more cultivation, making them stronger before they grow to size, and consequently cost more to produce.

Your experience tells you to buy the best, because the cheapest often cost the most. Remember "He who gives something for nothing, expects something for nothing in return." Always buy the best and you will generally get it.

Our bulbs come direct from the plantations owned and controlled by Mr. Seitaro Arai, the largest grower and exporter of high-class bulbs for florists' use in Japan. You may write him direct if you wish, or write us for prices, stating quantities you can use. You incur no obligation whatever in writing us. Jobbers and growers supplied only. Cases may be stenciled to order. Strictly wholesale.

over from Baltimore. The chief was popular there, on account of the good work done there by the District Department during the Baltimore fire.

Another piece worthy of mention was sent to the funeral of the late Rev. Kent, of the People's church. It was a pulpit and open Bible. The pulpit was made of green galax and outlined with white roses, with sprays of Maids on each panel. The base was of Gate roses. The open book was made of white carnations, edged with pink carnations. A spray of orchids lay on each page.

The Gude Bros. Co. had the Portner-Meredith wedding. The church was done in bamboo, southern smilax and palms. The flowers used were Nonin mums and white roses. There were large white silk globes on wicker standards, lighted with electric lights. The globes were decorated with asparagus and white orchids. At the house Killarney and Beauty roses were used. The main feature was the conservatory. This had a number of balls of Killarney roses hung at various heights, with pink ribbons intermingled with pink paper roses over electric globes. The walls were done in asparagus. Palms and crotons were used for banking. The Gude Bros. Co. has just turned on the steam in its two new houses, a fern house 28x260 and a forcing house 10x260.

William F. Gude and George Cooke were over in Philadelphia last week, looking over the novelties.

Mr. Smithie, the box man, representing W. J. Boas, was in town. O. O.

ROCKFORD, ILL.

Organization of Club.

A number of the leading representatives of the trade met at the home of C. H. Woolsey, State and Longwood streets, December 10, and took the first steps in the formation of a club.

The organization will be known as the Rockford Florists' and Gardeners' Club and all persons engaged in these callings will be eligible to membership. The usual exchange of views on floriculture and horticulture will be a feature of the meetings and civic improvement will be taken up as far as possible. Meetings will be held the first and third Mondays of each month.

George S. Birks, gardener for Ralph Emerson, was elected president and M. C. Sadewater was chosen secretary.

The latter portion of the first meeting was devoted to a banquet in the home of Mr. Woolsey, who afforded a fine spread, which was a surprise to the members of the organization.

Those present, forming the present membership, were as follows: George S. Birks, M. S. Sadewater, C. H. Woolsey, J. J. Soper, H. B. Sullivan, Henry Mueller, Samuel Levi, Dan Chamberlain, L. C. Shearer, Frank Fernbach, Frank Zimmerman, George Moncar, Magnus Smith; C. W. Johnson, superintendent for H. W. Buckbee Seed Co.; Arthur Jones, gardener for D. J. Stewart, and Mr. Westerberg, of the Buckbee force.

Westville, N. H.—A. D. Emerson began business about fifteen years ago as a grower of vegetables. This branch of the business he still follows, with increasing success. With his vegetable plants he has made a specialty of aster and pansy plants, his pansy plants being grown from seed of his own importation. About three or four years ago he made his entrance into the cut flower trade by starting to grow violets, and since then he has added the growing of carnations. His house of carnations, 24x102, speaks well for his skill as a grower.

LILIUM PHILIPPINENSE

We have a splendid home-grown stock of this great Lily, the flowers of which are equal, if not superior to Harrisii or Longiflorum. Will force in 90 days. For summer bloom is unexcelled. Will bloom year after year. Large, sound Bulbs, $1.25 per dozen, postpaid; $8.00 per 100.

TROUBLE WITH CYCLAMENS.

What makes a cyclamen leaf curl and crimp up? Is it plant lice, or moisture on the leaves? I have never grown cyclamen before and desire to know the cause and remedy. H. E. G.

Attacks of green aphis will cause leaf curl on cyclamens. The most probable reason, however, is the dreaded mite, for which no real remedy is yet known. Without seeing sample leaves, I am unable to tell whether or not you have this. Would advise throwing away badly affected plants. Dip the others in tobacco water to clear off any thrips or aphis. Pack some fresh tobacco stems among the pots once a fortnight and fumigate each week. Stir up the surface soil. Water carefully and grow in a light, airy house kept at 45 degrees as a minimum. C. W.

PLEASE discontinue my advertisements in the REVIEW, as I am about sold out. Your paper certainly sells the stuff.—G. E. FINK, Roselle, N. J.

THE VEGETABLE MARKET.

The market conditions on hothouse vegetables are decidedly better so far this year than a year ago. Cucumbers have held firm and have been scarce. Lettuce has been plentiful, but has sold much better than last year. Radishes are in fair supply and demand.

Tomatoes seem to drag the most. This is on account of the great quantities of Los Angeles tomatoes which have been on the market and already a few are arriving from Florida. Hothouse tomatoes have been bringing from 10 cents to 20 cents per pound. Last season the prices were about double present prices. Growers say that they cannot make anything on hothouse tomatoes unless they average 20 cents per pound. H. G.

LETTUCE FROM SEED.

In the Review of December 10, page 51, I noticed an article under the head of "Vegetables for Christmas," stating that salable lettuce could be grown from seed in eight weeks. We would be glad to know how this is accomplished, and also how many pounds can be grown in that time on 100 square feet.

H. M. H.

Grand Rapids lettuce can be marketed eight weeks from the date of planting the seed if the weather is good, but in the shortest, darkest days it may take a trifle longer sometimes, especially in the prolonged periods of cloudy weather we often have in midwinter. The heading varieties take ten days to two weeks longer to get in marketable shape.

The seed should be sown in a soft, cleanly sifted soil, pressed down smooth with a flat piece of wood, but not packed down hard. Sow the seed rather thickly and then barely cover it with finely sifted soil and put in a warm place until germinated. If the soil is just moist, it will hardly need sprinkling until the seeds have sprouted. Placing a pane of glass over the box of seed will keep the seed warmer, make it sprout much more quickly and evenly and also retain the moisture so that the soil will not dry out. This glass must be removed as soon as the seed is up. Just as soon as the plants are large enough to transplant, prick them off into a bench or other boxes, placing them two inches apart. They may remain in these boxes until they are about two or two and one-half inches tall; then they should be transplanted to the bench where they are to stay until cut to sell.

The soil should be loose and good. Four or five inches of soil is deep enough if the pipes below are not too close to the bottom of the bench, thus drying out the soil too quickly.

Some growers plant the Grand Rapids 8x8 inches, the same as head lettuce, and others plant it 6x8 and 6x6. I am inclined to think that the closer distance is just as well or better. In most markets lettuce is sold by the dozen instead of the pound, and the number of plants that can be grown on a bench in your house can easily be figured by taking the width and finding how many plants can be put in a row across it.

The profit depends upon the market. If it can be sold to local produce men or grocers, the prices will be much better than if shipped. Grand Rapids Forcing is the best for western growers, but eastern markets demand the head lettuce. Rawson's Hothouse is a good strain of the heading variety for forcing. H. G.

GNATS IN CUCUMBER HOUSE.

I am sending you a sample of a fly and worms that are injuring my cucumbers. Will you kindly show them to someone who may know what they are and how to exterminate them? I have also put in two roots, to show what they are doing to them. T. J.

The little flies or gnats are a common pest with cucumber growers in some localities. They are the same little gnats that swarm about fresh horse manure piles in warm weather. They are taken to the greenhouses with the manure and usually do not trouble other crops than cucumbers. This is easily accounted for by the fact that fresh manure is much used for cucumber growing, but seldom for other hothouse crops.

After using fresh horse manure, or some that is not thoroughly rotted, in preparing the beds, only a few of these little flies may be seen in the greenhouses for a while; but in about six weeks they come in great swarms, sometimes being numerous enough to darken the house by literally covering the glass, to which they fly and get stuck when the glass is wet. They also wash down with the condensation, filling the grooves in the bars and the gutter drip conductors and causing them to overflow and drip everywhere. When there is a very bad attack of them it can easily be detected by the foul odor that greets the grower on entering the houses before they are ventilated in the morning.

The larvæ of this little fly are so small that they can hardly be seen without a microscope, but they often get so numerous that they work the soil up like a loose ants' nest. They do not eat the roots, nor do the mature flies injure the plants above, but the myriads of larvæ in the soil work it over so thoroughly and get it so foul that the roots do not do well, and often the plants wither and die from the effects.

The best remedy is to sprinkle the soil with tobacco water or any of the nicotine preparations, diluted according to directions. This will act as a fertilizer to the plants, at the same time killing the larvæ in the soil. It is pretty hard to prevent an attack from them where horse manure is used, unless it is well rotted or used very fresh. Plenty of air-slaked lime, scattered over it when piling it up by layers, will do much to keep them out of it. There are really few cases where crops are ruined by them, as they do not often appear all over a house or in such great quantities, often coming and going without any effect on the plants. I think the best way to handle them is to hunt out the spot where they hatch, finding it by means of the strong, foul odor, and dope it with a liquid made by boiling tobacco stems—tobacco soup, my men call it. H. G.

MOLES IN GREENHOUSES.

Is there any method of exterminating ground moles in a greenhouse? Our main crop is lettuce, grown on the ground beds, and the moles have been doing tremendous damage there, having a tunnel under almost every plant.

E. S. M.

One or two moles will cause a great deal of annoyance in a greenhouse and make so many tunnels that it would appear that there are a score of them. There is but one really good exterminator and that is a mole trap, which can be purchased of any seedsman or supply house, and also in some hardware stores. These traps are an iron stake arrangement, which is driven into the ground close to one of the main runs. A lever projects over the run, and when the stake leg of the trap is pressed into the ground far enough this paddle-shaped lever or trigger presses down on the soil where it had been raised by the mole. When Mr. Mole comes along his tunnel, he has to raise the soil again in that particular spot where the trigger of the trap is pressing down on it. In raising the soil again the soil pushes up on the trigger, sets the trap off, and six sharp steel prongs, driven by a powerful spring, shoot down into the ground, spearing the mole every time.

Moles seem to work most in the night, but are often running in the daytime between 10 and 12 a. m. It is said that they will not work in a lawn where a few castor bean plants are growing. I do not know how true that is, but I never had one in my lawn and I always have two or three castor beans around, for the tropical effect which the large, shiny leaves lend to the floral arrangement.

The Market.

All of the last week the wholesalers had plenty of stock of almost everything in season, with the demand not so good as the week previous, and we had our usual dull spell just before the holidays. From the looks of the market Monday, December 21, there will be plenty of stock in all grades and at prices within reach of everybody. The demand for holly, greens and mistletoe is as good as any year. Those who handle plants say that Lorraine begonias, poinsettias and azaleas are much in favor this year. There is a great demand for California violets for Christmas. These will be up to $2 per hundred. Fancy grades in roses will bring from $12 to $15 per hundred, and American Beauties $12 per dozen for extra long fancy.

Carnations will go as high as $6 to $8 per hundred and cut poinsettias up to $3 per dozen. Bulb stock will hardly advance in price, and we look for a big supply of Romans, Paper Whites and lily of the valley. There is also a lot of extra good quality of sweet peas in white, pink and lavender. These, with stevia, callas and Harrisii, will make up the market for the Christmas holidays. The demand for adiantum, smilax and asparagus has been fairly good.

Various Notes.

Ostertag Bros. had the Christmas decoration at the gas office and furnished 10,000 bunches of holly, each with a ribbon, to be given to customers who visit the office.

J. W. Dunford has opened a branch store at Eighth and Olive streets, under the name of the Gallagher Flower Shop, and is making a nice show.

Louis Gieger has left the employ of Grimm & Gorley, where he was employed as foreman at the greenhouses. He has taken a position with J. W. Dunford.

C. Young & Sons Co. has one of the most attractively decorated Christmas store fronts in the city. The blooming plant display is good.

The last week the weather was such that it scarcely seemed like Christmas. The only reminders were the holly, greens and Christmas decorations all over town. It was more like September; the temperature was up to 71 degrees.

George Waldbart and Mrs. Ayers stocked up with extra fine blooming plants for Christmas trade, with a good many of them early marked "Sold."

Out in the west end all the florists made special preparations for the rush this week. F. C. Weber, Ellison, Kalisch, F. H. Weber and J. F. Windt have extra fine displays. They all are looking for a busy week, and especially so with plants.

The Florists' Bowling Club will not do any bowling until after the holidays. The last bowling Monday, December 14, was poorly attended. The first bowling after New Year's will be ladies' night, with special attractions.

J. J. B.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Wood Bros., of Fishkill, N. Y., report an unusually busy season and are booked up full for the holidays. They believe in advertising and attribute their success to this fact.

Adam Laub & Son, of Wappingers Falls, N. Y., are steady advertisers and pride themselves, and that justly, on results obtained. I found Mr. Laub, Sr., in a reminiscent mood and he reverted back beyond thirty-five years, when he first landed upon this pleasant spot, which was destined to produce specimens of the divine flower hardly credible. I noted a solid bed of Rose-pink Enchantress fairly crowded with blooms, which averaged three inches and over across and were of richest color and vigor. The trio of Pink, Rose-pink and White Enchantress luxuriate here. The boys say it is the soil, but there is something more than that. I do not recall seeing Victory in finer condition. It is not a heavy, but a continuous bloomer, and a good keeper. Lady Bountiful will be discarded here after this season. In chrysanthemums, Jerome Jones and Jeanne Nonin are considered the two best successive whites. Chadwick is as popular as ever. A full bench of cuttings looks promising for early disposal.

James Duncan, of New Hamburg, N. Y., is one of the few successful growers of Marie Louise violets outside the belt, having several houses devoted to their culture. He also grows mignonette second to none, and has a fine lot of lælias and Oncidium tigrinum in bloom for Christmas.

The Saltford Flower Shop, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., thrives in a Vassar atmosphere, although Mr. Saltford, Jr., says it is vice versa. Certain it is that the boys make a fine showing and deserve all that is coming their way. The window is dressed in red and green. A new cabinet has been installed, running the entire length of the store, and contains the latest creations in green of the potter's art. A conservatory in the rear is kept supplied with choice plants, and, as Mr. Saltford, Sr., remarked, it keeps him scratching to grow the necessary stock.

A new Kroeschell boiler, recently installed, is giving entire satisfaction.

A. W. Williams, of Highland, N. Y., says his cut has brought him as good returns as heretofore, which means that his stock must be fully up to the usual high standard.

States Sarles, of Marlboro, N. Y., was more than pleased when his Monrovia chrysanthemums brought $35 per hundred in New York, proving that the market for extra fine stock was not overdone. He has a heavy cut of carnations for the holidays.

The Newburgh Floral Co., of Newburgh, N. Y., is shipping extra fine Enchantress and smilax.

George Crawshaw, of Newburgh, says he cannot get enough stock, funeral work taking all he can grow.

The Schaefer Co., of Newburgh, is making a pretty showing of holiday plants, well grown, and reports good advance orders.

The Yuess Gardens Co., of Newburgh, makes a handsome window display of seasonable stock, chiefly begonias and poinsettias. They are carrying a big stock of well grown plants and are preparing a large batch of rooted cuttings in carnations and geraniums for the trade. M.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Trade Conditions.

Evergreens were never more plentiful in this market than this year, owing to the lack of snow and water in the swamps. The great supply has resulted in lower prices ruling than usual. In addition to the evergreens, holly, laurel and box wreaths are seen in large numbers at reasonable prices. The buying of these decorations began fully a week early this year, and the demand has steadily increased every day. Potted plants are also in good demand. One feature that is new for this city, although heretofore used elsewhere, is the various sized balls of box with red immortelles. The first of these were introduced by John F. Wood and were quickly to be found in the stock of the other dealers.

The big demand for bright red flowers of all kinds for the Christmas season began early, and the stock of crimson carnations has become so depleted that the price on these has nearly doubled and will make further advances during the next few days. The weather for the last fortnight has not been conducive to free blooming and there is a falling off in all kinds of cut stock. This is especially true regarding violets, which are scarce and high.

Complaints are heard on all hands of the fact that there is not a single grower in the entire state who propagates potted plants for the Christmas holiday season. All the stock of this character used in this vicinity has to be brought in by express from Boston, and the condition in which the plants arrive is not always the best. There are a few growers who grow potted stock for the spring, but this is mostly of the bedding varieties and does not include the fancy house plants. It is believed by many of the dealers that any grower within a few miles of this city who would start in for potted stock for the holidays would find it a remunerative business.

Various Notes.

Edward Murray, for many years with Johnston Bros., is now associated with J. Kopelman & Co., Washington street.

James B. Canning had the decorations for the annual ball of the Providence Policemen's Relief Association at Infantry hall, on Wednesday evening, December 16.

Joseph Lisle is now with T. J. Johnston & Co., Weybosset street.

At the funeral of Chief of Police John Bigbee, of Cranston, last week, there was an unusual number of large floral pieces, including gates ajar, standing wreaths and crosses. It was the largest display so far this season and was divided among the various florists.

The T. F. Keller Floral Co., with Thomas F. Keller as manager, has opened an up-to-date store at Weybosset street, directly opposite Mathewson street.

Henry Patrie is now associated with O. H. Williams & Son, Mathewson street.

N. G. Pierson, of Norwood, is bringing in some good violets, though rather short cropped for the number of plants under cultivation. He reports a better cut during the last few days than a week ago.

The Hoffman Flower Store, 320 Main street, Pawtucket, is one of the busiest places in that city, and the demand for cut flowers and potted stock has put a heavy strain upon the greenhouses connected with the store.

Among those specifically thanked in the formal acknowledgment of the donations to the Carter Day Nursery festival appear the names of Eugene McCarren, Thomas F. Keller, Johnston Bros. and James B. Canning. W. H. M.

The Market.

After a week of frosty weather, there has been a decided change in the aspect of things in the floral line. Flowers have become much scarcer than they have been at any time this season and the prices have advanced quite a little. Carnations, which ten days ago could be bought for $2 per hundred, have doubled in price and everything else has risen in proportion. In roses the change has been most marked and Beauties cannot be purchased from any local growers at less than $2.50 to $5 per dozen. Brides and Maids cost the stores 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen. Violets have not yet been advanced in price, but if the present cold snap continues we may expect it at any time.

Outside mums are holding out well and, although the cold snap has played havoc with the edges of the petals, they are still the best selling article that the stores carry. Narcissi of the white and yellow varieties are getting a little more plentiful and they are proving a good help in floral work. Valley is plentiful, but moves slowly. Poinsettias, both the cut variety from Los Angeles and the home grown pot stock, sell well. The smaller sizes have been arranged in pans and baskets and are proving up well. The prices charged by the growers are from $6 to $9 per dozen for single plants in 6-inch pots. The cut flowers from the south sell at from $10 to $15 per hundred, with the express charges added.

California red berries are being sold by the ton daily and the hucksters are finding them to be one of their most profitable sources of revenue. Outside of a brisk funeral trade, there is but little doing in the stores. Everyone is waiting for Christmas week to come and, from present indications, it will be a busy proposition.

ROSE PLANTS FOR HEDGES.

The use of roses for the making of a permanent hedge is a proposition often overlooked in the planting of a garden, but it is one of the most beautiful and satisfactory ways to show many varieties to advantage.

There are many sorts that do not stand trimming well and many that have poor blooming qualities and poorer foliage, but among the teas there are quite a few that answer all the requirements for a satisfactory hedge.

The Agrippina, although not a tea rose, is more used for this purpose than any other sort. It is naturally of a rather dwarf growth and in the climate of San Francisco it flowers every day in the year. Continued pruning rather accentuates this condition than otherwise, and during the months of April, May and June a well cropped hedge will be so covered with blooms that the foliage and stems will be entirely covered. It can be kept at any desired height almost indefinitely, the writer having in mind a hedge over twenty years old that is only two feet high and the same in width.

Among the less showy colors, the Duchess de Brabant is the best hedge rose in the pink sorts. It is almost as good a bloomer as the Agrippina and the blossoms are of rather more value. Mlle. Cecil Bruner has few equals for this purpose and, while it does not make a showy hedge rose, it is a constant bloomer and the flowers are of considerable value.

In the yellow sorts the old-fashioned Safrano is by far the most desirable. It is an endless bloomer and stands trimming well.

The hybrid perpetual roses are not as good for hedges as are the others. They do not bloom as profusely, they do not care to be trimmed as often and the flowers want plenty of stem room. They are good, however, if there is no desire to limit the height of the hedge, but where a low, closely cropped effect is desired, the other varieties I have mentioned will better answer the purpose. G.

RANDOLPH, VT.—H. M. Totman has obtained a fine water supply for his greenhouses by the purchase of the Frank Morse spring, which has already developed a flow of eight gallons a minute. The spring is southwest of the village reservoir and seventy feet higher than the greenhouses, to which it will be piped overland this winter with 1,225 feet of pipe. Next summer Mr. Totman will build a private reservoir and provide his greenhouses with an independent system of water supply.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

THE nursery interests are a unit in wanting an increase in the rate on foreign-grown rose plants, but there is a great deal of difference in opinion as to what advance is needed.

WENCEL L. CUKERSKI will retire from the superintendency of the city parks at Grand Rapids, Mich., with the close of the year, and in the spring will build greenhouses on West Fulton street, where he owns fifteen lots of rich bottom land. He is prospecting, also, for a tract of land to use as a nursery. He already has about 25,000 shrubs and plants on his West Fulton street lots.

PROPAGATING BIOTA.

Will you be so kind as to inform us how to propagate Biota aurea nana and silver cedar from cuttings? We have some fine specimens and would very much like to propagate them. How should the stock plants be handled and when should the cuttings be taken? At what temperature should the sand and house be? Any information would be valuable to us. G. A. Y.

Although it would have been much better if cuttings from the evergreens mentioned in the query had been put in a month or more ago, still the work may be done now with a fair hope of success.

Cuttings should be of the past season's growth, making them about four inches in length by cutting with a sharp knife. Immediately after the cuttings are made they should be put in flats, which previously had been made ready for their reception by being filled to within about an inch of the tops of the boards with clean sand. But first should come the all-important precaution of providing ample drainage, which can be done by putting half rotted leaves or soil screenings, to the depth of one inch, in the bottoms of the flats. The cuttings should be placed in rows in the flats, with both the cuttings and the rows pretty close to each other.

After the cuttings are in the flats a good watering should be given, in order that the minute particles of sand may find lodgment around the base of the cuttings, the better to enable them to stand unmoved and callous quickly. If it is convenient to place the cuttings where they can have a little bottom heat without the existence of a higher temperature than about 55 degrees for a time, so much the better. After a few weeks a warmer temperature may aid them in rooting. The cuttings should be kept moderately moist, never allowing the sand to get dry. Movable shade should be at hand, so that on bright days they can be protected until they begin to make roots, when shade will not be required.

In spring or early summer, if a good proportion of the cuttings contained in each flat look as if they are rooted, it will be well either to pot each plant separately in a small pot and place them close together in a frame outdoors, or plant them in the open ground in a frame. In either case, when the weather gets warm a covering of glass will be unnecessary, but it is always advisable to have a covering of slats on hand in preparation for unfavorable weather conditions. If, on the other hand, the cuttings are not rooted, they ought to be left in the sand in the flats, but they will be better in some protected place outdoors than if left in a high temperature indoors.

Instead of putting in all the cuttings

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

Price, 75c for 5 (of one variety); $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. (Immediate delivery).

Alfred Colomb. Carmine.
Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; very fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
FRAU KARL DRUSCHKI. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose-pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale-flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

STANDARD OR TREE ROSES

(Grafted on Rosa Canina or Rugosa Stock.)

Large, well-grown, selected plants in the best and most serviceable varieties 35c each, $3.25 for 10, $25.00 per 100.

ENGLISH MOSS ROSES

Assorted white, pink and red. Large dormant plants, from open ground. 10c each, 85c for 5, $12.00 per 100.

CRIMSON RAMBLER

American grown. The only stock for forcing.

Large, heavy plants, two years old, mossed and packed in bundles of 10.

	10	100
2 to 3 feet	$1.00	$ 7.50
3 to 5 feet	1.25	10.00
5 to 6 feet	1.75	15.00

DOROTHY PERKINS

Resembles the Crimson Rambler, except in color, which is a lovely shell-pink, holding a long time without fading. $1.25 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

PHILADELPHIA RAMBLER

Extra fine, American-grown stock.

	10	100
3 to 4 feet	$1.75	$15.00
4 to 5 feet	2.00	18.00
5 to 6 feet	2.25	20.00

WEDDING BELLS

A seedling of the Crimson Rambler. The most floriferous Rose yet produced. The color is white with the upper half of the petals soft pink. Fine for forcing. Perfectly hardy. Extra strong, 3-year, field-grown flowering plants, 4 to 5 feet, $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

LADY GAY

A seedling from the popular Crimson Rambler, which it resembles in habit and general effect. The flowers are of a delicate cherry-pink color, which fades to soft white. Strong plants, field-grown, 4 to 5 ft., $1.75 for 10, $15.00 per 100; extra strong, 6 to 7 ft., $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

MARECHAL NIEL

Color, bright, rich golden yellow. Field-grown, 15c each, 65c for 5, $12.00 per 100.

GLOIRE DE DIJON

Color, buff, orange center, very sweet-scented. Field-grown, 15c each, 65c for 5, $12.00 per 100.

THE BABY RAMBLER

(Mme. Norbert Levavasseur)

Strong field-grown plants, $1.50 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grown as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100.

A New Baby Rambler Rose

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

NEW ROSE
WHITE KILLARNEY

Come and see White Killarney growing at our Scarborough houses, and you will say at once, as every one does who has seen it, it is they have ever seen. You need it if you want to be up to the times, and it will pay you better than any other white rose that you can plant. You will regret it if you do not plant it this year, and you will not regret it if you do. Big lots are being booked. Get your order in early. Send us order at once, while you think of it. Get early stock. It will not cost you any more to order today, while you think of it, than it will two months from now. Be the early bird that catches the worm.

Strong young plants, 2¼-inch pots, own root, ready for delivery beginning February 15, 1909, $30 per 100, 250 for $70, 500 for $125, 1000 for $250. Grafted plants, ready for delivery March 1, 1909, $5 per 100 additional.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 now that can be successfully handled later, it will be well to put in quite a number late next summer, outdoors in a shady place, where they will root quickly. A shelter of a frame with slat covering will be helpful then, too.

As to how the stock plants should be handled: If, as I presume, they are growing outdoors, they should be allowed to remain so, with such protection, if any, as conditions make necessary.

By the way, although it may not be pertinent in answer to this query, a complete covering in of specimen evergreens with boards often does more harm than good, especially when such covering is removed absolutely and at once in the spring. It is better to cover the surface of the soil with manure or forest leaves and, if it is deemed necessary to protect further, place some branches of hemlock or the like on the sunny side of the plants. New Department—Rooted Cuttings

So many customers and other growers have asked us to supply Young Stock (rooted cuttings and 2½-inch plants), that we have decided to add this department as a regular line of our business. We shall handle only such Young Stock as we know to be first-class in every respect—from growers we know to produce and ship nothing but the best. At the same time, our outlet is so large we can make quick sale for all growers who have first-class Young Stock of desirable varieties.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week brought no new developments, so far as the cut flower market was concerned. There was just about enough demand to clean out the receipts, but there were plenty of cheap roses on the market and there was little improvement in the prices obtained even for the best. Carnations fared a trifle better and the average price shows an increase; still, when compared with last year it is not especially encouraging. Violets continue to hold their own and to bring a good price. As is usual in this market, the single ones take the lead. Poinsettias are on hand and they are fine. This flower always has its place in the holiday season and it is selling about the same as usual. With the possible exception of calla and Harrisii lilies, there are not so many bulbous flowers for the holidays. George & Allan, who in the past have forced such large quantities of this class of stock, have cut away down on the numbers they are forcing this year. They will have fine valley and narcissi and will get a good price for what they have.

The market is full of holly, but the quality is below par. This is not the case with all of it, of course, but when buying you have to be onto your job if you don't want to get stung.

Various Notes.

From all reports Park Superintendent J. W. Rodgers has received a pretty fine Christmas present in the way of a raise in his salary of $1,000 per year. It is presumed that with the greater activity in the way of park improvement in this city he will be kept still more closely to his work and the new park commission deemed it worth the extra money.

George Durban has opened a store at Hamilton avenue and Knowlton street, Cumminsville, under the name of the North Side Floral Bazaar. This is in the center of the business district in Cumminsville and it would look as if there was a chance there for a retail store to succeed.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia, was a caller.

MAY DAY

"We desire to call the attention of the trade to our seedling carnation, May Day. We have been growing this variety at our place for the past five seasons, and only within the last few days have we decided to disseminate it.

"It is a deep satin pink, indescribably bright, and holds its color admirably under all conditions. Stem is good, calyx all one could desire. Its freedom is unexcelled by any variety, it being no unusual thing to be able to count from 20 to 25 flowering shoots on one plant at a time. Its habit of growth is perfect.

"We have grown this variety in quantities for the past three years for its flowers and find the demand for it much greater among our customers than for the well known variety Enchantress. We attribute this to its charming and exquisite shade of color and to its remarkable keeping qualities."

Prices, per 100, $12.00; per 1000, $100.00; 2500, $95.00 per 1000; 5000, $90.00 per 1000. To be disseminated early in 1909.

We endorse Mr. Grave's description; the variety has a splendid habit, a good stem, strong calyx, and we know of nothing freer, while in color it is unapproachable, that soft, brilliant shade universally admired; besides this, it is one of the finest keepers we have ever handled.

Orders booked now, and filled in rotation.

Florists attending the Indianapolis meeting of the American Carnation Society are invited to stop at Richmond and see the variety growing.

Club Meeting.

The Minnesota State Florists' Association met Tuesday evening, December 15, the meeting being called to order by President Wirth, in the new quarters on Snelling avenue, St. Paul. A large number of the members were present, and a very interesting meeting was held.

Holm & Olson, of St. Paul, exhibited some fine plants of cyclamens and Lorraine begonias; also their new begonia, Gertrude, with foliage and flowers larger than those of Lorraine. These plants were among the finest ever seen in the Twin Cities, and they received the approbation of all the members. E. Nagel showed some nice plants of Primula obconica in 4½-inch pots, an excellent strain. J. Jorgenson exhibited some fine Enchantress and White Enchantress, with good stems and large flowers. His Beacon, Bride and Bridesmaid roses were well worthy of mention. Carl Haugen showed some good violets, Marie Louise and Princess of Wales. A. J. Smith came in with some first-class poinsettias.

J. Jorgenson read an interesting paper on his impressions of the national flower show.

J. Smith, head gardener to James Bland, Quarry Bank, Allerton, England, showed a photograph of a well grown plant of Lilium auratum, from a single bulb, bearing 225 flowers; height, nine feet; over six feet through, grown in 1865. He also read an interesting paper on the means he employed to grow the plant. The members tendered a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Smith, and hoped he would come again.

President Wirth showed plans prepared by Lord & Burnham Co. for a new building at the State Fair grounds, and it is the intention of the association to try to use its influence to get the State Fair committee to accept them.

Everyone expressed himself satisfied with the new hall, and more interest was shown than for some time before.

Visitors last week were J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O., and Charles Schwake, representing C. F. Meyer, New York city.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf

A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal: closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby

Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Last week was a busy one. There are about enough roses, carnations and other flowers to supply the demand. Holly, green and immortelle wreathing are having a good run.

Some good Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, poinsettias and cyclamens are seen in downtown stores this year. Sweet peas of good quality are coming in and bring good prices at present. Violets, lily of the valley, narcissi and other bulbous stock are in good supply and demand. Much stevia is used in funeral work and it is well liked here. Green goods are in good supply and demand.

Various Notes.

Shearer The Florist, at Winchester, has opened a downtown store. He will build two houses, 32x200, for roses and carnations the coming summer.

James P. Keller was in Cincinnati recently. An excellent lot of plants was seen in his downtown store.

The writer took a stroll over to the State University last Sunday and found the greenhouses in good shape. The new house is one of the best to be seen in this section.

John A. Keller's carnations are the best ever seen in this vicinity.

Lucien Leclere's primulas are fine. He says they are the best he ever had.

Frank McMullen has been very busy of late.

BLUE GRASS.

GREENWICH, CONN. — Probably the largest decoration ever put up here was for the dinner and dance recently given by Mrs. James Everard. MacMillen & Co. had the order and Robert MacMillen reports using, among other things, 1,500 strings of smilax, 500 mums, 350 orchids, and 400 yards of ribbon.

NARCISSUS BULBS DECAYING.

What reason would you give for the rotting of Golden Spur and Trumpet Major (imported), which were set out in trays? These bulbs were planted in flats in the last part of August. The soil was old chrysanthemum soil that had been thrown out from the benches in November of last year, and left in a heap. It was not turned over for sterilization by the weather. The flats do not appear to have had enough drainage, but where the bulbs had been set near a crack in the bottom of the flat they had made fairly good root by forcing into the soil underneath. Otherwise they had failed to make roots, just simply rotted. A heavy watering was given these in planting, there being twelve inches of soil packed on top and waterings given from time to time. No fertilizer of any kind was used with this soil in planting the bulbs. The bulbs were well examined before planting and appeared perfectly sound. About twenty-five per cent of the Golden Spur rooted and five per cent of the Trumpet Majors. We cannot but think that the soil was sour, and probably the rotting was caused by the water being unable to drain out of the boxes. Bulbs from the same lot were planted outside in the ordinary way. They have splendid roots and are making good shoots. Please understand that those in the trays had not been taken inside.

We noticed that this grower was growing a large quantity of valley pips in the same kind of soil, and also some in moss taken straight from the swamp. These were also rotting badly. They would start to grow and then the leaf would turn yellow and die down; also a fungus started on the stem. On examining some of the bulbs that had not been set out, they were perfectly sound, and the bloom inside, on cutting, opened quite bright and healthy. This grower, who is locally situated, asked us to put this question in the question box. We ourselves can only put it down to sourness of the soil, with probably more water than the trays could drain out. We also noticed that his Easter lilies were doing the same thing in the same soil.

P. B.

There are no doubt several conditions which have combined to cause the rotting of the Trumpet Major and Golden Spur narcissi. In the first place, it was poor policy to use old chrysanthemum soil. Bulbs need fresh, sweet soil just as much as any other plants. It is a popular but erroneous idea that "any old soil" is good enough for bulbs. To grow good narcissi and tulips you need a carefully prepared compost just as much as you do for roses or carnations. We would also judge that the drainage has been faulty; a crack in the bottom of the trays is not sufficient. A layer of broken crocks or shells should have been placed over each of the cracks and this covered with coarse moss before any compost was placed in the trays.

The fact that a foot of soil was placed over the trays and frequent waterings given through it would be bound to cause rot in bulbs planted in old soil, poorly drained. A much better place for the trays would be on a cellar floor, where they could be covered with coal ashes. In such a place they can be watered more intelligently and much more easily moved when wanted for forcing. The fact that lily of the valley and lilies are also doing poorly in the same soil would go to show that it is unsuitable. Probably if it had been turned once or twice it would have been sufficiently sweetened to produce a moderate quality of bulbs.

RANGE OF FOUR HOUSES.

I intend to erect four houses in the spring. Will you kindly post me on the following questions:

I. Size of houses is 22x50, connected, for growing carnations, mums, vegetables, bulbs, etc. Which aspect would give me most sun and light in winter months, location in Ontario?

II. The temperature here has been known to reach 35 degrees below zero. I wish to use wood by day and coal by night; no night fireman. What make and size of boiler would be most suited to my purpose?

III. What size of hot water pipes do you recommend? What number of flows and returns, and position of same? What depth of boiler pit should be provided? W. P.

I. I prefer house with the ridge running north and south with a head house over the north end. Such houses get more sun during the period when sun is lowest and reflect most when sun is most nearly vertical.

II. I do not think you can use the system you contemplate of alternate firing with wood and coal without a night fireman, and then with doubtful results. You will require a boiler with very capacious fire box, one long enough to take 4-foot or even 8-foot wood.

III. I would suggest locating the heating plant in the middle of the head house so as to carry a 4-inch header or riser in each direction from the boiler to the center line of the two middle houses and continue to the center of the side houses by 3-inch pipe. Carry a 3-inch riser under the ridge of each house to the far end and return by fifteen 2-inch returns in each of the outside houses and fourteen 2-inch returns in each of the middle houses. The boiler plant should have a capacity for at least 2,500 square feet of radiation. I would further suggest that the boiler be provided with two 4-inch openings and each line of 4-inch pipe be taken off independently.

Put the expansion tank up high, twelve or fifteen feet above highest point in the piping system, and connect it directly to the main return close to the boiler. L. C. C.

HOUSE IN OHIO.

I have a greenhouse 20x70, with four rows of 2-inch pipe down each side and two rows of 4-inch pipe down the center. I heat with hot water. The boiler has six sections, with an expansion tank of thirty gallons. This system will not heat my house. Where is my trouble, and how can I fix it to heat to 70 degrees in zero weather?

How far should a bench be from the side of the greenhouse, and how far from the pipes? Will the bench affect the heating of the house if it is over the pipes? D. B.

In the first place, the use of two large flow pipes so retards the flow of hot water in the system that the heat is largely given off before it reaches the true radiating pipes. The only function of flow pipes is to convey the hot water to the returns to do its work. The two 4-inch pipes should be replaced by one 3-inch pipe. The radiation in the house is not sufficient for the temperature de-

GENTLEMEN: The Kroeschell Generator purchased from you some time since is giving excellent satisfaction. It not only adds to the capacity of the boiler on account of the increased velocity of the hot water circulation, and consequently less piping is required, but it also seems to maintain a steadier and more even temperature all over the houses where it is in use.

For instance, the new house I have just completed, 43 ft. wide by 265 ft. long, and piped according to your instructions, is not varying more than two degrees all over the house at any time, and I consider that remarkable for so large a house.

Another advantage is that where roses are grown, sulphur applied to the pipes for checking mildew is much more effective.

Yours truly,

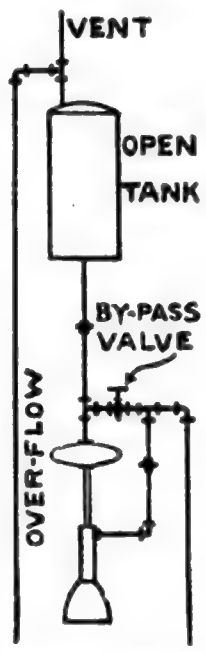
GENTLEMEN: Received your inquiry of the 9th inst. in regard to the Kroeschell Generator purchased from you.

We can safely say that without your Generator it would be almost impossible to heat our houses with any degree of safety, as our expansion tank is but 18 inches above the highest pipe line, and we had no trouble whatever in keeping the required temperature during the recent cold spell, with the thermometer at 12° below zero.

We are glad of the opportunity to recommend your Generator, Boiler and piping plans to our fellow florists, knowing that when placed as directed they will give perfect satisfaction.

We did our own piping, and none of us had ever had any experience in that line before.



Hoping this will be of some benefit to you, and thanking you for past kindnesses, we remain, sired. There should be twelve 2-inch returns in order to give a temperature of 70 degrees.

In a house of this width the side bench may be placed so as to allow only one inch between the side of the bench and the side of the greenhouse. L. C. C.

CAPACITY OF FLOWS.

Will you inform me as to how many feet of radiation a 1-inch, 1¼-inch, 1½-inch, 2-inch, 2½-inch, 3-inch, 3½-inch and 4-inch flow pipe ought to supply, using hot water? L. M. F.

Pipes less than 1½-inch are seldom used as flow pipes or risers. The following table will show the amount of radiation a given size pipe will supply:

1½-inch pipe,	225	square feet radiation.
2 -inch pipe,	400	square feet radiation.
2½-inch pipe,	620	square feet radiation.
3 -inch pipe,	900	square feet radiation.
3½-inch pipe,	1,220	square feet radiation.
4 -inch pipe,	1,660	square feet radiation.

The above table is on a hot water basis. F. R.

USING CITY WATER PRESSURE.

Can I connect my hot water heating plant with the city mains and do away with my expansion tank? The city water pressure is fifty-eight pounds to the square inch when the standpipe is full, but varies as the standpipe becomes partially empty. Would this variation make any difference? What pressure do I need on the plant? Can I regulate it by a reducing valve? My water pipe is ¾-inch. Should this be attached to the return near the boiler, the same as the expansion tank? Would the expansion of the water drive the surplus back into the main? Where should the reducing valve be placed? S. A. D.

You can use the city pressure in the way you indicate. It will be well to hold the pressure between twelve and twenty pounds, depending upon the pressure the boiler is guaranteed to carry. If you use a reducing valve, you should also equip the boiler with a safety valve, set at three or four pounds higher pressure than the reducing valve. The water connection should be made to the main return close to the boiler, the same as with the expansion tank. The reducing valve can be placed at the most convenient point in the water supply

Facts That Tell

Capitol Boilers make an especial appeal to the florist on the proven facts of fuel economy—quick repairs—ease of operation.

Bernard Katzwinkel, Prop. Restland Floral Co., Mendota, Ill., testifies:—"The hot water Capitol Boiler I received of you last season has given me complete satisfaction. I find it to be a fine, clean boiler to fire, no coal waste, and a first-class heat producer. I fully recommend it."

Beard Bros., Detroit, Mich., say:—"After one year's use we are very much pleased with the Capitol Boiler. One night last winter the temperature dropped to 16 degrees below zero, and the house was as warm as at freezing point. We used soft coal most of the time and it was as satisfactory as hard coal."

Any of our Branches or Sales Agencies will give you hundreds of such testimonials, and when you examine the boiler itself you will quickly see its superior merit over all competing boilers. It is better to be safe than sorry. Put in a Capitol Boiler.

WATER SUPPLY.

I am planning to build a water system consisting of a round cement tank, forty feet in diameter, the sides to be ten feet high, the bottom being cone-shaped, making the center at the bottom five feet lower than the sides. The tank to be situated on an elevation twelve feet higher than the benches in the greenhouses and 700 feet from same. The reservoir to be tapped from the bottom of the cone. How many pounds pressure will a 2-inch pipe running from the tank to greenhouses give, and how many lines of ¾-inch hose can be used at one time from the main pipe? I have a pond twenty-five feet lower than the bottom of the proposed tank and situated about half way between the tank and greenhouses. Will a large windmill near the pond be sufficient power to pump water supply, with use of a check valve, direct into the 2-inch main connecting the reservoir and greenhouses? C. D. L.

The size and shape of the tank will have no influence on the pressure in the main. The pressure in the main is entirely due to the height of the water level in the tank. The pressure at the nozzle is due to the difference in the height of the water level in the tank and the height of the opening from which the water is drawn. In your case, with the water seventeen feet above the level of the opening in the greenhouse, you should have about eight pounds less the friction in the pipes, which is greater the smaller the pipe used.

In this case I would urge the use of a large main, say 4-inch, in case much water is required. Also use large distributing pipes. Carry 1¼-inch pipes to the hose bibs, even when ¾-inch hose is used. The number of nozzles that can be used will be measured by the size of the pipes rather than the pressure; the force of the flow by the pressure.

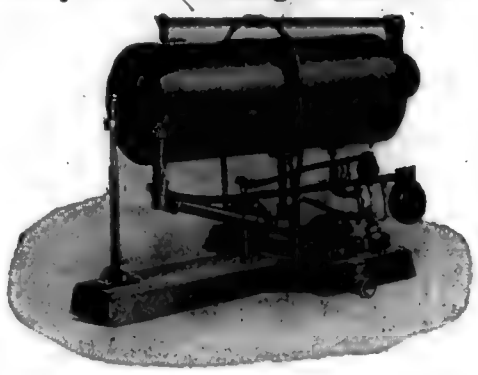
It will not be possible to do much syringing with the pressure from such a system. I believe you will find it more satisfactory and almost as economical to install a good gasoline engine and pump from the pond directly into the mains that supply the greenhouses, using a pneumatic reserve tank or erecting a small tank on a steel tower to be kept full to meet emergencies of a breakdown in the pumping plant. In this way you can get thirty to sixty or seventy pounds pressure, which is often required for effective syringing. L. C. C.

NEW ORLEANS.

The most interesting part of the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society was the distribution of the prize money among the exhibitors at the fall flower show. Although the show was far from being a success in a financial way, yet, thanks to the generosity of many donors of prize money, enough funds were on hand to pay a nice pro rata of the prizes and every exhibitor was, after all, well satisfied and repaid for his trouble. The society still stands solid, with a good sum on hand and ready to try again under better circumstances at some early date.

Business in plants is dull. Nobody can expect much better at this time of the year. Still H. Papworth and, no doubt, a few others report a rushing business in decorations and bouquets for balls and soirées.

The Harmony Club's reception furnished a big job for the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., as every girl was presented with a bouquet.



Abele Bros. are busy handling a big stock of fruit trees for the Jos. Steckler Seed Co. Orders for plants will soon commence, with the approach of spring.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good, though some of the smaller places report dull business last week. Everyone is now busy, however, in preparation for a big holiday trade. Weather conditions now are ideal. A bountiful fall of snow a few days ago gave us our first sleighing, which is likely to continue for some time. All lines of business have improved since the snow fell and this can only reflect favorably on the florists' trade.

Greens are plentiful and of good quality, though some early gathered green and light-weight holly cases are found on the market. But as holly has all reached this market without freezing, it is bound to be better than the average.

All the growers have a good crop of flowers. Red will be somewhat scarce. From our hurried observations about town, there will not be enough good poinsettias to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

Holm & Olson have an elegant stock of poinsettias in pans, as well as cyclamens, azaleas and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. No finer stock of the last mentioned plant was ever seen in the Twin Cities.

Callers during the week were: J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati; C. Schwake, with C. F. Meyer, New York, and Mr. Goldenburg, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., of New York. X. Y. Z.

ROCHESTER, N. H.—The firm of Folsom & Nielson has been dissolved. Mr. Nielson has gone to Woodfords, Me.

ISHPEMING, MICH. — William Trebilcock, manager of the Ishpeming Greenhouses, is desirous of purchasing the lot adjoining his plant on the west, to be used for an addition to be constructed during the coming year.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There was more life in the business last week than any time this season, with just about enough stock to supply the demand at the prices, which have been advanced to something nearly right. The wholesale houses have been cleaning up every day—something they have not done for a long time. There are quantities of good lilies and Beauties to be had at any time. Other roses and carnations seemed to be the stock that was short.

The retailers were all busy making up stock, such as galax, immortelles and boxwood wreaths. There does not seem to be any end to the job. One thing that the regular florists seem to leave to the grocer and market men is the trade in wreathing and holly. While they handle enough to take care of their customers, it is only in the fancy stock and they do not push that much, for there is not enough profit in this to justify handling it. The produce commission men are handling these goods and selling them so cheaply (much of the stuff, however, is of very poor quality) that the grocers on every corner have a crate or two and peddle it out at almost any price. Christmas trees are handled much the same way.

At the beginning of this week Christmas indications were good. The fact that Thanksgiving was so much better than anyone hoped for, coupled with the continued improvement every day since, assured a good Christmas trade in cut flowers.

As far as plants are concerned, the show of really fine azaleas, begonias, primulas, cyclamens, pans of tulips and ferns and pans of poinsettias could not help selling themselves. Each year the florist is arranging his baskets, pots and pans more artistically than the year before, and the result is that people cannot resist buying, as in most cases the prices are reasonable.

The trade in this city, from what I can gather, have come to the conclusion that larger sales and smaller profits mean really larger profits in the end, as the volume of business is so much greater.

The weather last week was anything but what a grower would ask for. Its effect on carnations seems to be to put them to sleep and roses are softer than they should be, which will probably prevent them from pickling stock and that will be a good thing.

The green goods men are selling lots of stock, but much of it is selling at prices which will not enable them to get rich this season. Hoo-Hoo.

LOUISIANA RED CYPRESS

"The Wood that Won't Rot"

Described by Bassett & Washburn, Chicago, Ill.

"Replying to your favor requesting our experience with Pecky Cypress, we will say, we have been using this grade of Cypress in our Greenhouses and plant benches for the last ten or twelve years and so far have not found any of this wood that has all rotted out. We formerly used hemlock and pine, but found that 2-inch stock only lasted about four years, while so far we have had no Pecky Cypress rot out in ten or twelve years. We use clear Cypress for all our roof work, ventilators, etc., and it is very satisfactory. We think it is the only kind of lumber for the purpose. BASSETT & WASHBURN."

Ask your dealer for Louisiana Red Cypress and if he hasn't got it, get him to write us, or write us yourself.

Something About Its Looks

If your chosen location is one where the greenhouse will be so prominent that it must be decidedly attractive and yet as unobtrusive as possible, then the U-Bar house meets the conditions. Graceful curved eave, airy lightness, simplicity. It is the greenhouse that appeals strongest to the owners, because of its ornamentalness—to the gardener, because of its productiveness and freedom from repairs.

A SPLENDID CHRISTMAS TRADE

PLANT SALES SHOW ANOTHER INCREASE, BUT ALL CUT FLOWERS CLEAN UP AT GOOD PRICES.

CHRISTMAS trade the country over was all that anyone expected, and more; it was ahead of last year, and ahead of 1906. In some of the larger wholesale markets prices have been higher, but at retail Santa Claus never paid more for his flowers. Supplies were large, but practically everything salable found a purchaser. Here and there, there was an echo of last year's panic in increased demand for inexpensive stock, but an equal number report that customers bought more freely of the better articles.

Plant trade showed some increase everywhere, larger supplies of blooming stock having been provided, especially in the larger cities, but cut flowers cleaned up better than they usually have at Christmas. It is proven that enough buyers prefer cut flowers to plants to insure the sale of all good cut stock offered at reasonable prices. The smaller cities do not yet take to the plant arrangements so popular in the big centers. In many reports that speak of all cut stock going out, some plants are said to have been left, usually poinsettias or Lorraine begonias. Fine weather was general, and was an important factor, affecting supply, demand and delivery.

Christmas greens were in large supply, of good quality, and florists sold great quantities of them in spite of competition by grocers and peddlers.

Reports from the big cities alone are not always a reliable index; in the last year the florists of the towns have prospered better than those of the cities. But for Christmas about all tell the same story. Reports from many sources follow; the city trade is reported under the usual headings.

Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM.—Christmas was as good as 1907 and better than 1906. More stock might have been sold, especially blooming plants. Baskets and other accessories were used more freely than ever, and William M. Lindsay says they added to the profit on the plants. The finest plants cleaned up first.

MOBILE.—With the Minge Floral Co. Christmas was about as usual, but the call was for more expensive articles than other years, in spite of the fact that money is still scarce and charge sales more numerous than cash. Beauties and poinsettias sold best. All cut flowers went clean, but some plants were left. There was little demand for plant baskets or decorated plants.

MONTGOMERY.—W. B. Patterson says Christmas was forty per cent better than in 1907, seventy-five per cent better than 1906. Little of anything was left. Plants were in most demand, especially azaleas, poinsettias and Lorraine begonias, which sold quickest when decorated or made up in baskets and hampers. Sales averaged higher than last year. The effects of last year's panic were still felt in that a comparatively small sum spent for plants made a good show and the florist thrived at the expense of other lines.

Arkansas.

PINE BLUFF.—A. A. Harper says his Christmas trade was about twenty per cent ahead of last year. No pickled stock in evidence. Quite a call for plants and a good sale for narcissi and Romans. Prospects good for 1909.

PINE BLUFF.—Mrs. C. A. Starr reports Christmas about as other years. A few more cut flowers could have been sold and a few more of the cheaper plants. The call was largely for the cheaper stock.

LITTLE ROCK.—J. W. Vestal & Son say that business was better than in 1906 or 1907. Everything salable was sold out clean except palms and potted Romans. The best sellers were azaleas and fancy fern dishes. Prices were higher than in previous years. Christmas sales started later than usual. There was little demand for baskets, ribbons, pot covers, etc., though the call in general was for more expensive items than usual.

California.

SANTA CRUZ.—W. E. King says the Christmas call was for less expensive articles, but a greater number of sales were made and Christmas totaled better than last year, and a whole lot better than 1906. Everything was sold, except green goods for decorations, which were an oversupply. More cut flowers of all kinds could have been used, but there was not much call for plants. Carnations were the most popular item.

Connecticut.

GREENWICH.—High prices of cut stock drove buyers to plants—but cut stock had the call. Azaleas, heather and primroses were left. An interesting feature was the sale for imported holly trees when in good condition. McMillen & Co. say the flower buying public has not yet fully recovered from last year's troubles.

NEW BRITAIN.—Carl Lorensen believes the weather never was better for Christmas. Trade started early and prices were good. Practically everything sold out clean. The total was a little ahead of 1906 and about the same as 1907.

WATERBURY.—E. S. Bavier, manager for Olson & Lunden, says Christmas business was far ahead of what had been expected, considering the hard times in this vicinity. There was a special demand for carnations, and these were sold out clean. Poinsettias and baskets of plants also sold rapidly. Saxe & Floto did a specially large business in blooming plants. Olson & Lunden had some large Christmas decorations to handle during the rush.

Delaware.

WILMINGTON.—H. P. Potter says Christmas was about the same as in 1906 but forty per cent ahead of 1907. All good stock was sold, but there were cyclamens, Lorraine begonias and the lower grades of cut flowers left. He does not use pot covers or other embellishments. Poinsettias in pans sold best.

Florida.

JACKSONVILLE.—Christmas trade was much ahead of last year and more stock could have been used in almost all lines. Azaleas, begonias, cyclamens and valley in pots sold best. It paid to decorate the pots or make up basket arrangements. The best grade of goods was wanted. James H. Payne, of the Jacksonville Floral Co., noted a special demand for ferns and fern dishes.

Georgia.

SAVANNAH.—According to John Wolf, Christmas business was twenty-five per cent better than in 1907 and at least as good as in 1906. Some stock was left, but more red roses and more poinsettias in pans could have been sold. White azaleas did not move. Prices were about as in former years, but carnations were much higher. Plants could not be sold without some sort of pot cover. The medium-priced stock sold best. People used more greens, such as holly, than in other years.

Illinois.

CHATSWORTH. — Thomas Pepperdine thinks Thanksgiving trade was not as good as it should have been, but Christmas was all right, especially the call for potted plants. Cut flower trade also was good.

JOLIET.—Albert C. Rott says his Christmas sales were half again as large as last year and everything sold out clean. Baskets sold slowly. Plants at $2 to $3 sold best. He trims every plant without extra charge, thinking it helps the sale.

BELLEVILLE.—E. W. Guy says Christmas was twenty per cent better than last year and thirty per cent better than in 1906. Poinsettias and white carnations were the only things left. He noted no extra call for plants and does not use many in arrangements.

ROCKFORD.—J. J. Soper says the interesting feature was the call for plants in bloom. The business totaled greater than in either 1907 or 1906. The call was for more expensive articles than usual. Baskets, ribbons and pot covers added greatly to the salability of stock. Nothing was left. More cut flowers and more plants could have been disposed of.

Aurora.—The Aurora Greenhouse Co. reports trade in excess of 1907 or 1906. Everything sold out clean, without satisfying the demand. The use of ribbons, baskets and pot covers did not give them a direct profit. They reported people would not take high priced cut flowers so long as they could get potted plants.

Aurora.—With Joseph M. Smely the Christmas business was much better than 1907 and slightly better than 1906. Flowering plants sold best. Valley, Romans, Paper Whites and the lower grades of roses and carnations were left. Fine weather started the trade early. He says there was no direct profit in the accessories used with the plants, but that customers insist on having them. The notable feature was the number of people who ordered plants over the phone and knew just what they wanted.

Peoria.—The business was ahead of last year, or the year before. Everything in red and pink sold clean. Red roses, red carnations and azaleas and cyclamens in colors sold best, and more could have been used. White roses and Romans were left. C. Loveridge says the special call was for Richmond, of which he had a fine crop. He reports that pot covers, baskets, ribbons, etc., did not add enough to the value of the article to give him a profit on their use.

Bloomington.—A. Washburn & Sons credit the weather with a twenty-five per cent increase in their Christmas business. They grew a larger number of blooming plants than ever before and advertised them in the local papers. They do little in the way of fixing up plants, outside of trimming the pots with crepe paper; the demand is for plants at $2 or $3 each. There was a greatly increased call for plants, but still some were left. More cut flowers could have been used.

Eugene Dailledouze.

Goshen.—Dora Brown reports Christmas business in cut flowers as about the same as last year, in plants some better. She cannot get high prices, saying her customers cannot realize why prices advance so at the holidays and that they simply will not pay the Christmas rates for stock they have been buying for so much less the week before. Everything cheap and effective in plants was quickly picked up, pans or Paper Whites and small azaleas taking the lead.

Indiana.

Richmond.—J. M. Gift says Christmas was forty per cent better than last year and roses and carnations were short. G. R. Gause puts his increase at fifty per cent. The demand for blooming plants and ferns far exceeded any year and green moss wreaths sold in large quantities.

Marion.—Nearly double, is the way the Marion Floral Co. says Christmas compares with 1907. They cleaned out of plants and could have sold more cut flowers. Trade started late, but everything went. The use of pot covers, baskets, ribbons, etc., gave them a satisfactory profit, besides adding to the salability of stock.

Kokomo.—W. W. Coles says Christmas was all he could ask, twenty per cent better than 1907, and about the same as 1906. Prices were ten per cent better than last year. Trade started early. Carnations sold best. Some poinsettias and Lorraine begonias were left. The use of requisites in plant decoration showed a profit, but Mr. Coles says not as much as in larger cities. A special feature was the call for Beauties.

Lafayette.—The Christmas business was about ten per cent ahead of 1907 and twenty per cent over 1906. F. Dorner & Sons Co. says all cut flowers sold, except Romans and stevia; they could have used more carnations and also more roses, and prices were higher on these than last year. Some pot plants were left and the demand did not warrant making up expensive arrangements in baskets, etc. The bright weather hardened up the cut stock, gave it a good finish and made it a pleasure to handle. If the off year had any effect, it was a help to the florists, as orders were given for boxes of cut flowers in place of more costly gifts.

Iowa.

Oskaloosa.—The Kemble Floral Co. says Christmas was about the same as in 1907 and ten to fifteen per cent better than in 1906. Practically everything sold out clean at about the usual Christmas prices.

Marshalltown.—With William H. Ford business was better than in 1907 or 1906. Nearly everything sold and more cut flowers could have been used. There was no special demand for plants.

Davenport.—H. M. Bills says Christmas was nearly double last year and half again as great as in 1906. Anything that was left was of little value. More plants were sold than ever before and it paid to decorate them. Beauties were in special demand, but short, and many took plants.

Burlington. — Joseph Bock found Christmas business better than ever before. Everything salable was cleaned up and more cut flowers and more plants could have been used. The best call was for blooming plants and the demand was good enough to take them at fair prices, without pot covers or ribbons.

Fort Madison.—J. M. Auge had a better Christmas than ever before. He sold out clean on cut flowers, but not on plants, having Lorraines, cyclamens and primroses left. Azaleas were among the best sellers. Few embellishments were used. More red roses and carnations would have been welcome.

Dubuque.—The Christmas of 1907 was the best until 1908. W. A. Harkett says more cut flowers could have been sold, especially roses and carnations, preferably red, but there were plants to spare, although they sold fairly well. Prices ruled moderate. Bright ribbons helped the sales of plants, and more fancy baskets and birch bark ware were used than ever before. The tendency is toward greater number of sales at moderate prices.

Kansas.

Concordia.—Christmas trade was good, C. J. Lempe reporting that he sold more flowers than at any previous Christmas. He could have used much more stock.

Fort Scott.—John Heck says the demand for plants for Christmas gifts has not been developed here, most flowers being used for funeral purposes. Christmas sales average of small value, but the business was somewhat ahead of last year.

LEAVENWORTH.—J. E. Meinhart found his only trouble in supplying the demand. Sales were double those of 1907 and three times as great as 1906. He could have used more stock of every kind. The call was for medium-priced articles. He uses few plant embellishments.

LAWRENCE.—C. M. & S. E. Luther found business about the same as in previous years. Everything salable was sold out clean, both in plants and cut flowers, but the demand was strongest for cut flowers. Prices were fair. Christmas business began early and the weather was pleasant.

TOPEKA.—James Hayes says that Christmas business was about the same as usual and does not vary much from year to year. His best selling stock was red carnations and Lorraine begonias. Prices were good and sales began several days earlier than in previous years. The weather was so mild and pleasant that plants could be delivered without wraping. Ribbon was used to advantage.

WICHITA.—W. H. Culp & Co. enjoyed a Christmas business that was much better than in 1907 or 1906. Their stock of cut flowers was insufficient for the demand, and there was not much left except a few ferns and palms and other odds and ends. In cut flowers their best sellers were choice roses and carnations; in plants, azaleas, Lorraine begonias and poinsettias took the lead. Prices were about as usual. Trade started about December 21, except a few earlier orders for decorative material. The weather was fine. Pot covers, baskets, ribbons, etc., were profitable accessories and were called for if not in evidence. Plant sales included more high-priced items than in other years.

Kentucky.

HOPKINSVILLE.—T. L. Metcalf reports a good Christmas. The principal call was for carnations, and he could have used more, also more plants in bloom. There was little call for the accessories to go with these.

ASHLAND.—Christmas business was fully up to last year, according to William H. Carp. Carnations had first place, and all wanted red. All cut flowers, even narcissi and roses, sold well. There was a fair call for azaleas and ferns.

MT. STERLING.—Emil Fredrich says the call was for the better grade of pot plants, and a special feature was the sale of low table plants. More stock of all good kinds could have been used. Pot covers, baskets, etc., are little used in this section.

PADUCAH.—Christmas trade was better than in 1907 and fully as good as 1906. Practically everything sold out clean. C. L. Brunson & Co. say they could have sold several hundred more pans of poinsettias, Paper Whites and Romans. They had ready sales for pansies and violets in pans. They always use pot covers and other embellishments and find a good profit in them. This year the call was for slightly less expensive articles than in the past.

WINCHESTER.—Christmas trade was more than double that of 1907, according to J. W. Shearer. He had enough cut flowers, but not enough plants. Poinsettias sold best; a few Lorraines were left. Mats and plaited paper paid, but no profit was to be had through the use of the common crepe paper. The call was for better things than ever before. A million dollars tobacco money has recently been turned loose in this county, and the florists are getting their share.

BOWLING GREEN.—Poinsettias in pots and pans cleaned up, but those which had been cut were left. All pot plants sold well, with the Burdell Floral Co., but there were enough to go around. All cut flowers sold cleanly, and more roses and carnations could have been used. The use of pot covers, ribbons, baskets, etc., adds too much to the cost of the cheaper plants, but is profitable on higher grade stock and helps in its sale. This year the call was for the less expensive items and the highest priced plants were left.

William J. Vesey.

Maine.

PORTLAND.—L. C. Goddard sold out clean on cut flowers, but some plants were left, including azaleas and, of course, ferns. Carnations of colors were in best demand. Prices were up to other years, except on bulb stock, but the total was not quite up to the last two holidays. The call was for the less expensive things.

LEWISTON.—Ernest Saunder says trade was quiet in the fall, and collections slow, but he could not see that last year's panic made any difference in the Christmas business. It was slightly larger than in 1907 or in 1906. He had stock enough, but sold nearly everything ready, in both plants and cut flowers. The trade was later in starting, but prices about the same as in other years.

Maryland.

CUMBERLAND.—There was an abundance of stock for Christmas and business was better than ever before. Prices were good, but not quite as high as last year. Ferns, primroses, azaleas, short poinsettias and fern dishes sold best. Little embellishment was permitted, because nearly everyone wanted things as reasonable in price as possible. Less expensive cut flowers were called for, but larger plants were salable. John A. Bopp says a notable feature was the demand for small paper bells and alpha bells.

Massachusetts.

NEW BEDFORD.—All the stores were filled with flowering plants a week ago, but now are empty. There was a big increase in the plant business, but all cut flowers also sold well, although at no specially high prices. William Livesey reports good business in all Christmas greens, and profitable prices.

NEWTON.—John Irving thinks trade was fully as good as in 1906 or 1907. He did not have enough cut flowers to meet the demand, and he had no plants left except a few Lorraine begonias. His Christmas sales began rather late. The weather was pleasant and favorable. The grade of stock called for was about the same as in other years. The best selling stock was carnations.

Michigan.

KALAMAZOO.—G. Van Bochove & Bro. say the Christmas business was enormous, away ahead of any previous year, double that of 1907. Everything sold out and more of everything could have been sold.

Individual purchases averaged larger than in previous years.

Sault Ste. Marie.—William F. Weber found all cut flowers sold and Christmas totaling a little better than in either of the last two years. The only unsold stock was of plants. Carnations were in best demand. He says he can get no direct profit on the use of baskets, pot covers and ribbons, but that they help in making sales.

Minnesota.

Albert Lea.—The Lake Shore Greenhouses figure Christmas as ten per cent better than 1907 and twenty per cent better than 1906. Everything sold except a little bulb stock. Roses, carnations and violets were most in demand.

Owatonna.—The Clinton Falls Nursery Co. says the Christmas trade showed no effect of last year's panic, but spoke eloquently of the first-class wheat crop; it was forty per cent ahead of 1907. The only salable stock left was white roses. Prices were strong.

Mississippi.

Jackson.—W. J. Brown reports Christmas as the best he ever has had. Cut flowers were sold out clean, and he had only a few salable plants left. Christmas sales started early and prices were good. The weather was fine and had a tendency to help trade. The best selling stock was cut flowers in bunches. There was not much demand for baskets, but pot covers and ribbons sold fairly well.

Missouri.

Neosho.—John M. Sherwood tells of a Christmas demand that was better than he had hoped—double the supply. He is new in the business and not yet fully stocked up.

Springfield.—W. H. Chalfant records Christmas as twenty per cent ahead of last year, in spite of the fact that he no longer pays special attention to the Christmas trade, aiming to take care of his regular customers and not caring much for the transients, who, he finds, usually want cheap articles. There was enough stock so that a little of everything was left. He makes no special effort in the use of accessories.

Nebraska.

Beatrice.—There is an increase in Christmas business each year. The Dole Floral Co. says fine weather made a full crop of carnations, nearly enough to go around. Azaleas sold well.

Fremont.—The Christmas trade was much better than in 1906 and nearly double that of last year. Cut flowers sold out clean, but there was some plant stock left. The call was for carnations, poinsettia arrangements, roses and violets, in the order named. Prices were twenty per cent higher than last Christmas. Crepe paper pot covers are as far as C. H. Green goes in embellishment of plants.

Lincoln.—C. H. Frey says that his trade showed an increase of fifteen per cent over that of 1907 and an increase of about forty per cent over that of 1906. He did not have enough cut flowers, but had a few plants left, chiefly poinsettias, Lorraine begonias and ferns. Roses, carnations, violets and blooming plants sold best. Prices were about the same as in 1906 and 1907. Christmas sales began early and continued till noon on Christmas day. The weather was fine. The outside temperature was 50 degrees at 2 p. m. December 24, and 45 degrees December 25. He does not have much call for baskets or hampers, and few of his customers will pay a higher price for a covered pot. The less expensive stock was sold out first. An interesting feature was the number of small sales.

New Hampshire.

Concord.—G. J. Benedict reports Christmas sales equally great, if not better than last year. He had a fine cut of Enchantress that sold readily at $1.50 per dozen. Christmas greens went nicely and Christmas business seemed to have a push behind it that bespeaks a prosperous business in 1909.

Nashua.—Christmas trade was far beyond the expectations of W. W. Powers. It commenced early and kept on heavily until everything was sold out clean. There was a special call for blooming plants made up in the green pottery ware. Cut flowers were in greater demand than last season, and Christmas greens of all kinds had a large call.

New Jersey.

Passaic.—John L. Lundsted says Christmas was about as in 1907, but not quite as good as 1906. He is a carnation grower, and sold out clean, with a demand for more stock.

Trenton.—Martin C. Ribsam regrets that Christmas was not up to either of the last two years. More blooming plants could have been sold, but there were enough cut flowers. The call was for the less expensive things.

New Mexico.

Raton.—Harry A. Smith says that trade was better this Christmas than ever before. The business steadily is developing and the uses for flowers becoming more numerous; consequently a greater variety of stock can be sold, and at better prices.

New York.

Troy.—No salable stock was left, and Sambrook Bros. think more might have been sold, of both cut flowers and plants. Fine weather helped the violet business. Trade was late in starting, but made a good total.

Elmira.—H. N. Hoffman notes that the interesting feature of the Christmas trade was the better sale for baskets filled with plants. He finds the trade appreciates the embellishments, like pot covers and ribbon. More cut flowers and more blooming plants could have been sold. The trade started late, but good weather brought in strangers and made a late rush.

Saratoga Springs.—T. J. Totten thinks the total of Christmas business was not quite as good as last year. Cut flowers were all sold, but a few plants were left, mostly azaleas. Customers did not seem to care for fancy plant arrangements. The call was for less expensive stock. Carnations were the leader, with good business on roses, sweet peas and violets.

North Dakota.

Grand Forks.—The Wickler Floral Co. found that business on the whole was much better than in 1907, though carnations this season were fifteen per cent lower in price. The supply of stock was hardly sufficient for the demand, and nearly everything was cleaned out except a few sleepy carnations. Sales began early, were slow for a while, but finished with a whirl. The weather was ideal. Red carnations sold best. An interesting feature was the great number of small orders for the best grade of stock; the people economized in quantity rather than in quality.

North Carolina.

Greensboro.—The J. Van Lindley Nursery Co. opened a new store in the Hotel Guilford building just in time to catch a fine Christmas trade.

Ohio.

Alliance.—Everything sold out clean, according to J. F. Zimmerman, and more stock of all kinds could have been used. Cut flowers were in most demand, and the only salable things left were the ferns.

Canton.—Charles Lindacher says Christmas was better than last year, making a good clean-up on everything except Roman hyacinths. Carnations were in special demand. The weather was favorable and delivery easy.

Akron.—J. R. Norton reports a joyous Christmas, better than 1907 and very much better than 1906. Practically everything cleaned up; more cut stock and more blooming plants could have been used. Plant embellishment was profitable, not alone in increased sales but a good profit also was made on the supplies consumed. The Japanese air plant was especially popular with those who wanted low-priced things.

Zanesville.—John D. Imlay found Christmas fully equal to 1907 and better than 1906, with more cash sales. Cut flowers just about went around, but a few plants were left, notably Lorraine begonias and lilies in pots. He could have sold more of the cheaper plants, those at 25, 50 or 75 cents. A few customers appreciated the pot covers, ribbons, etc., but most of them did not consider such decoration essential when they found it added to the price.

Sandusky.—At the Central Greenhouses, B. J. Mackey says the Christmas was about the same as last year. A few carnations were left and a few of the more expensive pot plants. More plants of the cheaper grade could have been sold, and more roses. The best sale was for primroses, small cherries, cyclamens, Whitmani ferns and azaleas. The use of plant decorations was found profitable, and there was a good sale for pottery, especially hanging ferneries and vases filled with Japanese air plant, plumosus and Sprengeri. If anything, the call was for a little more expensive stock than last year. Christmas trees were scarce, because many had placed orders with a seedsman who failed to ship.

Oklahoma.

Oklahoma City.—C. W. Stiles, of the Stiles Co., says Christmas was one-third better than in 1907 and double 1906. More cut flowers could have been used, but few plants were left, especially poinsettias. Pot covers and ribbon helped to get the better prices which prevailed. Basket arrangements sold well. Customers wanted the best, and good plants sold readily.

Pennsylvania.

Sewickley.—H. C. Buchler says Christmas business was grand—not a cut flower or blooming plant left unsold.

Reading.—H. J. Huesman figures Christmas trade was somewhat better than last year, but not nearly so good as 1906. More cut flowers could have been sold, but there were plants left.

HARRISBURG.—The Paxton Greenhouses say that cut flowers sold clean, but a few pot plants were left. Carnations and Paper Whites sold better than anything else. The effect of last year's panic was still apparent in the call for the less expensive stock.

ALLENTOWN.—There was enough stock for Christmas, and John F. Horn & Bro. say the business was not quite up to 1907, though about as good as 1906. Trade was late in starting and the weather not very good. Pot covers were required on all stock, and the plants in baskets and hampers, also poinsettias in decorated pans, sold well.

WILKESBARRE.—George W. Carr says the total business was about the same as in the last two years, practically everything selling out clean. Plants were in better demand than last year, poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamens and primroses selling best. People wanted no frills with good plants. The call was for the less expensive things. Holly was much overdone, everyone selling it.

South Dakota.

ABERDEEN.—When R. Strohmeier figured up his Christmas trade it showed a large increase over that of 1907. He sold everything out clean and could have sold more cut flowers if he had had them. Retail prices were good. His out-of-town Christmas sales began December 22 and the town sales December 24. In cut flowers the best grades sold best; in plants the medium-priced ones were most in demand. There were comparatively few cash sales. The weather was fine and warm.

SIOUX FALLS.—All cut flowers sold, the total being about as last year; plant sales increased a third. G. A. Thomas grew a lot of poinsettias and cyclamens; the former all found takers, but some cyclamens were left. The customers wanted plain pot covers; ribbons and baskets were not in demand. Paper Whites in pans, with a green pot cover, sold well if not too tall-growing. Expensive arrangements did not sell here.

Tennessee.

KNOXVILLE.—Chas. L. Baum reports that trade was better than in the preceding two years. His stock was sold out almost clear, and he could have sold more of some varieties of plants if they had been on hand. His best sellers were carnations. About the only items of salable stock left were a few narcissi and valley. Sales started early and prices were good. The weather was excellent.

Texas.

DENISON.—The flower business is growing in Texas. Supplies were much increased, and E. Farley says the Christmas trade was double that of 1906 or that of 1907. More cut flowers could have been sold. Not many flowering plants are offered and the usual run of house plants were not in special demand.

Vermont.

BURLINGTON.—Emslie & Bradfoot say Christmas compares favorably with its predecessors. Carnations sold best, followed by azaleas, primulas and cyclamens. No accessories were used with these.

BURLINGTON.—Cora E. Gove found the Christmas trade much better than ever before, with better prices and a call for better stock than last year. Plant trade was good, and the buyers appreciated the use of pot covers, etc.

RUTLAND.—Almost as good as 1907 and better than 1906, is the way G. E. Hunt summarizes the Christmas trade. All the cut flowers were sold, carnations being in greatest demand, but some plants were left. The call was for the less expensive items and it did not pay to decorate the plants.

Washington.

WALLA WALLA.—James Waite found the Christmas trade slightly heavier than usual, but with no special feature. Blooming plants sold best, but more cut flowers also could have been used.

EVERETT.—The notable feature of the Christmas trade, according to the Everett Floral Co., was the way the buyers jumped for the last chrysanthemums of the season. The call was for the more expensive articles, and it paid to embellish plants, especially the araucarias, rubbers and palms. The total of sales was half again as large as in 1907, over double 1906. All cut flowers sold; twice as many could have been used, but there were a few of each kind of plants left unsold.

West Virginia.

FAIRMOUNT.—H. G. Fleming says the Christmas business was ahead of any other year. Plants sold clean, except ferns, for which there was little demand. Customers would not pay for plant embellishments. Cyclamens, azaleas and primroses sold best.

PARKERSBURG.—Supply equaled the demand, but J. W. Dudley & Sons report sales twenty per cent greater than in 1907. Plants took the lead, poinsettias and Lorraine going best. Many baskets, hampers, pot covers and other requisites were used at a good profit.

Wisconsin.

OCONTO.—J. Sylvester says it was a record-breaking Christmas. Cut flower sales were three times last year's, and plant sales more than double. Few cut flowers are sold here except for funerals, so the surprise was great.

OSHKOSH.—Fugleberg & Flister enter the note that all cut flowers sold clean for Christmas, but there were plants left. Prices were about as usual at Christmas, but the sales were better than in 1906 and much better than in 1907.

MADISON.—Fred Rentschler had 1,400 poinsettias and sold them all, either cut or in the pots. His total was about as in 1906 and ten per cent better than in 1907. He did not sell out clean, white flowers being left. The weather was fine and helped the plant business.

EAU CLAIRE.—A. F. Lauritzen says he sold out clean on everything except Paper Whites, Romans and a few made-up baskets of plants. He finds some kind of pot cover a necessity, but baskets if well filled are a little too high-priced to sell well in small cities. He could have used more red roses, carnations and azaleas. The total of business was about the same as for the last two years.

Canada.

TORONTO.—The Christmas business was larger than last year, practically everything sharing in the demand. R. Mearns finds his sales increased fifty per cent.

POLYPODIUM MANDAIANUM.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph supplied by W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., and shows Polypodium Mandaianum, a plant which has attracted a great deal of attention since the national flower show by reason of its having there defeated two first-class nephrolepis sports for the award as best new fern, and then captured the gold medal offered for the best plant not yet an article of commerce. To those who have not seen the plant, the illustration, of a specimen in an 8-inch pan, will serve to show its character.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—The greenhouses of the Murdock estate are to be sold for removal from the premises.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

SHEAF AND SICKLE.

The illustration shows another method of filling a sheaf of wheat with roses, a sickle laid at the base supplying flowers necessary to relieve the plain outline of the sheaf. This design is easily made, giving but little opportunity for the display of artistic skill. It is, however, frequently called for and is quite inexpensive. The arrangement photographed was a funeral design by Charles Henry Fox, made at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. PHIL.

MORTON'S BIG DESIGN.

Illustrated on this page is a funeral design made by C. E. Morton, of the Redondo Floral Co., Los Angeles, for which Mr. Morton is said to have received $250. It was the tribute of the employees of the Southern Pacific Railroad to their division superintendent. The piece represented engine, tender and coach. The engine and car were made of white carnations, roses and other flowers, with adiantum for green. Those parts of the car and engine which could not be reproduced in flowers were in chenille, and immortelle was used for the lettering. The coach bore the name of "Seco," that of the private car of the dead superintendent. The base of the piece was of white chrysanthemums. The entire piece was eleven feet and thirty inches long.

CORSAGE BOUQUETS.

A Well-made Bunch.

A corsage bouquet is nothing more or less than a few flowers tied together to be worn on the bodice or waist of a woman's dress, or, as is often done, fastened to the belt.

The more naturally the flowers are bunched, the prettier will be the effect. Here is where the whole trouble lies. Many florists, when called upon to make a corsage bouquet, are so impressed by the name, and so anxious to turn out work that will be a credit to them when worn conspicuously, that after repeated efforts the result is a stiff-looking bouquet. The difference between a well-made corsage bouquet and a poor one is the degree of grace in the arrangement. The test of your success will be the frequency with which your customers return to purchase.

Just gather the flowers up carelessly and tie the stems together, and you will be surprised at the nice, airy-looking bouquet you can make.

Material for Corsages.

Almost any flower can be worn this way, except perhaps only the larger ones, as Beauties, chrysanthemums, lilies, etc. These large flowers are usually carried in the hand, or sometimes just one or two are worn.

A graceful combination of two or even more varieties of flowers also produces a pretty corsage bouquet. Roses and valley, orchids and valley, violets and rosebuds, carnations and sweet peas, all look well. Then we have also marguerites, pompons and anemone chrysanthemums, forget-me-nots, and so on down the line. The latter make up exceptionally well, but are not lasting.

If some color is desired, take from six to a dozen Richmond roses and some sprays of valley. Tie them loosely together, leaving some of the valley to form the tip of the bouquet, with the remainder of the valley between the roses.

If you wish to tie up a few orchids of the cattleya type, leave the stems as long as they are and, in tying the flowers, avoid having them lie too evenly. They must be far enough apart to show the beauty of each individual flower, and should not all be on the same line or level. Violets are best left in bunches just as they come, and the bunches tied together, forming a close, round bouquet. If any attempt is made to arrange the violets loosely this effect will soon be spoiled by the wilting of the violets.

Corsage bouquets would look far more natural if the stems could be left uncovered, but the chance of soiling some expensive gown makes it advisable to cover the stems in some way. Trim off the stems so they will taper to a point when tied together, and then wrap with green foil or satin ribbon. By exercising a little care you can finish a bouquet neatly in this manner.

The Use of Ribbon.

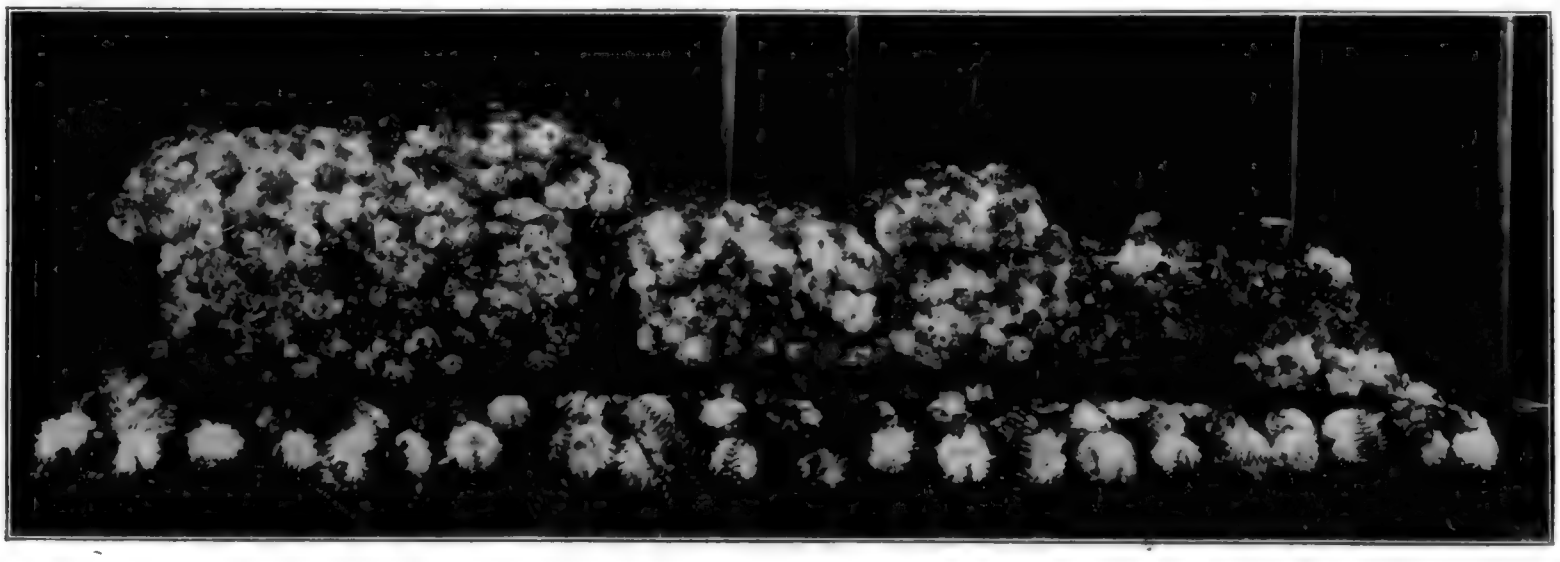
If you were gathering flowers out in the woods or field, of course you would not expect to tie them with ribbon, but when the flowers come from a florist a pretty bow or rosette is really essential. Flowers grown in the greenhouse are always more or less stiff as compared with those growing wild.

The ribbon should harmonize with the flowers, both in color and kind, and the whole should harmonize with the lady's gown.

The ways of using ribbon are many. The most common way is the ordinary bow of one or more loops tied to the stems. Another pretty idea is to tie a small rosette of ribbon or narrow chiffon in with the flowers, with one end of this brought down to the stems and tied there in a neat little bow.

With violets or orchids the ties obtainable from the ribbon supply houses are easiest to apply and are most generally used. Just at present the ties with the gold tassels are popular. Gold and violets are a decidedly effective combination.

Unless you are adept at tying bows, I would advise the use of the ready-made ties. These can be obtained to match almost any flower.



A suitable pin should be provided with each corsage bouquet. These also can be procured in many styles and prices, some fine ones with heads in beautiful shades of pink, blue, lavender, white, etc.

Never send out a corsage, or any other bouquet, wrapped only in paper. Some sort of a box should be used; otherwise the bouquet is very apt to become crushed. HUGO SCHROETER.

FLOWERS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

We have rebuilt our houses and will start February 1. What can we grow for the Memorial trade? We can sell any flowers. Kindly give time of planting. I had thought of one house of lilies. Can we get them in? I. H. R.

Lilium longiflorum, if procured and potted at once, will come in for Memorial day. Lose no time in securing these, for the longer they are out of the soil the poorer they will be. There are quite a number of other flowers you can get in bloom by May 30. Among these are antirrhinums. Seed of these must be sown without delay, potted off when large enough to handle and thence transferred to the benches. Giant Ten Weeks' stocks make a useful Memorial day flower. The seed of these need not, however, be sown before the middle of February, if they are grown in a temperature of 45 degrees at night when benched, or if kept 5 degrees warmer the sowing can be delayed until the last of February.

Giant white candytuft, sown thinly in rows and grown quite cool, 42 to 45 degrees at night, is useful. Sow the seed early in February. Double feverfews are easily grown flowers. Of these you should procure some young plants and bench within the next month or so. Gladioli of the largest flowering or Gandavensis section, if planted four months before being wanted, will be found useful. Spiræa Japonica is an easily grown and useful Memorial day flower. Start the pots nine to ten weeks before being wanted. Good varieties are compacta grandiflora and astilboides.

In the way of pot plants there are many varieties, such as hydrangeas, marguerites, rambler and hybrid roses, geraniums and heliotropes, of which you would require to procure plants or rooted cuttings, which can easily be flowered by May 30, but probably you would prefer to grow flowers for cutting. PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Alpines and Bog Plants, by Reginald Farrer; Longmans, Green & Co., New York; $2.50, net.

This is a British publication, in the best typographical style of the Edinburgh University Press, brought out by Edward Arnold, for whom Longmans, Green & Co. are agents in the United States. One of the admirable features is a complete index, which makes for easy reference to any paragraph after first perusal of the volume. There are thirteen general subdivisions in the way of chapter headings, and sixteen full-page half-tone illustrations printed on enamel paper. The book is one that will grace any horticultural library.

Mr. Farrer was the author of "My Rock Garden," which he confesses to having penned with considerable uncertainty as to how it would be received; the welcome accorded it by plant lovers the world over is, as he says in the preface to the present volume, the reason why "I offer this timely reparation, no less to my friends who read than to my friends who are written of—to the countless omitted beauties of my garden, whom I had seemed to pass over in ungrateful silence."

The chapter on "Shrubs and Their Placing," while relating especially to the rock garden, lays bare the secret of all successful landscape work. The author's advice to those about to build a water-garden is—Don't. "The fact is, a pool—not an easy thing to build and set going—is of all things in the garden the hardest of all to keep in decent order." Yet Mr. Farrer seems to have been fairly well repaid for his labor. In his list of commendable varieties he mentions several American hybrid nymphæas.

Of course Mr. Farrer's experience cannot serve as a rule of thumb for American readers, for climatic conditions have an important bearing, but every gardener will find many rich morsels of knowledge in "Alpines and Bog Plants."

LONGIFLORUMS FOR EASTER.

Will Lilium longiflorum be in for Easter when they are just coming through the soil now? I cannot give them more than 60 degrees at any time. E. R. B.

Your lilies are all right and will be in nice season for Easter if grown along in a temperature of 52 to 55 degrees at night. If you can see and count the buds six weeks before Easter, they will be in flower if given a minimum temperature of 55 degrees. We would prefer to do any forcing after the buds have shown, rather than now. Give them a bench in a light, sunny house and be careful not to overwater in the early stages of growth. Run them a little on the dry side until the pots are well filled with roots. C. W.

CANNAS FROM SEED.

We have saved about two quarts of canna seed from the following varieties this year: King Humbert, Austria, Pennsylvania, etc., of the large-flowering varieties. When should we plant these seeds and how should they be cared for in order to make nice bedding plants for another year? Do the seeds require soaking before planting? Are new varieties ever produced from seeds saved from a mixture of this kind? Any information you can give us will be greatly appreciated. A. J. B.

Seeds of cannas, being extremely hard, may not germinate at all unless filed down or soaked for forty-eight hours in warm water before sowing. Water stood over your heating pipes will be sufficiently warm. Seed should be placed in pans or flats during February and, to insure a good germination, should be given a brisk bottom heat. When large enough to handle, transplant into flats of light compost, later potting them off singly. They should have a warm, moist heat until established in their pots, when they can gradually be inured to cooler conditions.

In such a mixture as you speak of, you may get a few plants true to the varieties they were taken from, but you are liable to get a miscellaneous mixture and it is not unlikely that one or two new or unusual varieties will appear. The really choice novelties are evolved by careful cross fertilization and you can hardly hope to equal these in quality. Still, chance seedlings sometimes are winners. C. W.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Making the Cuttings.

After having completed preparations for your propagating bench, you are ready to select cuttings and prepare them for the sand. It now is generally agreed among the leading carnation growers that the best cuttings come from near the base of the flowering stem. They are the young shoots or breaks which would run up to flower in the next crop, after the crop which was cut when the flower stem on which they grew was cut. These shoots will sometimes grow large enough to make splendid cuttings before the flower is cut, which is a desirable characteristic in a variety. Some varieties, however, are shy in making such breaks and will produce cuttings only after the flowers are cut. Varieties which behave as first described can be propagated much more cheaply than the latter, because you can usually take at least one fine cutting from each flower stem above the point where it will be severed from the plant later on, and no shoots will need to be taken which would later make up a part of the crop of blooms. With the other class, however, you are obliged to wait after cutting the bloom until the stub grows new breaks, and of these breaks select a part for cuttings instead of allowing them all to run up to flower in the next crop. In other words, you must sacrifice part of the next crop of blooms for propagating purposes. Varieties of this latter kind should always command a higher price than the others, providing the demand for them is the same.

When taking cuttings from flower stems before the blooms are cut, do not make the mistake of taking them too high up. Last spring, among the new varieties we bought, were one or two lots which showed plainly that the cuttings were taken all the way up the stem, just so they did not run into bud. This is a sure way of weakening a variety, as these small weaklings will invariably show up as weaklings in the bench the next season. Take strong breaks of a uniform size and you will be likely to have good, strong plants the next season.

Try to take off early in the morning, while the growth is crisp, enough cuttings to run you through the day. No cuttings should be taken from plants when they are the least bit flagged, either from the sun or from being too dry. It is well known that blooms cut under those conditions will not keep, and it is equally true that cuttings taken under those same conditions will not root as readily and will give much more trouble than those taken from plants which are in a fresh, vigorous state.

Sever them from the stem by pulling them upward and sideways at the same time. Place them in a fairly tight receptacle and keep well sprinkled until they are inserted in the sand, and keep them in a cool place. In fact, your main endeavor should be to keep them in a crisp condition. A carnation cutting which is once badly wilted might just as well be thrown on the dump at once.

If the cuttings run fairly even in size, not much cutting is required except to see that the lower end is cut clean and a few of the longer outward hanging leaves are trimmed back. This latter will greatly facilitate the work of inserting them in the sand. If some of them run small in size, get that kind together at one end of the row, as if you mix them between the large ones they will be smothered and ruined.

After inserting a batch be sure you water thoroughly, so the sand will settle well around the base of the cuttings. No more watering will be needed for a few days, but in bright weather a light spraying overhead once or twice each day will help to keep them fresh.

MERRITT'S CARNATION CROPS.

I have read with interest the article, "Merritt's Success," in the Review of December 10, page 29, in which it is stated that Mr. Merritt, of Irondequoit, N. Y., cut 30,000 carnation blooms from 4,650 square feet of ground surface in the month of October. This of course is, as stated, an exceptional instance, but it makes us feel that we do not know how to grow carnations, and there are a whole lot of others in the same boat with us. The article would be more interesting if more circumstances regarding the conditions, etc., were given. For instance, when were the plants benched? How many blooms were cut during the thirty days previous to October 1, how many blooms were cut following October 31, and what does Mr. Merritt expect to average per plant during the year?

It is interesting to compare one's own cut with that of other growers, and we would like to have Mr. Merritt's opinion as to what the cut should be from, say, 20,000 carnation plants, a large proportion of them being Pink and White Enchantress and Pink and White Lawson. The writer would like to have a reply to this question, either from Mr. Merritt or from any other well-known grower, through the columns of the Review. I think anyone reading the article on Mr. Merritt's crop would be interested in further details, and I personally would like to know what should be cut during the year from 20,000 plants.

W. H. E.

Since the article appeared in the Review in regard to my picking 30,000 blooms from my carnations during October, I have received many inquiries like the foregoing. There have been communications from all parts of the country, containing every question imaginable. I have been asked when I housed the plants, whether I grew them outside or inside, when I propagated them, what I consider a fair average crop, and what my plants yielded before and after October. The best way to save time in answering all these questions is to answer them through the Review, and I shall make all my answers as nearly correct as possible.

My plants were housed about the middle of August. I picked 8,425 blooms during September, 10,705 in November and 5,900 from December 1 to December 21, which, including the 30,000 in October, makes a total of 55,030 blooms. I do not know the exact number of plants, but there were a little over 6,000, which would probably make the cut about nine blooms per plant up to December 21.

Every grower in this part of the country knows that carnations have averaged more blooms this season than in any previous year, as the weather has been almost too favorable. I have never before heard so much complaint about bargain lots. I heard of one grower whose returns during November just about paid his coal bill for that month.

In reply to the grower who wants to know how many blooms he ought to get from 20,000 plants, mostly Pink and White Enchantress and Pink and White Lawson, I would say that it is a hard question to answer. Much depends on when the plants were housed and what shape they were in when housed, whether they were good, strong plants or not, and how they were cared for after being housed. I never grew White Lawson. Pink Lawson is not of much account here now; it is one of the "has been" good ones. I never grew White Enchantress, as one bench of Queen with me will yield at least as much as two benches of Enchantress. The first season that Enchantress plants were on the market I benched about 500 of them. I took off enough of the flowering wood to make 9,000 cuttings, and averaged, besides, about twenty-two blooms per plant, which did not give them any opportunity to show what they could do.

It is difficult to say how many blooms a grower ought to pick. At the time of the old Daybreak I had 1,000 good plants, planted in a good, light, airy house, which produced 48,000 blooms, or an average of forty-eight per plant, but they were good, large plants.

One grower wants to know if it makes any difference when he propagates. With me it does not, provided that I can get the plants a good size by housing time. I always take all good, healthy cuttings as fast as they are ready, but early cuttings should be shifted at least once, to keep them in good growing condition; otherwise they will become woody and more subject to stem-rot and all other diseases. As early as the weather will permit, I plant them outside. I generally cultivate them about once or twice a week, according to the weather. I never neglect pinching back, but go over the plants every few days.

Just before housing time I clean the house out, paint or whitewash all woodwork, bring in new soil and shade the glass a little. Then, if we get suitable weather, we start planting. As soon as the planting is done, I begin to get shade off so as to harden them as soon as possible, and go straight ahead to tie them up. I use wire the shape of a hairpin to tie them with, and this allows me to work around each plant. Later in the season, when the plants become quite high, I draw a wire the full length of the bench on each side and place strings across to help hold the plants and flowers in shape. H. MERRITT.

CARNATION SHOW IN LONDON.

The increasing popularity of American carnations in England was fully demonstrated December 9, on the occasion of the winter show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society. The number of entries was greater than on any previous occasion, and high quality was manifest in the majority of the classes. The show was held in the Royal Horticultural hall, London, and in all respects it was a most successful affair, reflecting the highest credit upon the management.

In the leading class for the best collection of cut carnations there was quite a spirited competition. W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bay, secured the gold medal and first prize; C. F. Waters, Balcombe, Sussex, second prize, and W. H. Page, one of the largest and most successful growers at Hampton, Middlesex, came in an excellent third.

Low's American Carnations at the London Exhibition.

In the color classes the principal awards were: Thirty-six white, W. E. Wallace, with White Perfection; thirty-six blush, Newport Carnation Nurseries, with Enchantress; thirty-six light pink or salmon, W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey, with Mrs. H. Burnett; thirty-six deep pink or rose, W. H. Lancashire, with Lawson; thirty-six crimson, W. H. Lancashire, with President; thirty-six scarlet, W. H. Lancashire, with Robert Craig; thirty-six any other color or fancy, C. Engellmann, Saffron Walden.

Other successful exhibitors in the color classes for thirty-sixes and eighteens included G. Lange, Hampton; Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey; H. Burnett, Guernsey; W. H. Page, Hampton; A. F. Dutton, Ivor, etc. The society's gold medal for the best vase in the show was awarded to White Perfection, exhibited by W. E. Wallace, the second prize going to Victory, exhibited by A. F. Dutton.

Special prizes were offered by E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., for the best vase of Afterglow; by Fred Dorner, La Fayette, Ind., for the best vase of Winona, and by the F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, for the best vase of Winsor. Bell & Sheldon, Guernsey, were successful in winning all three prizes.

The prize for the best vase of any variety not in commerce was won by C. Engellmann, with Carola, one of his own raising; second, H. Burnett; third, W. H. Lancashire, with varieties of their own raising also. Several new varieties engaged the attention of the floral committee, but only one stood the test of pointing, namely, Rose Dorée, a salmon-rose colored, very full flower, which gained a certificate of merit, with ninety-seven points out of a possible 100. It was exhibited by W. H. Lancashire.

Dinner table decorations with carnations were a pleasing feature of the show, and classes devoted to amateurs and gardeners for cut carnations, groups of carnation plants, etc., were well filled.

In addition to the competitive classes, fine trade displays were made by Hugh Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, gold medal; Bell & Sheldon, gold medal; H. Burnett, large silver medal; H. J. Cutbush, London, large silver medal; C. Engellmann, large silver medal; G. Lange, large silver medal. Also silver medals to J. Green, March; J. Peed & Son, London; W. H. Lancashire, and the American Carnation Nursery Co., Sawbridgeworth. The leading varieties in the collections were Enchantress, Afterglow, Victory, Britannia, Fair Maid, Mrs. T. W. Lawson, Winsor, White Perfection, Beacon, Harlowarden, Robert Craig, Aristocrat and Lady Bountiful.

The announcement made by the honorary secretary, Hayward Mathies, that he had received a communication from the secretary of the American Carnation Society, offering on its behalf a $25 challenge cup for competition at future shows, was received with enthusiasm.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bouvardias.

The Christmas market usually finishes the cut of the scarlet and pink varieties of bouvardias. These one-time favorites are not now much grown, but are quite useful in floral designs. It is time now to start propagating for next season's plants. This is best done by cutting the thicker roots in short pieces, half an inch or so in length, and planting in sand in a warm propagating bench. This method of propagation is preferable to taking soft wood cuttings, except in the case of the fall blooming B. Humboldtii, which can be quickly increased by either method, but most easily by the soft wood cuttings. Do not keep the old bouvardia plants standing around any longer than necessary, for they always become headquarters for mealy bug.

Dutch Bulbs.

The unusually clear and warm winter, which we have so far been favored with, has permitted of a larger number than usual of the yellow Trumpet narcissi being flowered for Christmas. The bulb market is not what it was a number of years ago. With the camellia, tuberose and one or two other flowers, it had a heavy slump. Nevertheless, there is a fair call for well grown flowers of narcissi and tulips during the winter months. It is unwise to bring in too big a batch of any one variety at a time, the market for these being much more limited than for carnations, roses and violets, but where a good retail trade exists, a few flats should be housed every fourth or fifth day to keep up a steady succession.

That beautiful and ever popular forcing tulip, La Reine, should be kept dark for a few days in a warm house to draw up the stems, which are naturally short. A case such as is used for valley will answer well for this purpose. Some of the other tulips are now well started and a few pans or flats of these can be started at intervals. The demand for these is, however, small compared with that for La Reine. Golden Spur and Henry Irving are now in season and are useful. Always let the flowers open out in a cool house, to give them substance. Narcissus poeticus ornatus, sweet scented yellow jonquils and a few of the earliest Dutch hyacinths may all now be started. Look over the main lot of bulbous stock and thoroughly water any that show the least trace of dryness at the roots.

Lilies.

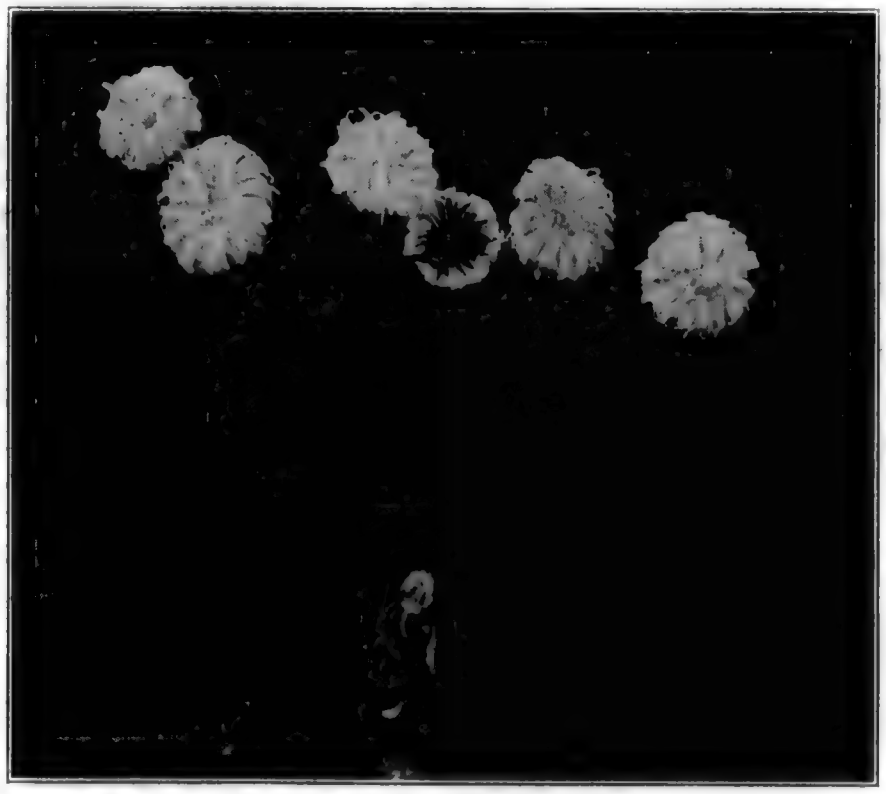
"Will my lilies be in season for Easter?" is the burden of many inquiries now received. Easter, 1909, comes on April 11, a week earlier than in 1908. It is always better to have plants a little too early than to be obliged to resort to hard forcing a few days before the Easter festival. Lilies which are now six to eight inches high will be all right for Easter, if grown along in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night for a few weeks, giving them 5 degrees more heat a little later in the winter. Bulbs which are just pushing through the soil will also come in, but will require a little more pushing. Give them 55 degrees at night now, advancing to 60 degrees when they are six inches high. We do not like to force the plants until the pots are well filled with roots. Look over the stock frequently and throw away any showing signs of disease. Green aphis will quickly secure a foothold in the tops of the shoots if fumigating is neglected. Blow a little fine tobacco dust on the tops of the shoots. This will also help to keep pests in check.

Candidum lilies for Easter should be started at once. As these resent hard forcing, give them a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees as a starter. A little more heat may be given when the buds show.

Asparagus Plumosus.

The Christmas trade occasions a heavy demand for Asparagus plumosus. Where the strings have been clean cut out of portions of the beds, give the surface soil a good cleaning over and apply a mulch of decayed cow manure. Get the new twine strung as soon as possible. It is a big mistake to leave it until growth starts. Cutworms frequently harass asparagus growers and do great damage by eating the young shoots and tender foliage. Pyrethrum insect powder and Strawson's Vaporite are the best remedies we know of for these destructive pests. Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas has failed to clean them out.

Smilax.



Treatment similar to that recommended for Asparagus plumosus nanus should be given the cut-over portions of the smilax beds. Keep them on the dry side for a week or two, until the shoots have started well, when water may be applied more freely. Smilax will grow well in a lower temperature than asparagus. While it will stand 60 degrees at night, we prefer to grow it at least 5 degrees cooler.

Palms.

Take advantage of any spare hours to clean over the foliage on the palms. You cannot well expect customers to purchase plants with dirty foliage, such as we too often see, and if you have any decorations to carry out, you cannot afford to use dirty plants. If there is much scale on the leaves, use some whale oil soap in the water, being careful, however, not to use it on young, soft foliage, or burning will result. Wash the woodwork and glass with soap and water, and if bug has gotten a foothold, it will pay to paint the iron and woodwork with kerosene, always being careful not to let this drop on the foliage. It is rather too early yet to do any repotting. Wait until the days lengthen a little more.

Antirrhinums.

Antirrhinums benched in place of the earliest mums are now growing apace and will need a little attention every few days. Supports must be given to the flower stems, for if once bent or twisted they are practically worthless. It is not a good policy to let every shoot run up to flower, or your spikes will be small. If you want these to be of fancy quality, reduce the number on each plant to half a dozen and rub off all others as they appear. Keep the side shoots rubbed off the flowering stems as they advance. The surface soil will require an occasional stirring and, as the roots will now run pretty well through the compost, a little liquid manure can be given with advantage.

Aster Gladys Evelyn.

ASTER GLADYS EVELYN.

Five years ago the aster illustrated as Gladys Evelyn originated with E. A. Muchow, of Clarence, N. Y. In the seasons that followed he worked up a stock of seed until in 1908 he was able to plant quite an area. Instead of saving seeds from all the flowers on the plants, he saved only those from selected blooms, with the result that a steady improvement has been made in the quality of both bloom and stem. Mr. Muchow says that even in the unfavorable aster season of 1908 the flowers attained five inches in diameter, with stems two feet long. He asserts that under favorable conditions it can be grown much better.

This new aster is of the Comet type, and so double that it is a shy seeder. The center of the flower does not show. Mr. Muchow thinks he has in Gladys Evelyn a valuable addition to the list of florists' asters.

ELM COURT FARM CLUB-ROOM.

A striking example of the way a keen business man cares for the well-being of his employees is furnished by Wm. Douglas Sloan at his large estate in Lenox, Mass. He has recently erected for the various employees a comfortable club-room, well heated and ventilated, and lighted by electricity. Installed therein is a full size pool-table of the finest make, and a phonograph of the latest design furnishes musical entertainment. Chess, checkers, dominoes, cards and a well-stocked library make the club attractive to the young men, keeping them interested and amused and away from the more or less harmful and expensive attractions of the adjacent city of Pittsfield. Mr. Sloan has not only earned the gratitude of his employees, but has made a splendid investment that will bear continuous interest in more efficient work and in the mental, moral and physical well-being of his employees. A COURSE IN FLORICULTURE.

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

The short course in floriculture at Massachusetts Agricultural College promises to be a great success. Already applications have been accepted to about the capacity of the teaching equipment. It has been decided, however, to accept twenty for this course, instead of fifteen, as originally planned. It is regretted that the new instruction building and the greenhouses will not be finished before February 15, or all who desire the course could be accommodated.

The practical men are giving the course their most hearty support and the talks by experts promise to be especially valuable. The following have consented to assist in this course: W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., "Rose Growing as a Business"; Eber Holmes, Montrose, "Roses"; M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, and Peter Fisher, Ellis, "Carnations"; E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, "Orchids"; William Sim, Cliftondale, "Sweet Pea Culture Under Glass"; Wm. J. Stewart, Boston, "Wholesale Marketing"; George Sinclair, Holyoke, "Chrysanthemums"; E. J. Canning, Northampton, Mass., "The Work of the Private Gardener." It is expected that Mr. Sykes, of Lord & Burnham Co., will speak on "Greenhouse Design and Construction"; also Andrew Elder, of the same firm, on "Greenhouse Heating." Several other experts in various lines hope to assist, but definite arrangements have not yet been made.

In addition to these talks, the daily lectures and laboratory exercises in floriculture, soils, fertilizers, insects and diseases promise to make a busy ten weeks. Professor White is planning Saturday morning observation trips to various greenhouse establishments. These will include the commercial ranges of Field, Northampton; Beach, South Hadley; Sinclair, Holyoke; Beals and others, Springfield; Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and many more, and the conservatories at Smith College and Mt. Holyoke College. E. A. W.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The Christmas trade this year was a great improvement over that of 1907. All kinds of cut blooms commanded a good price. Plants sold well and were much used. All the store men had a good trade and all hands can look back on the Christmas of 1908 with pleasure.

Various Notes.

John Rieman was unfortunately laid up with an attack of rheumatism during Christmas week.

The Indianapolis Florists' Club will meet at A. Wiegand's January 6, to perfect plans for entertaining the visiting florists during the carnation convention.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. J. Baur spent the holidays in Richmond. S.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Christmas was better than ever, both with the retail stores and at the commission houses. The weather was ideal from the shipping standpoint as well. The demand for plants was better than ever; in fact, there was not much call for cut flowers until December 24. Roses, carnations, narcissi, sweet peas, valley, etc., sold well and brought good prices. Violets were also in big demand and by Thursday noon many of the stores had to turn away violet customers. Beauties did not sell.

In plants the most popular were cyclamens, azaleas, araucarias, ferns, palms, poinsettias and begonias. The demand was for the less expensive plants. Many baskets were sold where the dollars could not be counted on the fingers of one hand, but $2 to $3 were the sums most people wanted to spend.

Conditions are about normal again, now that the excitement is over.

Various Notes.

The best roses seen about this city were from Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens—Richmond, Rhea Reid and La Detroit—while James Cary, also of the Bath City, shipped in some fine Killarney.

Thomas Browne, of Greenfield, supplied over 18,000 carnations to the Cut Flower Exchange.

The Bemb Floral Co. reports business as having been most satisfactory. Many fine plant and ribbon combinations were sold.

Breitmeyer's had their usual big business. Philip Breitmeyer, who is now Mayor Breitmeyer, and takes his seat in office January 1, was compelled to put in the whole night at the store Christmas eve with the rest of the staff.

W. B. Brown was completely cleaned out of plants.

J. F. Sullivan had a lot of fine stock and cleaned up pretty well on everything.

Carnations were the leaders at Taepke's. In the neighborhood of 6,000 were disposed of and all home-grown stock. A nice business in plants also was done.

Schroeter's is no doubt plant headquarters in Detroit. They had a fine lot of azaleas, poinsettias and cyclamens, and few were left. Mr. Schroeter is very enthusiastic about Christmas.

E. A. Fetters is highly elated; business by far exceeded expectations.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House handled a fine lot of stock, red roses and carnations in particular.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday, January 4, will be the first in the new quarters in the Cowee building. January 7 will be ladies' night. H. S.

OBITUARY.

Charles Kaehlert, Jr.

Charles Kaehlert, Jr., son of Charles Kaehlert, proprietor of the South Side Greenhouse, Joliet, Ill., died December 21. The decedent was born June 2, 1883, in Joliet, and had lived there all his life. He leaves, besides his widow, his father and mother and two brothers, Will and Edward.

Albert Grohman.

Albert Grohman died at St. Mary's hospital, Saginaw, Mich., December 11, at the age of 46 years. He was born in Saginaw June 29, 1862. In 1890 he started in the florists' trade with his father and brother. In 1895 the father withdrew from the firm, and from that time the business had been conducted by the deceased and his brother, E. A. Grohman, under the name of Grohman Bros.

Mr. Grohman had been suffering with Bright's disease for over two years, but the end was not expected so soon, as he had been confined to bed for only a week when he died. He is survived by his wife, his mother, three brothers and one sister. The business will be continued under the name of Grohman Bros.

Sarah Pierce Frost.

Sarah Pierce Frost, wife of Varnum Frost, the well known market grower of Arlington, Mass., died December 23, at the age of 74 years. Funeral services were held at the chapel of the First Baptist church, Arlington, December 27. Mr. Frost is one of the best known exhibitors of vegetables at Horticultural hall, and has the sympathy of many friends in his affliction.

Arthur E. Clark.

Arthur E. Clark died December 23, at Cambridge, Mass., from an attack of typhoid fever, from which he had been suffering for ten days. Mr. Clark, who was a native of Randolph, Mass., was at one time engaged in the florists' business there with his parents. He later worked for Oakes Ames, in North Easton, after which he went into business on his own account at East Weymouth, where he stayed about five years. On giving up his place there, he was engaged by Sidney Hoffman to care for his greenhouses at Mount Auburn, leaving there only a short time ago. Mr. Clark was esteemed by all who knew him and his early and untimely death will be mourned by many. He was 30 years of age and leaves a widow and two children. Mrs. Clark is well known as an expert botanist and is an excellent authority on native plants.

Always let the flowers open out in a cool house, to give them substance. Narcissus poeticus ornatus, sweet scented yellow jonquils and a few of the earliest Dutch hyacinths may all now be started. Look over the main lot of bulbous stock and thoroughly water any that show the least trace of dryness at the roots.

Lilies.

"Will my lilies be in season for Easter?" is the burden of many inquiries now received. Easter, 1909, comes on April 11, a week earlier than in 1908. It is always better to have plants a little too early than to be obliged to resort to hard forcing a few days before the Easter festival. Lilies which are now six to eight inches high will be all right for Easter, if grown along in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night for a few weeks, giving them 5 degrees more heat a little later in the winter. Bulbs which are just pushing through the soil will also come in, but will require a little more pushing. Give them 55 degrees at night now, advancing to 60 degrees when they are six inches high. We do not like to force the plants until the pots are well filled with roots. Look over the stock frequently and throw away any showing signs of disease. Green aphis will quickly secure a foothold in the tops of the shoots if fumigating is neglected. Blow a little fine tobacco dust on the tops of the shoots. This will also help to keep pests in check.

Candidum lilies for Easter should be started at once. As these resent hard forcing, give them a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees as a starter. A little more heat may be given when the buds show.

Asparagus Plumosus.

The Christmas trade occasions a heavy demand for Asparagus plumosus. Where the strings have been clean cut out of portions of the beds, give the surface soil a good cleaning over and apply a mulch of decayed cow manure. Get the new twine strung as soon as possible. It is a big mistake to leave it until growth starts. Cutworms frequently harass asparagus growers and do great damage by eating the young shoots and tender foliage. Pyrethrum insect powder and Strawson's Vaporite are the best remedies we know of for these destructive pests. Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas has failed to clean them out.

Smilax.

Treatment similar to that recommended for Asparagus plumosus nanus should be given the cut-over portions of the smilax beds. Keep them on the dry side for a week or two, until the shoots have started well, when water may be applied more freely. Smilax will grow well in a lower temperature than asparagus. While it will stand 60 degrees at night, we prefer to grow it at least 5 degrees cooler.

Palms.

Take advantage of any spare hours to clean over the foliage on the palms. You cannot well expect customers to purchase plants with dirty foliage, such as we too often see, and if you have any decorations to carry out, you cannot afford to use dirty plants. If there is much scale on the leaves, use some whale oil soap in the water, being careful, however, not to use it on young, soft foliage, or burning will result. Wash the woodwork and glass with soap and water, and if bug has gotten a foothold, it will pay to paint the iron and woodwork with kerosene, always being careful not to let this drop on the foliage. It is rather too early yet to do any repotting. Wait until the days lengthen a little more.

Aster Gladys Evelyn.

Antirrhinums.

Antirrhinums benched in place of the earliest mums are now growing apace and will need a little attention every few days. Supports must be given to the flower stems, for if once bent or twisted they are practically worthless. It is not a good policy to let every shoot run up to flower, or your spikes will be small. If you want these to be of fancy quality, reduce the number on each plant to half a dozen and rub off all others as they appear. Keep the side shoots rubbed off the flowering stems as they advance. The surface soil will require an occasional stirring and, as the roots will now run pretty well through the compost, a little liquid manure can be given with advantage.

ASTER GLADYS EVELYN.

Five years ago the aster illustrated as Gladys Evelyn originated with E. A. Muchow, of Clarence, N. Y. In the seasons that followed he worked up a stock of seed until in 1908 he was able to plant quite an area. Instead of saving seeds from all the flowers on the plants, he saved only those from selected blooms, with the result that a steady improvement has been made in the quality of both bloom and stem. Mr. Muchow says that even in the unfavorable aster season of 1908 the flowers attained five inches in diameter, with stems two feet long. He asserts that under favorable conditions it can be grown much better.

This new aster is of the Comet type, and so double that it is a shy seeder. The center of the flower does not show. Mr. Muchow thinks he has in Gladys Evelyn a valuable addition to the list of florists' asters.

ELM COURT FARM CLUB-ROOM.

A striking example of the way a keen business man cares for the well being of his employees is furnished by Wm. Douglas Sloan at his large estate in Lenox, Mass. He has recently erected for the various employees a comfortable club-room, well heated and ventilated, and lighted by electricity. Installed therein is a full size pool-table of the finest make, and a phonograph of the latest design furnishes musical entertainment. Chess, checkers, dominoes, cards and a well-stocked library make the club attractive to the young men, keeping them interested and amused and away from the more or less harmful and expensive attractions of the adjacent city of Pittsfield. Mr. Sloan has not only earned the gratitude of his employees, but has made a splendid investment that will bear continuous interest in more efficient work and in the mental, moral and physical well-being of his employees. A COURSE IN FLORICULTURE.

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

The short course in floriculture at Massachusetts Agricultural College promises to be a great success. Already applications have been accepted to about the capacity of the teaching equipment. It has been decided, however, to accept twenty for this course, instead of fifteen, as originally planned. It is regretted that the new instruction building and the greenhouses will not be finished before February 15, or all who desire the course could be accommodated.

The practical men are giving the course their most hearty support and the talks by experts promise to be especially valuable. The following have consented to assist in this course: W. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., "Rose Growing as a Business"; Eber Holmes, Montrose, "Roses"; M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, and Peter Fisher, Ellis, "Carnations"; E. O. Orpet, South Lancaster, "Orchids"; William Sim, Cliftondale, "Sweet Pea Culture Under Glass"; Wm. J. Stewart, Boston, "Wholesale Marketing"; George Sinclair, Holyoke, "Chrysanthemums"; E. J. Canning, Northampton, Mass., "The Work of the Private Gardener." It is expected that Mr. Sykes, of Lord & Burnham Co., will speak on "Greenhouse Design and Construction"; also Andrew Elder, of the same firm, on "Greenhouse Heating." Several other experts in various lines hope to assist, but definite arrangements have not yet been made.

In addition to these talks, the daily lectures and laboratory exercises in floriculture, soils, fertilizers, insects and diseases promise to make a busy ten weeks. Professor White is planning Saturday morning observation trips to various greenhouse establishments. These will include the commercial ranges of Field, Northampton; Beach, South Hadley; Sinclair, Holyoke; Beals and others, Springfield; Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and many more, and the conservatories at Smith College and Mt. Holyoke College. E. A. W.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

The Christmas trade this year was a great improvement over that of 1907. All kinds of cut blooms commanded a good price. Plants sold well and were much used. All the store men had a good trade and all hands can look back on the Christmas of 1908 with pleasure.

Various Notes.

John Rieman was unfortunately laid up with an attack of rheumatism during Christmas week.

The Indianapolis Florists' Club will meet at A. Wiegand's January 6, to perfect plans for entertaining the visiting florists during the carnation convention.

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. J. Baur spent the holidays in Richmond. S.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Christmas was better than ever, both with the retail stores and at the commission houses. The weather was ideal from the shipping standpoint as well. The demand for plants was better than ever; in fact, there was not much call for cut flowers until December 24. Roses, carnations, narcissi, sweet peas, valley, etc., sold well and brought good prices. Violets were also in big demand and by Thursday noon many of the stores had to turn away violet customers. Beauties did not sell.

In plants the most popular were cyclamens, azaleas, araucarias, ferns, palms, poinsettias and begonias. The demand was for the less expensive plants. Many baskets were sold where the dollars could not be counted on the fingers of one hand, but $2 to $3 were the sums most people wanted to spend.

Conditions are about normal again, now that the excitement is over.

Various Notes.

The best roses seen about this city were from Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens– Richmond, Rhea Reid and La Detroit—while James Cary, also of the Bath City, shipped in some fine Killarney.

Thomas Browne, of Greenfield, supplied over 18,000 carnations to the Cut Flower Exchange.

The Bemb Floral Co. reports business as having been most satisfactory. Many fine plant and ribbon combinations were sold.

Breitmeyer's had their usual big business. Philip Breitmeyer, who is now Mayor Breitmeyer, and takes his seat in office January 1, was compelled to put in the whole night at the store Christmas eve with the rest of the staff.

W. B. Brown was completely cleaned out of plants.

J. F. Sullivan had a lot of fine stock and cleaned up pretty well on everything.

Carnations were the leaders at Taepke's. In the neighborhood of 6,000 were disposed of and all home-grown stock. A nice business in plants also was done.

Schroeter's is no doubt plant headquarters in Detroit. They had a fine lot of azaleas, poinsettias and cyclamens, and few were left. Mr. Schroeter is very enthusiastic about Christmas.

E. A. Fetters is highly elated; business by far exceeded expectations.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House handled a fine lot of stock, red roses and carnations in particular.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club, Monday, January 4, will be the first in the new quarters in the Cowee building. January 7 will be ladies' night. H. S.

OBITUARY.

Charles Kaehlert, Jr.

Charles Kaehlert, Jr., son of Charles Kaehlert, proprietor of the South Side Greenhouse, Joliet, Ill., died December 21. The decedent was born June 2, 1883, in Joliet, and had lived there all his life. He leaves, besides his widow, his father and mother and two brothers, Will and Edward.

Albert Grohman.

Albert Grohman died at St. Mary's hospital, Saginaw, Mich., December 11, at the age of 46 years. He was born in Saginaw June 29, 1862. In 1890 he started in the florists' trade with his father and brother. In 1895 the father withdrew from the firm, and from that time the business had been conducted by the deceased and his brother, E. A. Grohman, under the name of Grohman Bros.

Mr. Grohman had been suffering with Bright's disease for over two years, but the end was not expected so soon, as he had been confined to bed for only a week when he died. He is survived by his wife, his mother, three brothers and one sister. The business will be continued under the name of Grohman Bros.

Sarah Pierce Frost.

Sarah Pierce Frost, wife of Varnum Frost, the well known market grower of Arlington, Mass., died December 23, at the age of 74 years. Funeral services were held at the chapel of the First Baptist church, Arlington, December 27. Mr. Frost is one of the best known exhibitors of vegetables at Horticultural hall, and has the sympathy of many friends in his affliction.

Arthur E. Clark.

Arthur E. Clark died December 23, at Cambridge, Mass., from an attack of typhoid fever, from which he had been suffering for ten days. Mr. Clark, who was a native of Randolph, Mass., was at one time engaged in the florists' business there with his parents. He later worked for Oakes Ames, in North Easton, after which he went into business on his own account at East Weymouth, where he stayed about five years. On giving up his place there, he was engaged by Sidney Hoffman to care for his greenhouses at Mount Auburn, leaving there only a short time ago. Mr. Clark was esteemed by all who knew him and his early and untimely death will be mourned by many. He was 30 years of age and leaves a widow and two children. Mrs. Clark is well known as an expert botanist and is an excellent authority on native plants.

The Review brings results.

Happy New Year!

Look out for a freeze, the weather man says.

Taking it by and large, 1908 was not so bad a year.

Now let's all turn in and make 1909 the best year the trade ever has had.

There is no date better than January 1 for the settlement of outstanding accounts. Don't fail to render statements and ask payment.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Application for Registration.

Public notice is hereby given of the application of the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., for the registration of the plants specified below. These applications for registry were filed in this office December 23, 1908, and any person knowing of any reason why the registry of these names should not be made is requested to communicate with the undersigned.

Canna, Wawa.—Parentage, Maiden's Blush x a seedling; soft pink flowers, green foliage, three to four feet high, nicely rounded flowers.

Canna, Mont Blanc, Improved.—Mont Blanc, Improved, has the same vigorous constitution and luxuriant green foliage as its antecedent, Mont Blanc; it has large flowers, which are almost pure white and produced in great profusion; height about four feet; foliage green.

Rose, Climbing Mosella.—New climbing rose, a sport from the bush rose, Mosella, and identical in the appearance of blossoms.

W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

December 23, 1908.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The committee, Messrs. Simpson, May and Pierson, appointed by President Poehlmann, met in New York city, December 21, to discuss the schedule for the Buffalo exhibition. The work was found to call for close attention and the committee could not finish at one sitting. At present there is $715 cash available for prizes, and three silver cups.

The florists of Buffalo are making preparations in earnest for their share of the work. The Iroquois hotel may be selected as the place for the exhibition. According to the society's by-laws, the opening day will be the fourth Wednesday in Lent, which will be March 17, 1909. The annual meeting will open on that day. The exhibition will be held in conjunction with the Buffalo Florists' Club. All prizes should be forwarded as soon as possible to the secretary, Benj. Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y., whether cups or cash, to get into the schedule.

A WORD WITH ADVERTISERS.

The next four or five months are the heaviest of the year with the Review—the ones in which advertising patronage is greatest.

The Review aims to take care of every advertising order, for any issue, received up to 12 o'clock, noon, on Wednesday, the day of going to press. This permits advertisers to mail "copy" on the 18-hour trains that leave New York at 3:45 on Tuesday afternoon, Philadelphia at 4:55, and be in time.

The Review will be found as prompt to discontinue advertisements as to insert new ones.

But to give this prompt service to all patrons it is necessary that we have their coöperation. Don't ask us to do regularly on Wednesday what you might as well give us to do on Tuesday, or on Monday. Make it a rule to mail your advertising instructions to reach us Monday, or Tuesday at the latest. Then we shall have the decks cleared for you on the occasional weeks that you have important instructions you cannot place in our hands until Wednesday.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The last week of 1908 has been about normal. Following Christmas there was the usual falling off in demand, but outside orders soon began to come in again. The city trade is light. Funeral work is decidedly slack and only a few of the leading stores share in the social festivities. These stores are having a good run of decorating for weddings and especially for receptions and dinners.

As usual, everything was cut close for Christmas, so that for several days there were light receipts, but it was noticeable at Christmas that crops were just coming on and it was only a few days before the receipts of roses were heavy enough to depress the prices. This was especially true of Beauties. The weather has been for two weeks specially favorable for bringing on the rose crops and December 29 was a spring day. If the weather man's long-promised cold wave does not materialize soon, the market will suffer.

Carnations held up surprisingly after Christmas. Violets also were scarce because of the close pick for the holiday and the preparations for supplying the special New Year's demand. New Year's has added considerably to the shipping of first-class stock, but New Year's, comparing it with the Christmas demand, is fifty-one places removed instead of only one.

AND STILL IT'S BEAUTIES

We had the finest as well as the largest supply for Christmas and

We Start the New Year With a Big Crop

Prices are down—low for our quality of goods. All lengths of stem, but specially strong on long. Order of us and get just what you want.

Fancy Carnations

We have the largest lot of strictly high grade stock to be found in this market. Large crops now on and quality the very best. Especially strong on Enchantress; also large lots of fine pink and white. Order of us; you'll be back for more.

Fine Roses

Good crops in all varieties—all lengths of stem; fine heads. Maid, Bride, Killarney, Richmond, Field, etc. We take good care of all orders. Tell us how many and what grade and we do the rest—to your satisfaction.

Choice Violets

Get in touch with us if you use Violets in quantity. We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. Send us an order of any size—we will have them for you.

Farleyense

The best stores are using Farleyense for their fine work. It's the choicest green. They get it of us—$6.00 to $8.00 per 100 cut fronds.

Also large supplies of Valley, Sweet Peas, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Jonquils, Stevia, etc. Plenty Green Goods, as always. Always remember:

Christmas Aftermath.

The big shipping days of the Christmas market were accurately reported in last week's Review, so that all that remains to be said is that Thursday, December 24, the day the local business has to be cared for, developed a first-class demand and a larger supply of Beauties than had been anticipated. Practically every Beauty grower had many more flowers than he had expected to cut, the weather being specially favorable. In addition, Philadelphia contributed Beauties to this market. So did Council Bluffs, and the largest lot of all came from New Castle, having gone elsewhere in recent years. So Chicago drew Beauties from a stretch of 1,500 miles and had probably as many Beauties as any other year. The greatest trouble was that, in holding back, many of the Beauties which could have been marketed at a good price when right, were too open to be salable on arrival. As a result, prices on anything but the best grade were made by the buyer. The street boys got long Beauties of the open variety at pretty close to midsummer prices. Some fairly good stock is said to have sold as low as $9 per dozen after the shipping days had passed; the heaviest receipts were at the eleventh hour and it was much easier to fill Beauty orders December 24 and Christmas morning than it was December 22 or 23.

Poinsettias also proved to be in oversupply. They would have sold better if long Beauties had been scarcer, but there always is a limit to the price that can be realized for poinsettias. Above $3 per dozen they go slowly and a great many were left. Violets were so plentiful that no high prices were made, a few being left. Other stock came out about right. Maids of the best grade were the scarcest item. Red roses were unusually abundant. Carnations cleaned up well, but at rather lower average prices than last year; some say ten per cent, some as much as twenty per cent. There were fewer white than usual to carry over, but nevertheless most houses had a few buckets of white carnations cheap for funeral work December 26.

Taking it altogether, it was a thoroughly satisfactory Christmas. The business was large. Supplies were just about equal to requirements. The quality of stock was fair, although a good many roses were soft. Reports as to how total sales compared with last year vary considerably, but just about as the supplies of stock varied. Some houses are handling less stock than they did a year ago, and others considerably more. The total of Christmas business probably is fully as good and possibly a little greater than in 1907. And 1907 was the banner Christmas.

Christmas at Retail.

The retailers are practically unanimous in reporting a thoroughly satisfactory Christmas. Not all did more than a year ago, but everyone had a good trade and sold out clean and made money. An immense number of poinsettias in pans, azaleas and other blooming plants was sold. Poinsettias are about the only flower on which any of the retailers were stuck.

Carnation Show.

The annual Chicago carnation display will be held by the Horticultural Society of Chicago in coöperation with the Chicago Florists' Club at the Art Institute, Thursday, January 14, from 1:30 to 5 p. m. There will be no competitive judging and no prizes will be awarded. Certificates of merit of the Horticultural Society will be given to all new varieties scoring eighty-five points or over and silver and bronze medals will be available for award either to new varieties of unusual merit or the displays of older varieties which in quantity, variety and quality shall be considered worthy.

All varieties will be staged with the display card of the grower or exhibitor and every effort will be made to secure the best possible advertising returns to the exhibitor. C. W. Johnson, of Rockford, will act as judge and N. P. Miller will superintend the exhibition.

Originators of new varieties usually send their blooms to the January club meeting and should not miss this one. It is strongly urged that exhibitors will advise J. H. Burdett, assistant secretary, 1411 First National Bank building, as early as possible as to the number of varieties they will show and the quantity of each, so that proper arrangements for vases and staging may be made. The exhibits should be addressed to N. P. Miller, Art Institute, Chicago, and shipped so as to arrive on the morning of January 14. The society will pay express charges on all exhibits.

The committee in charge consists of W. N. Rudd, Leonard Kill and L. Coatsworth.

Various Notes.

Chicago wholesalers are turning over a new leaf in the matter of credits. Too great laxity has been the common practice. In 1909 a good many will adhere to the rule of making a draft for all accounts not paid by the twentieth day of each month, and refusing further credit to those who do not meet the drafts. Wholesale florists all over the country are breaking away from the old practices, apparently realizing that narrowing margin of profit calls for the adoption of more conservative business methods.

At least one Chicago wholesaler had Christmas orders for cut flowers from cities in Georgia and Florida.

W. L. Palinsky, who sells most of his stock at wholesale, says the Christmas buying was late in beginning, but not a plant in bloom was left when he sat down to his Christmas turkey.

The strenuous Christmas business put Carl Thomas, of Randall's, and A. C. Kohlbrand, of Amling's, on the shelf for repairs.

Peter Reinberg gave every man in his greenhouses a two-dollar bill for Christmas. The boys in the store, and the young lady also, received watches.

Herbert Heller, of New Castle, was one of the Christmas visitors.

Wietor Bros. say the Christmas business was the most satisfactory the firm ever has done. Sales were not greatly larger than last year, but the stock matched up with the orders to the great satisfaction of the store force.

J. A. Budlong hit Christmas with a fine crop of Killarney and Richmond; practically the whole crop came in for Christmas and the holiday week, for it will be off in a few days.

At Peter Reinberg's city store it is stated that the sales of December 23 made a new record for the establishment.

C. W. McKellar says he sold three times as many orchids as at any other Christmas. He is handling the Mrs. Gillman violet and says it is better than any Marie Louise in the market.

E. E. Pieser says the Kennicott Bros. Co. is more than pleased with Christmas. He says he does not recall a Christmas of recent years where everything cleaned up so well, but he says prices averaged lower than last year.

The dealers in Christmas trees, holly and greens had stock for New Year's, in some cases enough to cut quite a hole in the profits. These specialties never were in larger supply than this year.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the holiday business has been specially good with them because of the quantity of violets sold.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has done a big business in greens this year and also had a good cut flower trade at Christmas.

E. H. Hunt reports the holiday supply business the best ever. C. M. Dickinson thinks their Christmas list hit the buyers at the psychological moment, for the response was much ahead of expectations.

Bassett & Washburn remembered each man in their employ with a box of cigars at Christmas, and in addition the married men each received a turkey.

The A. L. Randall Co. credits Emil Buettner with having had the best Richmond in the market for Christmas. They were sold to O. J. Friedman at 50 cents each.

Zech & Mann have been doing a better business all fall than they did last year and say Christmas was about one-third greater than in 1907.

It is no small compliment to Poehlmann Bros. Co. that so many sons of well known eastern growers seek employment at Morton Grove. Time was when the young men all went east for floricultural education.

Bassett & Washburn have shipped 70,000 cuttings of the O. P. Bassett carnation. For Christmas they had a big sale on the cut blooms.

E. C. Amling says his Christmas was the best ever, but that he missed the buyers whose stores are in the factory districts—they were not buying. It shows that general conditions not only are not back to normal, but it leaves the lower grades of stock on the wholesaler's hands and pulls down the average. The business was with the best stores and heavier than ever, but they wanted only the best goods.

Scheiden & Schoos say that December 22 to 24 they cut 10,000 carnations, almost half of which were their new red, Wm. H. Taft. This was from only three 140-foot benches of the variety; they took about 20 cents off of each plant for Christmas. Mr. Schoos says the Taft last year gave twenty-two blooms per plant.

NEW ORLEANS.

The exchange of plants and flowers for Christmas presents has never been much the custom in New Orleans so far, and this year did not bring much improvement in the business of the florists. Every establishment was well provided with flowering stock, but the general sales were poor. But in another way, the use of greens, in the line of Christmas trees and holly, is much on the increase, and the city was overcrowded with venders of all kinds. Competition was close

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The charming, sunny holiday weather holds in New York and the year promises to go out in "a blaze of glory." The week opens auspiciously, not a cloud on the horizon, either from a physical or business standpoint. Shipments are light and the demand seems natural and encouraging, while prices have receded to reasonable figures, as is their custom between Christmas and New Year's. The "first" is expected to exceed its record this year, because of the re-establishment of confidence in financial circles and the growing disposition of the metropolis to signalize its Happy New Year greetings in flowers and blooming plants, now that the calling methods of the old days are no longer popular.

Christmas of 1908 will long be a happy memory. Plant growers invariably declared, when the question of demand was suggested, that "everything was sold," and the majority of them told the literal truth. If anything was in excess it was the azalea, and yet every well flowered plant of this found a ready purchaser. The demand for basket combinations at reasonable figures seemed to be universal. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine especially was perfect and popular. The orange tree was used freely in the made-up offerings, and heather, ardisias, dracænas, pandanus and the new ferns all did duty as never before. It was for the plantsmen a banner Christmas. It will greatly encourage them in their preparation for Easter, which, coming April 11, gives them fifteen busy weeks of planning for what is sure to be the greatest Easter the florists have ever known.

The wholesale seedsmen of lower and central New York city, and the handlers of green goods in the wholesale district, all declare it was the best Christmas they have ever known. Every perfect tree, every sprig of well berried holly, every yard of evergreen roping, was sold, and well sold. The demand for holly wreaths was insistent. Some of the wholesalers put their men at work night and day on these alone, and could not fill all their orders.

In the cut flower markets there was no excitement, hardly a trace of pickling —"the world do move," as Brother Jasper says—and the prices asked brought wholesaler and retailer together more harmoniously than in a generation. The slight natural advance in rates for Beauties and other roses, violets and carnations was accepted without a murmur, and the all-night session was one of the most placid, cheery and friendly I have ever seen in wholesaledom in these last busy seven years. Top for Beauties was $1.25; for Killarney, 50 cents; for Brides and Maids, 25 cents. Violets touched $1.25 per hundred for specials, and carnations, except for the reds, did not go above 10 cents at any time, and most of them sold at reasonable rates. There were few good chrysanthemums. For the poorer samples held over there was no demand. Orchids, valley, gardenias and lilies, especially the latter, were abundant, and while there was no scarcity in anything but roses, there was no abnormal demand nor any freak prices at any time. The general business never seemed to be on a better common-sense, supply and demand basis.

The present week sees a reduction of twenty-five per cent on everything, with smaller shipments and the prospect of steady rates until Thursday, when the New Year's demand begins. The whole week should prove a satisfactory one, especially to the retailers, who were practically sold out of everything at noon on Christmas, and who have weddings, dinners and theaters galore to keep the pot boiling from now on through the busy winter season. The Christmas retail business was an agreeable surprise to these patient men, who are the real foundation of the whole structure and without whom grower and wholesaler would soon lapse into innocuous desuetude. These two especially, wholesaler and retailer, are evincing a disposition to work in harmony.

Various Notes.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will take place Monday evening, January 11, in the Grand Opera House building. President Hallock and the other new officials will be installed. There are fifty of the best retail florists of the city who would find it greatly to their advantage to secure membership in this organization.

There are said to be about fifty applicants for W. W. Burnham's position at Bloomingdale's.

Hunter & McAllister is the title of a new retail firm doing business at 11 Fifth avenue. The store is in the Hotel Brevoort, a good locality.

Rudolph Fischer was in New York last week on his way from the golden west to Germany.

The generosity of the trade to its employees was everywhere manifest at Christmas. A notable example of generosity was the gift of New York Cut Flower Co. to Miss Mildred Foran, the bookkeeper, who leaves the firm January 2 for her home in Canada. The managers and employees also joined in the demonstration, which included a week's salary, a rich leather handbag and $50 in gold. Miss Agnes Savage will succeed Miss Foran.

A. T. Boddington is back from his annual two weeks' visit among his Lenox friends.

William Badgley, of Chatham, N. J., was in the city Christmas eve, happy because he had grown so many Killarney this season.

Stumpp & Walter Co. report the best Christmas it ever has known.

It was a great Christmas for the wholesale cut flower merchants of Brooklyn, and for the retailers as well.

Christmas Trade.

Reports from the stores are now coming in and, from what can be learned from the different ones, satisfaction seems to prevail. All claim to have equaled last year's trade and a great many claim a large increase. Among the wholesalers, stock was plentiful, with the exception of Beauties, Richmonds, red carnations and violets, the last mentioned being far short of what was needed. Carnations were on hand by the thousands, and plenty of good stock went for prices far below those expected for Christmas trade. Poinsettias were not snapped up as in other years; it seemed as though the fair weather compelled everybody to want violets, and violets it must be. Lilies, valley, Romans, and in fact all white flowers, were poor sellers.

In the rose line, Killarney, Chatenay, Maid and Bride were all received in large quantities—plenty to fill all orders and some left. If it had not been for some large funerals right after Christmas there would have been trouble in moving the white stock left over.

Various Notes.

Smith & Fetters report trade better than a year ago, with a strong demand for large plants of all kinds. The call for long Beauties and violets with this firm was exceptional this Christmas. After the holidays large funeral orders kept all hands hard at work.

Peter Nichols, of the Arcade, says trade was better than ever. He sold quantities of plants and Christmas wreaths. Cut flowers also sold well.

From the west side Knoble Bros. report a tremendous trade, leaving last year's volume of business far in the shade. This firm made a specialty of wreaths of immortelles, boxwood and magnolia, which sold faster than they could be turned out. Mr. Knoble remarked that a customer had to be disappointed for a box of flowers Christmas afternoon, as they were completely sold out.

Westman & Getz report the best business they ever had. They sold quantities of novelties in decorated baskets, for which this firm is famous. Cut flower trade was also fine.

John Kirchner reports a good sale on cemetery wreaths for the holidays, as well as being busy with large funeral orders.

W. F. Hanna, of Woodland Hills, had some large funeral orders for the Brayton, one of which was a large car wheel of violets and Romans.

Reports from C. M. Wagner are of the best, as the force worked all night getting out orders. The call here was for the best grade of plants and cut flowers. They also had some large decorations last week.

W. H. Kramer, of Rocky River, sent in a fine cut of carnations for Christmas, his rose-pink being very fine.

On Monday, December 28, the J. M. Gasser Co. had the misfortune of having its large delivery wagon catch fire from an overturned lantern, ruining all the flowers it contained.

Lars Anderson was on hand with his usual large cut for the holidays, consisting of carnations, Romans, narcissi and poinsettias. His Victory carnations were fine.

Robert Kegg sent in a fine lot of carnations for the holidays. His Enchantress were especially good.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. handled an extra good lot of violets for Christmas, but it was impossible to fill orders. Their Killarney and Richmond were also fine.

C. A. Bramley had all that he could handle at his three stores. Large quantities of Boston ferns and araucarias were disposed of; also hundreds of pans filled with sea moss. B.

ONARGA, ILL.—The Mosbaek Greenhouse Co. has decided not to wind up the business, as had been contemplated, but will instead push it harder than ever. Charles W. Reimers, formerly of Louisville, Ky., and well known in the trade, has been engaged as manager.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Christmas Market.

The demand for Christmas flowers, Christmas plants and Christmas greens last week was something extraordinary. It really seemed as though every man, woman and child in the City of Brotherly Love found one or another of these fruits of nature indispensable at Christmas. That this was true in every other city within reach of this market was abundantly evidenced by the immense shipments of all three of these commodities that went out.

The cut flower business was fully equal to that of any preceding Christmas. While it is difficult to measure so large a market accurately, a careful survey of the field leads to the belief that the volume of business was larger than ever before; that prices, while not so high, averaged better, and that the quality of stock, speaking generally, was superior to that sent out in previous years.

Taking the staple flowers on the list, one at a time, the general opinion prevails that Beauties were as plentiful (probably a little more so) as in previous years; the average price for long-stemmed flowers was $12 to $15 per dozen, the lower figure being the ruling one. Flowers of this grade were equal to the demand, but those of the medium grades and of the shorter grades with perfect blooms were not equal to the demand. Mrs. Jardine, Richmond, and Killarney came next to Beauties in quality. Fancy blooms of all three of these sterling varieties touched 50 cents, while choice medium stock sold readily at from 25 to 40 cents. Richmond especially was in great demand and heavy supply. Killarney far outranked the pure tea varieties, and was sold in larger quantities than any other pink rose. Bride, Bridesmaid and Golden Gate were all in demand when choice. Select blooms sold readily at 20 cents, occasionally higher. But none of these varieties seemed in as large supply as in former years.

The feature of the carnation market was, as is usual at Christmas, the preference shown for red, choice blooms of Beacon and some of the other fancy reds bringing from 12 to 15 cents, while good average stock of this color sold readily (this is not a pun) at 10 cents. A fair price for Enchantress and fancy white was 8 cents, while 4 to 6 cents was about right for fairly good stock in all colors but red. Poor and held-over flowers generally realized 3 cents.

Cattleyas were scarce at 75 cents each. Cypripediums were decidedly in excess of the demand at 12½ cents. A fair amount of Dendrobium formosum lent variety to the orchid class. Violets were rather scarce. Hightstown doubles brought $1.50 to $2; choice fancy singles, $1. While a certain amount of Marie Louise was sold, they hardly seemed as popular as the Lady Campbell from Hightstown. Gardenias were in fair supply at prices ranging from 50 to 75 cents each.

Valley was plentiful, of choice quality, generally speaking, and sold fairly well. There were a good many Harrisii lilies about. The demand for them was hardly equal to the supply. Mignonette sold well, 6 cents being obtained for the best; while bouvardia, when good, was also in demand. Immense quantities of poinsettias were marketed, chiefly at prices ranging from $8 to $25 per hundred, the latter figure buying fancy stock that wholesaled at higher prices than in former years.

Greens were not in especial demand. The well-known propensity of the growers to increase their Christmas returns by sending in whatever greens they can scrape together demoralizes the green market, which is always weak at a holiday. Smilax suffered least, a fair amount being disposed of, usually at $12.50 per hundred, while asparagus, both bunches and strings, dragged badly.

Summing up the cut flower situation, the demand set in late, Wednesday, December 23, being below expectations. But the following day saw a rush that was continued until noon on Christmas for the scarcer varieties of stock, red and pink roses being especially in demand. Carnations weakened a little Thursday night. A judicious drop in prices sold nearly everything, except white, which was in oversupply. This would not have occurred had the growers heeded the wholesalers' instructions to push white along as fast as fit, and hold nothing.

The plant business was treated in this column last week. It is only necessary to add that the retail stores disposed of their plants with such success that many say it was a plant Christmas. All the bright-colored blooming plants sold well, while made-up baskets and hampers filled with choice foliage and flowering stock were never in better demand, and, it is only fair to add, were never so attractively presented. Some of the leading shops greatly exceeded their last year's number of made-up baskets and hampers, and a day before Christmas had sold everything that was ready. Poinsettias were especial favorites with the average buyer for this work. The business in greens may be summed up briefly as follows: The wholesalers handled more stock than ever before; but there were more cases than usual of overconfidence in the demand, chiefly among the retailers, and the disappointment consequent to left-over stock. Holly and the cheaper wreaths were notable sufferers.

The prices in the cut flower market have fallen from one-third to one-half since Christmas. Business is brisk, roses and nearly all the varieties of small flowers being noticeably in demand. Many of the white carnations left over from Christmas have been consumed in various ways, so that little is going to waste. There is still a fair amount of poinsettia in the market, but the bulk of the stock has been cut. Violets continue scarce, and cyps extremely plentiful. Paper Whites sold well at Christmas and continue in demand.

Various Notes.

Edward Reid had some choice Bonnaffons and white and yellow Mrs. Jerome Jones for Christmas. He made a shipment to Athens, Ga., a day or two later.

August Doemling sent some fine long-stemmed Killarney roses to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

Robert Leslie Kift filled a thousand or more of his father's bowls with partridge berries, which sold advantageously at Christmas.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received importations of advance Easter novelties by the steamer Manitou.

Carl Lang, of Roxborough, sent in some fine scarlet carnations for Christmas.

M. Rice & Co. are sending out a unique New Year's greeting in the form of a bank check, payable in the sum of three hundred and sixty-five days of happiness, and on the back appears a set of New Year's resolutions, with some good advice.

The funeral of the father of United States Senator Penrose called for many floral tributes.

The Christmas Trade.

All hands are agreed that the Christmas flower trade was satisfactory, a decided improvement over a year ago. In a few cases, as, for instance, fancy carnations, prices ruled a little lower than in 1907, but the clearing out was far better and an optimism prevailed which was entirely lacking at that time. Up till a few days before Christmas there were grave doubts as to how business would be, but in the last two or three days it came with a rush which simply surprised everybody. While no fancy prices were realized, the general clearance was good and trade surpassed all expectations.

per dozen. Quite a good many, somewhat shorter, fetched $9. Some really magnificent Killarney and Richmond brought $6 per dozen, other grades bringing $4, $3 and downwards. Many more red roses could have been sold. Bridesmaid moves heavily now that Killarney is so much grown, and Bride went slowly, with little advance. Some remarkably fine White Killarney were seen, while some of the old-time favorites, such as Isabella Sprunt, Safrano, Perle and Niphetos were noted. Of Maryland and Jardine a limited number only arrived. Some Rhea Reid made up to $4 per dozen, but there are complaints of this rose turning a sour color forty-eight hours after picking.

A few fancy carnations made $8 to $10 per hundred. These included scarlets, crimsons and dark pinks. Fair Maid and Enchantress made $5 to $6, while whites were, as usual, a slow sale, $2 to $3 being prevailing prices. Violets were not overabundant; $1 to $1.50 were average prices, although $2 was paid for a few. The output of singles was greatly reduced from a year ago. Valley made $2 to $4. Poinsettias were abundant at $2, $3, $4 to $5 per dozen bracts. There was a good supply of Trumpet Major narcissus, a few Golden Spurs and Tulip La Reine also appearing. Paper Whites sold better than usual, making up to $3 per hundred, but Romans were in oversupply. A few late mums appeared, the best making $2 per dozen. Sweet peas were good at from $1 to $2 per hundred. Red and pink bouvardia, Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, mignonette, antirrhinums and Cypripedium insigne were all on hand. Cattleyas made $5 to $6 per dozen and gardenias $4 per dozen. Lilies made $10 to $12.50 per hundred. Callas were few.

Asparagus, smilax and adiantum all had a good sale, without any advance in price. In evergreens business was of immense proportions. Holly was overabundant and rather a slow sale. Laurel wreathing had a tremendous sale; so had boxwood. Pine wreathing proved less popular than laurel.

The plant trade was far the heaviest Boston has ever seen. The store-keepers all report splendid business and many more good plants could have been disposed of, particularly of colored sorts. Poinsettias in pans had a big sale; so had azaleas, of which there was never a better lot seen here at Christmas. Lorraine begonias had a good sale, but some people seem to be tiring of these. Ardisias, solanums and Otaheite oranges were well cleaned out. Hollies and skimmias were fewer than usual, but sold out. Cyclamens did not sell quite so well as expected, the trouble being that the plants did not have sufficient flowers open. Palms in smaller sizes, Boston and Whitmani ferns and fern dishes all had a good sale. All the plant specialists did a satisfactory trade, being cleaned out of all good stock. Lily of the valley sold particularly well.

Since Christmas the market has been good, with prices fairly well maintained. Not for a long time have the markets been so well cleaned out. All growers look forward to 1909 with a feeling of optimism and anticipate steadily improving trade in the new year.

The nominating committee consisted of W. H. Elliott, W. N. Craig and C. W. Parker.

The committee recommended the appointment of a press committee. Their recommendation was adopted.

An invitation was tendered to the two wholesale flower markets to hold their coming trade exhibitions at Horticultural hall. A number of new members were elected.

The following is the program of lectures and discussions at Horticultural hall for the season of 1909:

January 2—Inaugural meeting. President's address. Annual reports.

January 9—"The Yeast of the Soil," by William H. Bowker, Boston.

January 16—"Garden Insects and How to Control Them," by Prof. E. Dwight Sanderson, Durham, N. H.

January 23—"Ornamental Gardens and Garden Materials," with stereopticon illustrations, by Prof. E. A. White, Amherst, Mass.

January 30—"The Effects of Conditions of Growth in Certain Horticultural Plants upon Susceptibility to Fungous Diseases," by Prof. B. M. Duggar, Ithaca, N. Y.

February 13—"Plant Breeding," with stereopticon illustrations, by Prof. H. J. Webber, Ithaca, N. Y.

February 20—"American Landscape Architecture," by Prof. F. A. Waugh, Amherst, Mass.

February 27—"Rural New England," by Mrs. C. R. F. Ladd, Sturbridge, Mass.

March 6—"The Propagation of Plants by Various Methods," by Jackson Dawson, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

Various Notes.

H. R. Werdmuller, formerly with W. W. Edgar & Co., of Waverley, Mass., is now with Wilhelm Pfitzer, Stuttgart, Germany, the noted hybridist of cannas, begonias, gladioli, etc. Mr. Werdmuller left America owing to a breakdown in his health. He is happily now much improved and may return here in the future. He retains his membership in the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

Several growers had consignments of cut flowers frozen during the cold snap December 23. Quite low readings were recorded in some places. At W. H. Elliott's Madbury establishment, the minimum was 27 degrees below zero. The weather on Christmas eve and Christmas day was mild and spring-like, the temperature rising to 50 degrees in the shade.

Welch Bros. report a much heavier Christmas trade than a year ago. White flowers were the only slow sale. They handled quantities of long-stemmed Beauties at top prices. Holly was the only thing in evergreens which sold slowly. Laurel was in heavy demand.

Growers of single violets are practically unanimous in the opinion that their pick is much below that of a year ago. William Spillsbury, of Woburn, states that his pick up to Christmas was 60,000 below that of 1907.

F. R. Mathieson, of Waltham, who for some years has sold his flowers at Park Street market, is now consigning his whole output to Welch Bros. Mr. Mathieson is noted as a first-class grower of roses.

Christmas Trade.

While out gathering reports as to Christmas business, I came to the conclusion that this year's business eclipsed all former records and must go down as the best ever. Prices were high on cut stock and the wholesalers had nothing left after Friday noon. The demand for plants among the retailers was never better and the show houses of the west end florists are empty. The feature this year was the large number of blooming plants offered, and no retailer seems to have overbought in these. The most popular blooming plants this year were azaleas, poinsettias and Lorraine begonias. Poinsettias in low pans sold best, and azaleas were well flowered. The weather was just right for delivery, little wrapping being needed. All kinds of greens sold well, despite the fact that holly and greens could be bought on all street corners, as both were plentiful and cheap this year.

In cut flowers the marke' was well supplied with everything in season and all stock cleaned up early at good, big, stiff prices. Carnations took the lead and all fancies brought $8 per hundred. Aristocrat, Enchantress and red sold best. In violets the market had only Californias to sell, at $2 per hundred, and they retailed at $1 per bunch of twenty-five. The Smith Co. disposed of nearly 30,000 in two days. Roses were not so plentiful as was expected. American Beauties took the lead at $12 to $15 per dozen for choice stock. Other roses brought $15 to $20 per hundred for choice blooms. Red roses were scarce at all the wholesale houses. Bulbous stock, as usual, sold well at usual prices, except valley, which went up to $4 per hundred. Romans and Paper Whites were in plenty. All Christmas novelties sold well.

Business between Christmas and New Year's should be good, as it is in season for many balls and dinners, which call for a great many floral decorations. The rush for New Year's will not be so great, though a good many orders have been booked ahead.

as well as other west end florists, also report a large Christmas business, with plants selling above cut flowers.

Mrs. Ayers never was so busy in her life. She cleaned up everything in plants and cut flowers.

Fred C. Weber says trade was never better, either in cut flowers or plants.

George Waldbart had three delivery wagons going all day. As usual, he sold clean out of everything.

F. H. Weber says it was his best Christmas since he started in business. He reports a big plant trade.

Ellison Floral Co. had a large Christmas business, having all it could do to fill orders.

In the southern part of the city, R. J. Windler, the Eggeling Floral Co., C. Bergstermann, C. Beyer, Schray & Sons and F. J. Fillmore all have a good word for the business done during the Christmas rush.

Downtown, Ostertag Bros., Young & Sons Co., Miss Badaracco, the Foster Floral Co., John Burke and the Riessen Floral Co. say that everything sold well, all handling cut flowers principally, except Young & Sons Co., who did a big plant trade.

The Bentzen Floral Co., A. Brix and F. H. Meinhardt, up north, also had a big Christmas trade, so Christmas of 1908 will go down as the best the St. Louis florists have ever had.

Various Notes.

Mrs. William Ellison, of the Ellison Floral Co., fell last week and sprained her foot badly, which kept her at home during the big rush.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., spent Saturday, December 26, in the city, visiting old friends in the trade. Mr. Guy says he had a good holiday trade.

From what we can learn among the carnation growers and a few retailers, nearly fifteen will attend the carnation meeting at Indianapolis next month. Those who intend going should call up President Young, of the Florists' Club.

The Michel Plant & Bulb Co. will continue its monthly auction sales after the first of the year, in order to dispose of surplus stock in ferns.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was good this year. Everything in choice stock moved rapidly. Decorations were furnished for several parties which were given Christmas evening. Long poinsettias, cattleyas and ardisias were used to good advantage at these social functions. Some of the leaders of society, who usually spend the holidays in the metropolis, remained in Erie this year, and added materially to the success of the merchants. The florists in particular are all well satisfied with the Christmas trade.

Various Notes.

The Erie Floral Co., of which H. J. Wise is manager, sent large shipments of roses and carnations to the William F. Kasting Co., Buffalo, N. Y., for the holidays.

Miss Cora Hapgood helped in the store of her uncle, John V. Laver, during the Christmas rush.

W. O. Baur is visiting relatives in Toledo, O.

Vern Schluraff did a large business in his new retail store at Conneaut, O. His greenhouses in Erie were taxed to their utmost capacity.

Roman Olzewski, who went into the retail business a short time ago, is doing well in the Polish district.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Christmas trade was good; some of the florists say it was the best they ever had. Stock of all kinds was plentiful and of good quality, with prices moderate. Holly was plentiful, but was of poor quality. A good many of the wholesale fruit and commission houses handled it this year, and the market was overstocked with it. The first three days of the week were ideal and brought out the shoppers.

Various Notes.

H. Fuchs is well satisfied with his first year's business on Fourth avenue.

Nanz & Neuner sold a good many poinsettias, which were grown at their greenhouse and were fine. They also cut some good carnations.

Jacob Schulz reports that this Christmas was equal to his Easter trade. He had a good display of potted plants of good quality. He also disposed of some good Beauties and Richmond and other cut flowers at good prices.

F. Walker & Co. report the best Christmas they ever had. Mr. Walker wrote a little article for the local papers denying the report that flowers would be high-priced.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson had a good window display, including a life-sized Santa Claus.

Wm. Walker had an elegant display of potted plants and cut flowers, and reports business better than ever.

Fred L. Schulz reports business good. The regular monthly meeting of the Society of Florists will be held at the store of Mr. Schulz. The following officers will be installed for 1909: President, Fred L. Schulz; vice-president, Robert Miller; secretary, H. Kleinstarink; treasurer, Joseph Wettle; financial secretary, Louis Kirch; sergeant-at-arms, Wm. L. Korb; trustee, H. Fuchs.

At the last session of the bowling club, Capt. Geo. L. Schulz's team won three straight from Capt. Will Walker's team. Fred L. Schulz was high, with 201.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
Pres. Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

VISITED CHICAGO: S. J. Michaels, of Sioux City, Ia.

FUNK BROS. SEED CO., Bloomington, Ill., has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000.

VALLEY will not be forced as extensively in 1909 as in the year just past, and it is reasonable to expect that prices will be more satisfactory than in 1908.

THERE are men of keen foresight who say that there is no industry which will show greater development in the United States in the next score of years than the business of supplying commercial fertilizers.

ALFALFA was a long time coming into general cultivation in the United States, but it now is grown in every state, with the possible exception of Florida, and is the staple leguminous forage crop throughout the western half of the country.

PAUL PFITZER, son of Wilhelm Pfitzer, Stuttgart, Germany, leaves early in the new year to make a voyage to the West Indies, as well as the southern and eastern United States. Many of the noted commercial and private establishments in the east will be visited by him while here.

IT is reported from Sidell, Ill., that T. J. Sconce, of the Fairview Farm Seed Co., is attracting much attention by his experiments and partial success in producing cobless corn. Though this new type of corn is, of course, still in the experimental stage, the cob is said to be practically eliminated, being merely a slender stalk on which the kernels grow. It is claimed for this corn that, when perfected, it will enable the farmer to realize a greater production in quality and quantity than at present.

CONGRESSIONAL SEEDS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 28.—The progress made in the congressional seed distribution is reported better at this season of the year than it has ever been before. The fire last year, of course, interfered greatly with the work of the seed distribution, but since the close of the last distribution a new warehouse has been constructed, thoroughly equipped with new machinery and arranged so conveniently that the work is handled more economically and expeditiously than ever before. The Brown Bag-filling Machine Co. does the packeting this year.

The seed for the present year's distribution is practically all in the warehouse, a condition which seldom exists at the Christmas season. The packeting is progressing and stock is ready to go out as fast as congressional requisitions are received. The mailing of the seed during election year is generally delayed later than in other years; it appears that members of congress are busy with other matters than that of seed distribution, so that perhaps, while the seed is not going out quite as rapidly as it does in off years, the work is well in hand.

Reports have been current in the seed trade as to the rejection of certain lots of stock bought for the congressional distribution. In recent years there always has been more or less seed turned down because of one cause or another—sometimes low vitality, sometimes because of the admixture of other seeds.

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, Seedsman, 324 W. 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

The number of rejections this year has not been greater than in former years. One important lot of beet seed fell below the standard of germination this year. It was a matter of great regret to the officers in charge, because they really needed the seed, but the samples submitted were not up to the standard of germination and the stock therefore could not be accepted.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending December 19 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Anise	79	$ 777	Grass	760	$4,255
Caraway	14	129	Millet	2,042	6,167
Cardamom	8	279	Poppy	2	12
Celery	38	333	Rape	9	20
Coriander	60	327	Other		7,856
Cummin	151	3,016

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $4,365.

SEED BUILDING WEAKENS.

Sinking of the foundation of one of the posts that support the building at Fifth street and Eggleston avenue, Cincinnati, formerly occupied by the U. S. Playing Card Co., now used as a seed warehouse by J. Charles McCullough, caused the beams supporting the floors of the structure to sink on the morning of December 21. Great excitement ensued in the neighborhood, and the street cars were run over a different route until four o'clock in the afternoon, when it was deemed safe to again send the cars up the Mt. Adams inclined plane.

"It is one of those unexplainable, every-day accidents that has merely delayed us for a day," Mr. McCullough told the reporters, "but has not destroyed a cent's worth of seed. The building is just as solid as it ever was, and I do not anticipate any further trouble with it. The seat of trouble is at the foundation of the one post that sank, and experts say that rats gnawing at the foundation weakened the support of the post. The seed we have in the building does not weigh one-fourth of the amount of cardboard that was stored previously in the building."

"There is nothing seriously the matter with the building," said Building Inspector Kuhlman. "The walls are sound and will not be condemned. In the basement are piers that go down into the ground. The one north of the canal runway has sunk about five inches, indicating that something has given way under it. The floor has been shored up and the seeds are being taken out."

The building, which is a six-story brick structure, was erected about twenty-five years ago. The damage to the building will not be over $1,000. The McCullough concern is just moving into the building from the warehouse at Second and Walnut, the firm last spring deciding to get out of the high-water district.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

There appears to be some improvement in the seed trade in England and the wholesaler is reporting an all-round increase of business. Last season was a good one for the retailer for the sale of all classes of seeds, and most retailers had an increase of business to report. To this no doubt is due, to some extent, the increased orders given to the wholesale man. Many stocks were quite cleared last season, much cleaner than the average year. There is usually more or less of all sorts of seeds left after the season's sales to carry forward to the next year, and this surplus to a great extent determines the size of the order to be placed with the wholesaler. This fact, combined with a general average of lighter crops all around and improving conditions of the trade of the country generally, argues well for a good clearance for the English wholesalers this season.

French beans appear to have turned out a good crop all through the seed growing districts and prices are likely to suffer a sharp fall as the season advances. French beans have been grown for seed in much larger quantities the last few years, and the supply is often above the demand. At the price they are now being grown at there is little profit to be had, and some contracts have certainly lost money, with still lower contract prices in prospect for next crop.

Cabbage seed of all kinds appears plentiful, although reports of light crops from one or two growing districts are to hand. This article is grown practically wherever seeds of any sort are grown and has been overdone of late. There are heavy stocks of all leading kinds on hand and there is a likelihood of prices coming down somewhat. Denmark is a large supplier of this article and holds big stocks, and prices appear already sufficiently low from a grower's point of view. Contracts for future crops will probably be at a lower figure than the average.

During the course of my travels in the British Isles I find the small seedsman, who relies almost entirely upon a local trade transacted over the counter, is sadly feeling the effects of the huge mail order business being done all over the kingdom by the large mail order advertising houses and the wholesale firms who do an agent's business by the "sale or return" system. Firms like the "One and All Seed Co.," Long Acre, London, do an almost incredible amount of business, using as much as a hundredweight and a half of one variety of aster seed alone, and corresponding quantities of other lines. This firm has agents in almost every town and village in the kingdom. It supplies seeds in first-class strains, put up for sale, packeted, priced, and named, with cultural directions, allows the agent twenty to twenty-five per cent commission, and all not sold at the end of the season are taken back and allowed for in full. Some other firms are now also working on these lines and there is no doubt it is a hard hit at the local seed shop.

Another hard hit at the local seed shop is the autumn auction sales of Dutch bulbs. These are becoming more and more prevalent every year and are now held weekly in the autumn in almost every town in the kingdom. The bulbs are generally supposed to be leftovers which would not otherwise be disposed of, from the Dutch bulb farms. This may be true to some extent, but there is sometimes some high grade stuff sold at these auctions and at low figures. Certainly, considering the great quantities of bulbs disposed of in this way, there cannot be nearly so many sold by the local seedsmen as there would be if these auctions were not in force. J. B.

ARGUE FOR SPECIFIC DUTIES.

Otto Kirchner, of Detroit, recently appeared before the Ways and Means Committee at Washington on behalf of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, to argue for the change from ad valorem to specific duties on seeds and bulbs, as advocated by the trade organizations.

The firm of A. C. Kendel, Cleveland, addressed the following letter to the chairman of the committee:

Permit us to ask that the advisability of changing the duty on seeds and bulbs from ad valorem to specific duty be considered.

At present the duty is based on market value, and as this is changing frequently it remains for some one to say what that value is, and if the prices entered do not agree with the prices decided upon by the appraisers, a penalty attaches.

Penalties imply attempted evasions, if nothing worse, and place honest men in an odious and unenviable position.

There is nothing in the list that can not be satisfactorily changed without loss of revenue to the Government. It may take a little time, but we sincerely hope that you will favorably consider the above suggestions.

A NEW NARCISSUS.

A new polyanthus narcissus has been put on the market by M. Herb, of Naples, and is likely to be a valuable acquisition to this class of bulbs, being a great improvement on the old variety. The old grandiflora variety, when grown and ripened in Italy, always bloomed some ten days earlier than French grown stock under precisely the same treat-

Seeds of Choice Herbaceous and Alpine Plants

We desire to extend our already large business with our Colonies and the United States, America, in the above class of seeds, our great specialty. We know that our seeds have been the means of enabling many lovers of old-fashioned hardy perennials and Alpine plants to obtain a good collection at a very small cost, whereas the expense of getting plants from England is prohibitory in most cases. Catalog, which contains descriptions of nearly 3000 kinds of flower seeds of all classes, including latest novelties, and also much educational matter, will be sent free on application. ment when forced, but this new introduction, which is named Aurora, is said to be still many days earlier and will easily be had in bloom in November. The blooms are much larger than grandiflora and the growth stronger and taller. Its only drawback is its color, which is golden, and cup orange. Had it been pure white it would perhaps have been a dangerous competitor to the old type.

ENGLISH SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

The report of the National Sweet Pea Society for 1908 was presented by the secretary at the annual meeting in London, December 11. One or two points are probably of trans-Atlantic interest.

The work of the floral committee and the trials at Reading continue to provide the most important part of the society's proceedings. From all parts of the world sweet pea lovers are now looking to us to solve questions of nomenclature and priority, the bracketing of too much alike varieties, the deletion of old and useless sweet peas and the careful distribution of awards to the finest varieties.

The following are the total awards to new varieties for 1909: First-class certificate and silver medal to George Stark, from G. Stark & Son, Great Ryburgh; first-class certificate to Mrs. Andrew Ireland, from Dobbie & Co., Rothesay and Marks Tey; first-class certificate to Mrs. Henry Bell, from Robert Bolton, Carnforth; award of merit to Constance Oliver, from W. Lumley, Havant, and award of merit to Paradise Ivory, from Miss Hemus, Upton-on-Severn.

The society has now about 800 members and fifty-one different affiliated societies. The London exhibition of 1909 has been fixed for July 23, and the provincial show at Saltaire, Yorkshire, for July 13. W. Atlee Burpee & Co. and C. C. Morse & Co. are again offering valuable prizes for competition.

The sweet pea annual is in course of preparation, and among numerous contributions may be noted "Applied Mendelism," by W. Cuthbertson; "American Notes," by S. B. Dicks; "Sweet Peas in Essex," by E. W. King, and "A New Color Classification," by G. W. Leak.

Horace J. Wright was elected chairman of the committee at the annual meeting, and the enthusiasm he has manifested in the society since its inception will have still greater scope in 1909.

HOLLAND BULBS.

In spite of the numerous reports of Lilium lancifolium album being short in Holland, judging by the offers of bulbs received in England, there does not appear to be much shortage, or else there is less demand now for this article. I never remember to have seen so many offers of this article at this time of the year from Holland, and at such a low price, but doubtless the whole stock for disposal will be eagerly snapped up by market growers. It is now pretty generally thought that best grade Dutch growh are superior to any imported from Japan.

Generally speaking, such articles as forcing tulips and narcissi have cleared up well in Holland and the growers have little to complain of in the disposal of their stocks of these. Hyacinths, as usual these last few years, have considerably hung back again this season and a surplus is left on hand. It is probable the prices of these will again have to be reduced next season, to use up the accumulating stocks. Gladiolus in all early flowering sections appears overplentiful, especially The Bride. These have not sold well and as large stocks were available at the commencement of the season, it almost looks as though the ruinous prices of a few years back are drawing near.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs, 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

IMPROVEMENT IN SEEDS.

[A synopsis of a paper by G. D. Black, of Independence, Ia., read before the Minnesota State Horticultural Society.]

The desire for cheapness is the greatest hindrance to improvement in garden seeds. Our best radish, lettuce, spinach, etc., are those which remain good longest and produce only a small quantity of seeds. It costs more to produce a pound of this seed and it is worth more to the planter than many pounds of ordinary seed. The same rule will apply to the tomato, cucumber, and in fact nearly all vegetables except those of which the seeds are the edible part.

Judicious selection, thorough cultivation and favorable location all have a tendency toward improvement and are the most potent agencies we can employ for this purpose.

First Lessons in Selection.

I learned my first lesson in seed growing nearly fifty years ago as I toddled through the garden after my mother while she placed stakes beside the best radishes, lettuce plants, etc., and cautioned me not to disturb them. She explained as best she could to my young mind that our hopes for fine vegetables in the future depended upon the seeds which these best specimens would produce. That garden had been planted with seeds brought from Ohio to the wild west, as Iowa was known at that time. Store seeds could not be obtained.

It requires much experience and good judgment in making selections, as we have such a wide range of variations to select from. We can safely assert that no two plants are exactly alike in all their parts. The seeds of commerce are not produced in this way, because they would be too expensive. They are mostly grown from what is known as stock seed. During a number of years we grew several acres of tomatoes to produce seeds for other firms. Our first crop was planted from stock seed bought at a high price from Livingston, the tomato specialist. We saved seeds from a few plants which were most productive, and produced tomatoes which came nearest to our ideal of perfection in tomatoes, but always keeping in mind trueness to type of that particular variety. This is what we call stock seed and use for the production of future crops of seeds, which will be an improvement if sufficient judgment and care have been exercised in selection. The main crop, after carefully removing all rogues or plants which show a radical departure from the variety, is harvested and the quality of this seed depends upon the thoroughness of this roguing.

I believe that more improvement can be made by careful selection than by hand pollination for the production of new varieties. After the cross is made it requires several generations to establish the type. Most of the novelties that are introduced each season with much praise and price are soon dropped, while some of the old standard varieties, which by slow progression have attained their excellence by selection through many generations, are still with us.

Cause of Deterioration.

Great quantities of tomato seed are saved at catsup and canning factories. Many large melon growers save the seeds from their culls and small melons. Much cabbage, turnip, beet, carrot and other seeds are produced in mild climates, where it is not necessary to remove the roots from the ground for winter protection, and consequently they cannot be carefully selected. Even large crops of radish seeds are grown without transplanting.

These seeds are furnished to dealers very cheaply, and certainly show no improvement. In the breeding and improvement of plants we must work along the same lines as practiced by our breeders of thoroughbred animals. They do not stop after selecting and breeding, but continue with careful attention and good feeding, knowing that without these essentials but little progress can be made.

It is not necessary to produce argument that varieties are improved by cultivation, because it is a well-known fact that our vegetables were in their original wild state almost worthless weeds. Most of us have noticed how soon they will degenerate and revert if permitted to be self-sown and to grow without cultivation for a few years. The radish will become somewhat like the charlock, or wild mustard, which is its near relative. It is a common belief that the parsnip will become poisonous, although this idea is contradicted by some eminent physicians.

Sources of Best Seeds.

Some years ago we firmly believed that seeds grown in any certain locality were best adapted to that place, or, in other words, we believed in home-grown seeds. We had printed in large type on the labels of the cases of seeds that we placed in the stores to be sold on commission these words, "Black's garden seeds are nearly all grown in Buchanan county, Iowa." We succeeded in growing nearly all kinds, but many of them without profit.

After some years of experience, we have modified our belief to some extent and now think that seeds grown where the vegetable will reach its highest state of perfection are best, with few exceptions. Our best cauliflower seed is grown near Puget Sound, Wash.; early cabbage seed on Long Island, New York; late cabbage seed in Holland, and radish in France. We believe that tomato, cucumber, squash and most vine seeds that are grown in Iowa are as good as the best.

extra early vegetables should be grown as far north as they will properly ripen. Early sweet corn grown in Kansas for a few seasons will not be as early as that grown in Minnesota. Sugar beet seed should be grown in localities which produce beets containing the greatest per cent of sugar. Growers on Muscatine Island produce melons from water-washed sand and rank fertilizers. These melons lack quality, because the soil does not contain the elements necessary to produce sweetness and good flavor. These conditions are not favorable for the improvement of melon seeds.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade this year was the best ever in Lexington.

There was an excellent line of plants and cut flowers in all downtown stores. Azaleas, poinsettias, primulas, cyclamens, hyacinths, narcissi, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and lily of the valley in pans sold well. Araucarias, palms, ferns, dracænas and other foliage plants also sold well. Some of the florists had a good run on holly and other green goods.

latter were for use in churches and other large decorations. Holly sold at 5 cents to 25 cents per bunch; holly wreaths at 10 cents up to $1 each, depending upon the size. Kisses came high, mistletoe selling at 30 cents a pound. Evergreen trimming, according to quality, was 15 cents to $1.25 for twenty yards.

Roses, carnations, violets, poinsettias and narcissi were the leaders in cut flowers and sold for all prices, according to quality.

The weather was very favorable for the delivery boys. Outside the thermometer stood at about 40 degrees December 24 and 25, and plants required but little wrapping.

Various Notes.

James P. Keller says sales were twenty-five per cent better than last year, in both cut flowers and plants. He also reports having had a good run on holly and other green goods for decorating and cemetery use.

Honaker and the Michler Bros. Co. had good poinsettias in pots and pans.

Anderson & White did a good business in plants. They were also busy with church and house decorations.

J. Ferdinand Keller, manager of the J. A. Keller greenhouses, on East Sixth street, had a good cut of roses and carnations for the holidays. Mr. Keller says he is cutting several thousands every week at present.

Frank McMullen's stock is looking fine at present. He has 5,000 or 6,000 geraniums coming along nicely.

Lucien Leclere says Christmas sales were better with him than he expected at the greenhouses. He says he will now get busy for Easter.

There was a faker on Main street selling holly wreaths at 5 cents and 10 cents each, but he didn't cut any ice with the florists.

August Leclere had some decorating at the asylum on Fourth street that was very pretty. BLUE GRASS.

SYRACUSE.

Mrs. L. E. Marquisee has disposed of the stock and greenhouses of her husband, the late L. E. Marquisee, Harry and James Bellamy being the purchasers. They were both employees for many years, the former having charge of the carnations and hybridizing, and the latter acting as propagator and chrysanthemum grower. They are thoroughly up-to-date florists and have won the confidence and respect of all in the trade and outside with whom they have come in contact. They will continue the business at the present place till July 1, and will soon decide upon a permanent location, so they can start building at an early date.

Orders for the new white carnation, Marchioness, are coming in satisfactorily. H. Y.

LILIUM PHILIPPINENSE

We have a splendid home-grown stock of this great Lily, the flowers of which are equal, if not superior to Harrisii or Longiflorum. Will force in 90 days. For summer bloom is unexcelled. Will bloom year after year. Large, sound Bulbs, $1.25 per dozen, postpaid; $8.00 per 100.

Christmas Trade.

Christmastide reached Minneapolis in the midst of sunny weather, and a profusion of cut flowers of every variety thronged the market. Roses and carnations came freely to the demand, and poinsettias, chrysanthemums, violets, lilies, etc., helped to make the variety of cut flowers greater. Every house sold out its supply, and pronounced this the best Christmas business they ever had. Of course, red roses and carnations were at a premium, but many fancy baskets of the other flowers were substituted when these could not be secured. Away into the wee sma' hours the retailers' staffs worked, and still there was a lot of work left over for Christmas morning. The wholesalers caught it on the first three days of the week, with some hurry-up orders, of course, at the last minute.

Various Notes.

James Souden & Co. did an immense business the two days before Christmas, and Mr. Souden pronounced himself well satisfied with the outcome.

Miss Whitted sold a number of pretty baskets of flowers and plants, and found herself sold out early Christmas eve.

O. C. Swanson was busy early and late, and the store was thronged with customers all the week before the day itself. He sold out all his plants and cut flowers.

R. A. Latham did a good business in greens, plants and cut flowers.

Will Bros. put some fine violets on the market, and some particularly fine Richmonds.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. did a good business in roses and carnations, and especially in poinsettias and chrysanthemums. The number of plants shipped out of town and delivered to the city exceeded that of any previous year, and the Christmas trade was very satisfactory all around. M. E. M.

Springfield, Ill.—R. T. Donnell has improved the water supply at his greenhouses by erecting a windmill, to be used in case of emergency.

The Market.

Well, Christmas of 1908 is a thing of the past; all that remains is the telling of it, and there really is something to tell, when one considers that trade has been off for over a year.

Every shop was filled with the choicest in blooming plants, arranged in the most fascinating pots, pans and baskets; in fact, the retailers did as they promised, made plants the feature for Christmas, and the result was that more were sold than the wisest of them hoped for; nearly everyone was cleaned out. This of course had its effect on the cut flower trade, but there were those, as usual, who wanted cut flowers and bought them. While reports from the retailers were to the effect that flower sales were slower than usual, it is likely that they will compare favorably with other years.

The weather December 24 was warm and pleasant, which made delivery of plants easy, but toward evening rain set in, which cut out much of the evening shopping.

Greens did well in spots. There was more holly the last two days than the market would stand, and prices fell as low as 50 cents to $1 per case for good, well-berried holly. There was a shortage of trees, and prices were doubled every hour toward the last, until they got to breaking off the branches and selling them at 25 cents each.

Among the wholesale houses there seemed to be the happiest kind of conditions; lots of business and plenty of stock to take care of it. One could get anything asked for in any quantity desired. Beauties, violets, valley, roses of all kinds, even Richmonds (cut pretty tight) and carnations to no end—no one was refused anything, yet all report being cleaned up fairly well by Christmas morning.

The Rhinebeck violets which were due Christmas morning caused some disappointment and loss by missing connections and not getting in until Christmas trade was entirely over, and so were no doubt a total loss to the shippers.

One thing which seemed queer was to see a local carnation grower floating around among the commission men trying to get some one to take his stock, but all seemed to have as much as they could dispose of, and could offer no encouragement to the grower. Did this ever occur before two days before Christmas?

Carnations seem to have received a black eye, for inquiry among the retailers brings reports that they are unable to keep carnations more than a day, and some varieties not that long, and for that reason the public is buying other flowers. It should be of interest to the growers to take this matter under consideration at once and find out the trouble, whether it is the varieties, the method of growing, or just simply because they have been made so common on the street stands that good buyers prefer something else and simply invent a reason for condemning the once popular carnation.

The prices of flowers were about the same; in fact, a reprint of the Christmas price list for any of the last five years would answer. It looks as if there was a limit to what can be charged, and Christmas prices are put there each year. In view of the fact that the plant game is being worked so hard, will not the wholesale men soon have to figure on staying nearer the normal price in order to get the retailers to push the cut flower end of it more?

Each year we hear before the holidays that there will be a short cut, but by the time the day is over one concludes there was a long cut from some place. Why do not growers give their commission men a more definite idea of what they expect to cut, and let them arrange their prices accordingly, remembering that there are more than 300 other days in a year to sell flowers, and that many who are stung on a holiday are bluffed off for six months before they get the nerve to go back and find out that the Christmas price is not the regular price.

There seemed to be little pickled stock on the market, one evidence our growers are profiting by experience, but there were some belated chrysanthemums which had some hard things said about them and were still for sale the last I knew.

Samuel McClements has the sympathy of his host of friends in the loss of his sister, Miss Margaret, who died Christmas eve, at the family home, after a long illness. Hoo-Hoo.

The Market.

We are in the midst of another Christmas, and although it is rather too soon to give a complete summary of the business done in the stores, observations made during the last two days and the latest accounts at hand show that we quite equaled the volume of one year ago. It must be borne in mind, however, that last year was not as prosperous as the year previous. The weather has been unusually good for buyers. We have had no rain for several weeks and everything favored the crowds who thronged the shops and streets. The nights are cold and frosty, but the days are bright and warm. Everyone appears to have the idea, also, that next year will be a banner one.

Again, reports from the interior towns show that conditions in the farming and fruit growing localities are prosperous, and this has induced out-of-town dealers to order heavily from the local wholesalers. All things taken into consideration, I think it is safe to say that the volume of business was fully up to that of last year.

The general effect of the few weeks of frost on the growing stock has been to shorten greatly outside flowers, but the continued sunshine has also had the effect of making inside stock plentiful enough to go around. The greatest difficulty found by the retailers has been to get enough roses to satisfy demands. American Beauties were so scarce that many of the retailers refused to accept orders for them. Brides and Maids were in fair supply, with a shortage of extra long stemmed stock. In carnations the supply was about equal to the demand. The prices charged to the retailers ranged from $4 to $6 per hundred. The latter price is an advance of fifty per cent over that of last week, but the demand was good for everything.

Poinsettias from the southern California growers were disappointing to the trade here. They were almost a failure in the open in the neighborhood of Los Angeles, although a few thousand good flowers were received from the neighborhood of San Diego. Poinsettias in pots and pans sold well. One firm in Alameda county sent over 2,000 in 6-inch pots. These cost the stores from $6 to $9 per dozen. Smaller plants were massed in pans, from half a dozen to one dozen being planted in each. There was but a scant showing of other kinds of flowering plants. None of the growers had any azaleas to offer. Some well grown cyclamens in pots and Chinese primulas in pots and pans, together with Roman hyacinths in various shapes, helped to fill the windows.

Palms did not sell as well as usual this season, apparently. Kentias moved very slowly, especially the larger sizes. Nephrolepis Whitmani was by far the best selling pot plant in San Francisco. Planted in pots, pans and baskets in various sizes, this fern made a very acceptable present in place of some expensive article of jewelry which would probably have been sent had times in general been better.

Large hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri were in great favor with the buying public, the people having an idea that this is one of the hardiest of basket plants.

Lorraine begonias moved well, and were it not for the fact that we are in the midst of such a cold snap, they would be easier for the retailers to handle. They were entirely sold out, however.

Imported English holly was scarce again, as usual. Apparently the collectors in British Columbia and Washington have been cutting it too closely in the past, and on this account quite a bit of poor holly was shown. Some of it showed the results of being cut too long, and the leaves dropped as soon as it was taken from the barrels.

California red berries, owing to the heavy frosts in the mountains, were somewhat scarcer than usual, and the price rose from $50 per ton a week before Christmas to $75 and $80 per ton a few days later. These were sold in almost incredible quantities by the street hucksters and in the smaller stores.

Huckleberry and various kinds of wild ferns have been used lavishly in the stores around town in a decorative way, and these proved to be the best money-makers for the green goods men. Smilax seems to be scarce, for some reason or other, and but little effort was made to push it forward.

Violets, owing to the fact that there are at present no combinations between the growers, were kept at a reasonable price and all the retailers were able to get as much stock as they desired. Twenty-five cents per bunch was the price asked the public in the stores for small bunches, and they sold rapidly.

There was quite a scarcity of maidenhair fern and asparagus, which was very noticeable in the stores the day before Christmas, and many dealers had to use cheaper kinds of fern in decorative work.

Outside of the Christmas business, there was a heavy funeral trade for the entire week. This used up all the available white stock and the florists who had to contend with this in addition to the season's holiday trade had their hands more than full. G.

UNSLAKED LIME ON ROSE BEDS.

Can you tell me if it is right to put unslaked lime on rose beds? I am located in California and my soil seems to be somewhat soggy, with lots of worms in it. My beds are 12x70. Some of them have roses in them and some are empty. The empty ones have been lying in that condition for about six months. Now, I would like to know how much lime I should put on a bed and whether I can put it on beds with roses planted in them. I used to grow rose plants eighteen to twenty-four inches in a season, but now they do not seem to move along. I do not grow them for cut flowers, but grow them in the field to make heavy stock for retail trade.

R. G. T.

We presume R. G. T. refers in his query entirely to roses grown outside, for retailing as pot plants or naked roots in the winter.

To successfully grow such a heavy feeding article as the rose is, the ground should be changed every two years at least, if it is confined in a bed. If in the open, the drainage should be the first item attended to, in which event it cannot easily become sour or soggy.

If the drainage is sufficient, the character of the soil should next be inquired into. Roses delight in thick, heavy ground, well enriched. We have plenty of this in most places in California, and ordinary barnyard manure, or even sand, is all that is necessary to keep it from packing so hard that the tiny roots of the roses cannot penetrate it. But if it is not changed every two or three years, the problem of successful growing by artificial enrichments then becomes important. First of all, I again call attention to the drainage. If this is attended to, so that the surplus water does not settle around the roots, then look at the soil itself. Anything except heavy, black virgin soil will have to be fertilized if the grower would have a healthy plant for his trouble.

The use of unslaked lime has long been advocated for just such conditions, especially where there is an excess of moisture. The lime should be fresh and should be used at the rate of a bushel to about 200 square feet. Do not allow it to lie on the surface any longer than necessary, as it quickly absorbs carbonic acid gas from the air and its virtue is then lost. It is a good plan to mix it with manure before spading it into the ground, as each seems to augment the qualities of the other.

It is a good idea to allow rose beds to rest a while; that is, to spade them up and allow the ground to stand a few months before it is replanted. Then, with a second spading and a good dosing of fresh lime and manure, if the other conditions are right, R. G. T. should have no difficulty in producing plenty of strong, heavy roses, which will succeed well under any ordinary conditions after they leave his establishment. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Officers for 1908-9: Pres., Charles J. Brown, Rochester, N. Y.; Vice-Pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. The 34th annual convention will be held at Rochester, June, 1909.

WHERE a great deal of pruning is to be done, the work should be hastened from now on to a finish, rather than delay and run the risk of not being able to do it all, or at best having to do part of it when it will be harmful.

ILLINOIS HORTICULTURISTS.

The success of the fifty-third annual convention of the Illinois State Horticultural Society, held in Champaign, Ill., December 8 to 18, exceeded the expectations of those who prepared the program for it. It is estimated that more than 250 people attended the convention, and the average attendance at each of the thirty sessions was forty. The show of fruit was good, considering the general crop failure throughout Illinois this year.

The aim of the executive board in getting up the program was to make the convention a school of practical horticulture, as well as a place for the presentation of lectures and papers, followed by discussions. The plan was, largely, to follow a lecture, paper or address by a practical demonstration along the same line. This plan was successfully carried out and the interest shown by those in the classes proved its wisdom.

As an example of this mode of procedure: The paper by Prof. C. S. Crandall, on "Grafting: Methods and Physiology," was illustrated by means of a tree in which the scions were placed according to the different methods of grafting. After listening to this paper the audience adjourned to the Horticultural building, where for two hours W. S. Perrine, of Centralia, Ill., and R. A. Simpson, of Vincennes, Ind., instructed them in the practical work of grafting. Mr. Perrine makes a specialty of apple orcharding, and Mr. Simpson is a nurseryman who propagates cherry trees by the million.

An exercise which was of special interest to the ladies who have house plants was the forenoon given up to the "Window Garden," and practice in the potting and care of house plants, by H. B. Dorner.

CHRISTMAS TREES NOT WASTE.

The country's forests again have been called upon to supply about 4,000,000 Christmas trees, and again many persons have asked themselves and have queried the United States Forest Service, "Is the custom a menace to the movement for forest preservation?"

"Yes, it is consistent and proper that the custom should be maintained," has been the answer of United States Forester Gifford Pinchot in every case. "Trees are for use, and there is no other use to which they could be put which would contribute so much to the joy of man as their use by the children on this one great holiday of the year.

"The number of trees cut for this use every year is utterly insignificant when compared to the consumption for other purposes for which timber is demanded. Not more than 4,000,000 Christmas trees are used each year, one in every fourth family. If planted four feet apart, they could be grown on less than 1,500 acres. This clearing of an area equal to a good-sized farm each Christmas should not be a subject of much worry, when it is remembered that for lumber alone it is necessary to take timber from an area of more than 100,000 acres every day of the year."

Germany is conceded to have the highest developed system of forest man-

Hardy Roses and Ramblers
FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

Price, 75c for 5 (of one variety); $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. (Immediate delivery).

(Mme. Norbert Levavasseur)

Strong field-grown plants, $1.50 for 10, $12.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grown as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free-blooming qualities, etc. 35c each, $3.50 per doz., $25.00 per 100.

A New Baby Rambler Rose

CATHERINE SEIMETH. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. $2.25 for 10, $20.00 per 100.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 agement of any country, yet its per capita use of Christmas trees is greatest. The cutting of small trees for Christmas is not there considered in the least as a menace to the forest, but, on the contrary, as a means of improving the forest by thinning and as a source of revenue. It is therefore constantly encouraged.

There is little doubt but that the time will come when the Christmas tree business will become a recognized industry in this country, and that as much attention will be given to it as will be given to the growing of crops of timber for other uses. This time may not be far off, for quite a number of nurseries now engage in the business of supplying the demand for Christmas trees of the better class, and it is already understood that only through the practice of forestry, which means both the conservation of the timber which remains and carefully planned systems of reforestation, will it be possible to supply the country with its 40,000,000,000 feet of lumber needed each year, as well as the few million little trees used at Christmas time.

BOSTON, Dec. 28.—Trade in vegetables for Christmas was good and prices averaged a little better than a year ago. Tomatoes are the only crop which keeps low in price. Tomatoes, 15c to 20c lb.; cucumbers, $2.50 to $12.50 box; dandelions, $1.50 to $1.75 box; beet greens, 75c to $1 box; chicory, 50c to 75c doz.; escarolle, 50c to 75c doz.; romaine, 75c to $1 doz.; parsley, $1.25 to $1.50 box; lettuce, $1 to $1.25 box; mint, 50c to 75c doz.; asparagus, $4 to $5 doz.; mushrooms, $2 to $2.50 4-lb. box; radishes, $1.75 to $2 box.

COMMERCIAL FERTILIZERS.

Their Value to Vegetable Forcers.

Plant food is a subject upon which we can all learn something, no matter how much experience with fertilizers one may have had. It is surprising how few greenhouse men are posted on the use of fertilizers. They pretend to know, but in reality their understanding is confused.

Only a few days ago I asked an old gardener if he ever used any potash—muriate or sulphate—in his greenhouses. He said no, that he generally used bone meal for a feeding when the crops were pretty well along, and liked it better than potash. This seems amusing to one who has any idea of the ingredients of fertilizers and the way they act on vegetation, but we cannot blame the growers altogether. So much has been written on the subject that nearly every paper you pick up has some item about plant food, and all are like chapters of a continued story, so that if you did not happen to read them all from the start they are of no interest and little can be learned from them by the average, inexperienced man, who must start in with A, B, C before he can jump headlong into the class farther advanced.

The Three Essentials.

There is one thing that all must thoroughly understand to start with, and that is, that plants draw from the soil three ingredients, namely, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. All three are necessary to plant growth, and in different proportions for different kinds of plants. Nitrogen makes foliage; phosphoric acid makes blooms and hastens maturity, and potash makes fruit and stalks. All three assist somewhat in helping the growth along in other ways than the chief ones here designated. When the gardener thoroughly understands these facts, then he is ready for more information, but these facts must be the first chapter to memorize and no amount of reading will benefit him until he comprehends these rudiments of fertilization. Plants use other things from the soil, but all others used seem to exist in all soils in inexhaustible quantities. The three mentioned are the ones which we must supply to the plants or crops.

The Proper Proportions.

Recent experiments have proven that hothouse vegetables do best with a fertilizer containing the following proportions: Radishes, three per cent nitrogen, six per cent phosphoric acid and eight per cent potash; lettuce, six per cent nitrogen, five per cent phosphoric acid and eight per cent potash; cucumbers, five per cent nitrogen, six per cent phosphoric acid and seven per cent potash.

Most animal manures are deficient in phosphoric acid and potash for nearly all crops, and if both are added to the compost heap when mixing, the strength of the food in the soil will be doubled and the proportions will be nearer what the plants require. If the soil is not very rich to start with, it has little food in it when the crop is half matured and must have more food. In case commercial fertilizers are used, stop and consider what your crop needs and seek a mixture properly balanced for that crop.

The fertilizer question is a most important one and cannot be thoroughly covered in this one article, but to the beginner this may give an insight into the subject that will enable him to understand more that he may read on the subject. H. G.

BEST TOMATOES FOR FORCING.

I should like to know which are the best tomatoes for greenhouse culture. Where can I get the seed? R. M.

There are several good varieties of tomatoes suitable for forcing. The Comet is considered the leading all-round variety by a majority of growers. It is not so early as some other varieties, nor as large as others, but it is a well shaped, medium sized, very prolific variety, and does not seem to take the diseases as quickly as some others.

We give below a list of the forcing varieties and a description of each:

Stirling Castle, early, very small, others better.

Sunrise, earliest, smallest, but most prolific.

Winter Beauty, early, fair sized, very good.

Holmes' Supreme, also early, fair sized, very good.

Comet, somewhat later, smooth, medium size, rather dwarf and stocky in growth, solid fruit, good keeper and shipper, requires about three or four inches more space than most varieties, very prolific.

Frogmore Selected, slightly larger than Comet, fruit rather peach shaped; a trifle later than Comet and will not yield as many pounds per plant, but is generally a favorite wherever grown, on account of its rather peculiar shape and good size.

Lorillard Forcing, good size, good shape; not among the earliest, but a good cropper.

Sutton's Best of All, very fine, large fruit; not so early or prolific as Comet, but is grown with good success by some growers.

There are other varieties, but these are the foremost. The common outdoor varieties are not suitable for forcing. They are larger fruited, but do not yield enough per plant to pay as well. All forcing tomatoes are bright red. They take better than the pink or purple shades.

Any of the larger seed houses can furnish the seed. If they have not in stock what you want they should get it for their customers, but be sure you buy your seed of a reliable seed company. Look over the advertisements in the REVIEW before ordering. H. G.

Golden Glow

Will be the Money Maker in 1909.

From the Florists' REVIEW of August 20, 1908:

CHRYSANTHEMUM GOLDEN GLOW

It seems that each season chrysanthemums come in earlier and earlier, and it is only natural that the growers should strive to be early, because the early stock has brought excellent prices for several years.

This year the C. C. Pollworth Co., Milwaukee, has set the pace for early mums with Golden Glow, which was ready early in August. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of some blooms cut August 12. The picture gives a good idea of the character of the stock, which is reported to have sold excellently.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Christmas certainly was a hummer. There was plenty of all kinds of stock of really good quality, and reports have it that all orders up to the last were well taken care of. Business was fully as good as last year, with the exception that cut flowers did not soar quite so high in price, this being partially caused by the great quantities of pot plants, which found ready sale, more so than in previous years. The market for holly and other greens turned out better than was anticipated.

Various Notes.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. was right in with its crop of Beauties and found no trouble in disposing of them at satisfactory prices. Shipping trade with them was extra fine for the holidays.

The M. A. McKenney Co. reports a fine holiday trade, with special call for poinsettias.

Mrs. Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., at the Caswell block, says that up to a few days before Christmas trade was slow, but it all came in a rush and they found it a hard task to keep up, for they have a good deal of transient trade, which called mainly for Beauties and violets. They ran short on holly.

A short way up Grand avenue, Will Zimmerman, who has worked up a good trade since embarking in the retail business five years ago, had to increase his working crew threefold to keep up with the best business he ever had. There was a large demand for pot poinsettias. He commented on the fine quality of locally grown carnations, saying they never were better.

August Kellner, whose long suit is floral decorations, had to fill all orders on short notice, for they were not placed in as good season as is customary. He has several good sized decorations for New Year's, the main one being at the Deutscher Club.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. did not go amiss in growing large quantities of various pot plants, for they sold out clean by noon on Christmas day. Cut flower trade was also very satisfactory. They were compelled to work all through Wednesday and Thursday nights.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. moved all the pot plants grown at its greenhouses in good shape, and was well satisfied with the shipping trade in cut flowers.

James Chacona, who conducts flower stands at 87 Wisconsin street and the Plankinton hotel, says he prepared for a good Christmas trade, and as he advertised heavily in the daily papers, got all that was coming to him. He handles mainly roses, Beauties, violets and carnations. He was all sold out on the last named by 4 p. m. December 24 and could get no more till next day. He, too, relies largely upon transient trade. E. O.

New Carnation Edward

This new seedling Carnation is a wonder for producing flowers, full of business from start to finish, continuous throughout the season, cannot be beat for productiveness, easily grown and propagated. Description: Deep pink in color, very large and well built up in center, with good stem and calyx. Comes into bloom early and keeps at it with wonderful results. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Will be heard from with others in the future.

LONDON, ONT.

The florists of this section have every reason to thank the weather man for favorable weather this fall and winter. Never in the memory of the writer have we had such ideal weather for the holiday trade—just enough frost at night to keep the streets in good condition, with bright, mild days. This made shopping a pleasure, and to these conditions must be attributed in a measure the increased sales, for the streets were thronged from morning until late at night. There is no doubt but the attractive window display made by the stores induced many a purchase which, had the weather not been so favorable, would not have been made.

Although ample preparations were made for early customers, it was not until Wednesday and Thursday that the business was done.

Each year there is an increased demand for plants in preference to cut flowers. This year baskets and other plant arrangements, ranging in price from $2 to $5, were much in demand, while azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens and other flowering plants found a ready sale. The demand for palms and ferns was limited to a few good specimens.

In cut flowers the honors were about equally divided. Roses sold at from $2 to $5 per dozen, carnations at $1 to $3, violets $1.50 per bunch and valley 75 cents per dozen. There was little or no demand for bulb stock. The sales for the week show an increase of over twenty per cent. This we consider a good indication of the reaction of the times.

J. Gammage & Sons have during the last few months dismantled and moved to their new place the greater portion of the original plant, comprising 60,000 feet of glass. A new two-story service building, 50x68, and six houses, each 200 feet long, have been erected. Six plant houses, each 200 feet long, will be added as soon as the weather will permit.

WEBB CITY, MO.—Mr. and Mrs. Brenneman have returned from Arizona, where they had gone in the hope of benefiting Mr. Brenneman's health. The journey, however, seems to have been of little avail, as he is now reported to be in a critical condition.

Unquestionably the two finest roses, of recent introduction, offered to the trade today are

WHITE KILLARNEY AND MY MARYLAND

After careful investigation, having become satisfied that the Waban Strain of White Killarney is superior to anything now in the market, we have withdrawn our Sport and will not propagate it at all. WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Christmas week had ideal weather for some people, but our first real snow storm of the season, December 23, made delivery difficult. It was necessary to wrap blooming stock.

Cut stock was scarce, roses and carnations particularly so. Some of the stores turned down orders for roses Thursday. Carnation orders were taken conditionally. There were enough Beauties to go around.

Made-up plant baskets sold better than ever before, prices ranging from $5 to $50, the best sellers being at from $5 to $10. Decorated plants sold well.

So far as could be learned, business was from twenty-five to fifty per cent better than last year.

Various Notes.

Mayberry & Hoover had all they could do. Christmas afternoon found a big delivery waiting for the wagons to get back and load up. J. A. Phillips reports a fine business in both cut stock and plants. Vernon Ley, at the new store, had all he could do. W. W. Kimmell did a fine business at the store and with his trees.

George Shaffer says he never handled so much stock. Z. D. Blackistone had a big trade. Mache & Co. did fine.

J. H. Small & Sons worked right up to the handle all the way through. Gude Bros. Co. says the Christmas was the best ever. F. H. Kramer says he never worked so hard.

The green moss wreaths did not sell so well this year, the weather not permitting people to go to the cemetery. The market florists say sales were better than last year. Most of the stores had automobiles for delivery and found them a big help.

Never was there so much mistletoe dumped on the market.

Gude Bros. Co. had the Drape ball Christmas eve. This called for three wagon loads of holly and five barrels of mistletoe. On the same evening they had the Clover ball, where holly and mistletoe were used with poinsettias.

Word was received last week that J. J. Harty, who left here some weeks ago, is in England on his way to South Africa.

George Cooke had to take the time, December 25, to decorate the ball room at Rauscher's for a coming-out tea.

John Robinson says: "Hoot, mon! I could a done nae more." O. O.

New Carnations == 1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

The Market.

Christmas trade was far better than last year, with prices about the same. There was a good supply of roses, enough to go around. Carnations were rather scarce and brought good prices. The demand for Beauties was limited. Violets were in good demand and were all sold out early. Paper whites were plentiful and the demand for them was rather light; most of them were used in mixed boxes. There was a good supply of valley and lilies, with demand rather light. The sale for poinsettias, both cut and in pans, was heavy, and there were not enough to go around, even though there were a great many more grown than in previous years.

Cyclamens and Lorraine begonias sold well and there was a good supply of both on hand. Azaleas were at a premium. There was a nice lot in the market, but not nearly enough to fill all wants. Made-up baskets sold well and brought good prices. The demand for pot plants and baskets is on the increase from year to year.

There was a glut of holly and trees, as several cars came in late and were of no use. There was some good holly, but the bulk of it was far below par. There were enough holly and trees left to make a good, sharp sting for someone.

Various Notes.

Gus Ackerman reports a heavy trade on holly and wreaths, of which he makes a specialty.

E. Metzmaier had a fine crop of carnations, just right for Christmas, and said he cleaned out everything in the way of flowers.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. had a fine lot of azaleas, begonias, cyclamens and poinsettias, which found a ready sale.

The Munk Floral Co. reports a good Christmas trade. J. M.

BEAUMONT, TEX.—The present members of the Beaumont Floral Co., who purchased the business a year ago, have reason to be well satisfied with what has been accomplished since then. They have erected a mum house, 30x100, and a boiler room and potting shed. They have also built a 50-foot propagating house and have it well filled at the present time. They have cut about 3,000 mums from the new house. They are now cutting some fine Brides, Maids and Richmonds.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Current Comment.

At the last monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island the principal business was in connection with arrangements for the annual supper of the club, which will be held the third Monday evening in January, and for the carrying out of which a committee consisting of President Alex Macrae, Secretary William Chappell, James Hockey and William Appleton was appointed. On this occasion the recently elected officers will occupy their respective stations for the first time. After the transaction of business the club discussed the metallizing of roses, carnations and other flowers. It was the consensus of opinion that while as a fad these novelties might have a longer or shorter run and be ornamental in millinery, they would be of no practical benefit to the florists.

The Christmas trade was generally good. Potted plants were rather disappointing in the downtown stores, although among the houses away from the center of the city little trouble was found in disposing of good stock. The sale of greens of all kinds exceeded any previous year, box holding the lead.

Jonas Brook, of the Summit Greenhouses, Woonsocket, reports a big Christmas trade on potted plants, ferns and palms.

The T. F. Keller Floral Co. opened to a big business in its new store and reaped a harvest on the holiday trade.

J. Kopelman & Co. had one of the busiest places in town the two or three days preceding Christmas.

James A. Budlong 2d, of Cranston, has purchased a new thirty horse-power Oldsmobile runabout.

O'Connor has had all he could attend to with decorations for teas, receptions and other social functions. He has a number of large affairs during the next few weeks.

Many handsome floral designs were seen at the funeral of Councilman J. William Moore, to which nearly all of the downtown stores contributed.

Frank Schellinger, of J. F. Schellinger & Son, Riverside, is spending a few days in New York.

William Appleton had the decorations for two large weddings in the Elmwood district last week.

C. H. Hunt handled nearly a thousand small ferns, palms and rubbers for the Christmas trade, largely in the South Providence section.

John Macrae is bringing in some of the finest carnations of the season.

BUSINESS BRINGERS— REVIEW Classified Advs.

THE WHITE WATSONIA.

The white watsonia has not been taken up by florists as rapidly as its merits warrant. Here is a foreign dealer's opinion of the plant:

"Watsonia Ardernei alba is strongly recommended to practical, high-class florists for wreath and bouquet work; the choicest flower for best work; the purest white flower in cultivation; as easily grown as a gladiolus, lasts fresh for a long time after cutting. Bulbs potted can be had in flower for a long period; a perfect gem for florists, quite superseding the single white azalea for cut flower work; requires little attention and is easily flowered, yet commands the highest market prices, and the demand for cut spikes is always greater than the supply. Another important point is that the bulbs grow and increase well. The beautiful snow-white flower, purer than the purest, strongly appeals to large cut flower growers, and the American, Belgian, Dutch, south of France and Channel Island growers should give this valuable acquisition a liberal and careful trial. All our clients who bought a few bulbs to try last year have ordered a larger stock this season. All florists who cut for orders as required should undoubtedly have a supply." Dr. Van Fleet, who tests a great variety of plants at the farm of the Rural New-Yorker, says he can indorse all this.

Watsonias should generally be treated as greenhouse bulbs in the colder parts of this country, as they naturally start to grow in October, and can seldom be kept out of the soil over winter without loss of vitality. The corms are large, much resembling those of the gladiolus, and only need be potted in clean, loamy soil in autumn, placing two in a 6-inch, or three in a 7-inch pot. Free drainage is necessary, though watsonias require considerable moisture while in growth. An average temperature of 55 degrees suits them well, developing strong, healthy foliage and vigorous flower spikes. The latter generally appear in March, but may to some extent be advanced by a higher temperature. A good spike may have as many as fifty blooms, about half of which are borne on side spikes or branchlets, coming out after the main spike has nearly ceased. The flowers are two inches across, trumpet-shaped and gracefully formed. They are the purest white in color of any blooms we know. They keep well and are exceedingly valuable for florists' uses.

After blooming the plants should be grown on until May, when the balls may be turned out of the pots and plunged in soil outside to ripen. The corms increase by division, and may be forced for many successive years.

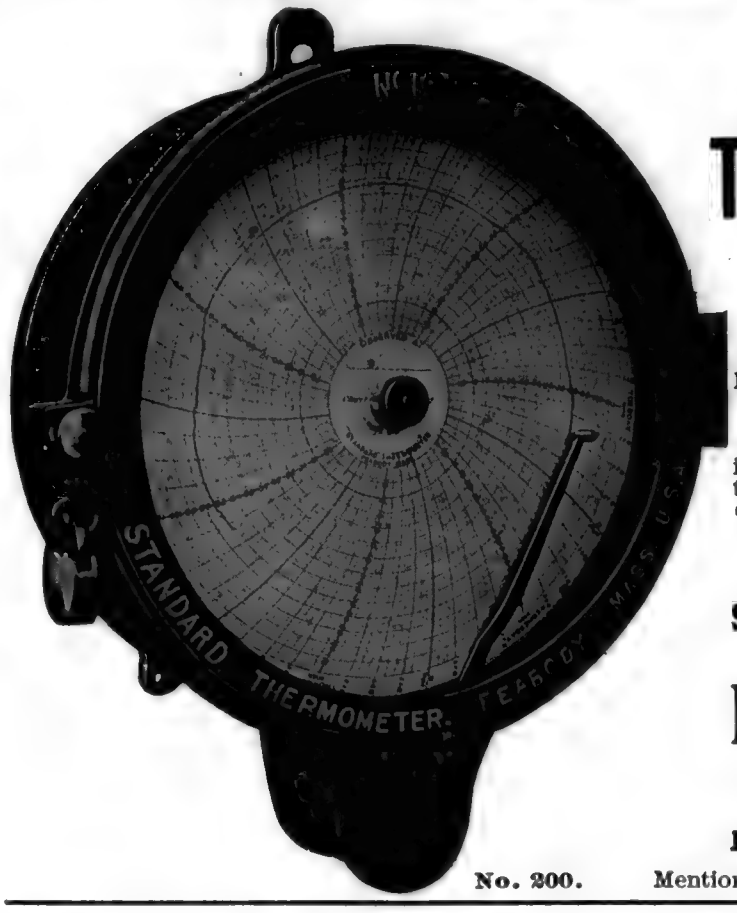
Greenhouse Heating.

PIPES LEAKING.

Can you tell us why our system of piping leaks? We have hot water and 4-inch boiler tubing for flow and return, with cast-iron fittings and calked joints calked with oakum and lead. After one season's firing they leaked badly at the joints, so we took them out and had them calked over again and they remained perfectly tight until after we began to fire heavily, and then, after the water would cool during the day, they would leak badly. But when the water is again warmed up to the night temperature they will stop until cooled off, when they leak as badly as ever. It must be in the expansion, some way, but we thought this method was used a great deal in greenhouse heating. Can you tell us where the trouble is? We have noticed your valuable advice to others. E. & B.



With thoroughly packed joints, such trouble as you have experienced should not occur. If this trouble persists, I would suggest packing the sleeve about one-third full of oakum and then packing the rest of the distance with a rust-joint paste, such as the following: Sal ammoniac, 2 oz.; iron filings, 8 lbs., and sufficient water to render it workable. Or, iron filings, 4 lbs.; pipe clay, 2 lbs.; powdered potsherds, 11 lbs., made into a paste by using strong brine. L. C. C.

YOKING BOILERS.

We have two sectional boilers of nine sections each, one of which is now running two ranges. The boilers are in same cellar, and No. 1, now in operation, has four flow pipes, two for each range, and two return pipes. No. 2, about six feet to one side of No. 1, has two flow and one return connection. Please state how the boilers should be connected so that both, or either of the ranges, can be run by either or both boilers.

S. B. S.

I hesitate to make any suggestions in this case, as no idea of the present piping is suggested. It may be a simple matter to throw all the flow pipes into one main riser, but if independent risers are carried from each boiler, opening to different houses or sections of the plant, a very different mode of procedure would be necessary. A common riser near the boilers is necessary in order to yoke the boilers together. If independent flows have been taken from each boiler opening, it will be necessary to use a double yoke to first unite the boilers and then supply each flow. The same idea will have to be followed with the returns. Gate valves will be required in both flows and returns in order to use the boilers alternately. L. C. C.

TRI-CITIES.

The Market.

Christmas trade in general in the Tri-Cities was very encouraging, indicating no serious hard times in this vicinity. The florists complain somewhat of the holly and green business, claiming that the street fakers, grocers and others, all handling the goods, made it hard to dispose of at good prices. Christmas trees sold at from 10 cents up and many had quite a few left over.

cleaned up what available flowers there were after the close-out of Christmas week.

Various Notes.

The wholesale establishment of L. Stapp, of Rock Island, was a busy place Thursday and on Christmas morning, getting out the many orders that had been received previously. The weather being good and other conditions also good, Mr. Stapp was well stocked in roses, carnations, hyacinths and azaleas, which were all disposed of. The demand was greater than the supply, the goods being mostly disposed of in the Tri-Cities.

Henry Gaethje, of Rock Island, reports a fine business, both in cut flowers and blooming plants, with prices good. Rumor also has it that he will again be made happy on New Year's eve, when Mr. and Mrs. Gaethje's only daughter, Anna, is to be married—the second wedding in the family within a year, Henry Gaethje, Jr., having been married during the summer.

William Knees, of Moline, says he had a fine Christmas business, disposing of everything he had at good prices. He had an especially fine lot of poinsettias, which sold like hot cakes.

Julius Staack & Sons, of Moline, report an exceptionally fine Christmas trade, especially in blooming plants, such as azaleas, begonias, poinsettias, etc.

The Bills Floral Co., of Davenport, reports having a better trade than last year, with prices equally good. The large force was kept busy for a week up to 12 and 1 o'clock, both at the store and greenhouses. The weather was fine for delivery, making the work easier and quicker.

J. T. Temple, of Davenport, says Christmas business was fine.

Henry Pauli, of Davenport, claims his business was double that of last year. He had a fine lot of azaleas, poinsettias, Easter lilies, etc., and sold them out. Cut flowers, also, sold well, with prices from 75 cents to $1.50 for carnations, and $1.50 to $2 for roses.

Ewoldt Bros., of Davenport, also report a most prosperous Christmas trade. They disposed of 2,000 white chrysanthemums, which heretofore have not been available at Christmas, besides the usual cut flowers and blooming plants. They also say that in about ten days they will have some more mums in bloom, not open as yet.

Forber & Bird, of Davenport, have no complaints to make of the Christmas business. They say everything sold at fairly good prices, and up to the standard in every sense, if not somewhat better.

The last Tri-City Florists' Club meeting was held at the residence of Julius Staack, Sr., of Moline, November 10. At Mr. Staack's greenhouses everything was found in apple-pie order for the holiday trade. The next meeting of the club will be held at the Davenport Outing Club rooms, Davenport, December 14. A cordial invitation is extended to all florists who happen to be in the city at the time.

H. M.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Never have I been able to report a more satisfactory Christmas business. No matter the angle from which you look at it, the result is the same. The volume of business was far in excess of any other Christmas, and there never before was a holiday when there were so many flowers; in fact, so many that nearly every order could be filled in full and with just what the buyer wanted. Another thing which looks well for the business is that prices have never been higher.

With all of these things taken into consideration, it is easy to see that the general verdict that this was the greatest Christmas business ever is not only correct, but that it hardly expresses the general satisfaction. Even now, with the Christmas rush over, several of our best retailers are busy with large decorations for holiday entertainments, and all stock coming in is sold out at prices not so far below the Christmas high mark.

In the wholesale district, C. E. Critchell was working day and night and is well satisfied; L. H. Kirk says that business was at least double what he did last year; Weiland & Olinger handled a fine lot of stock and hit it especially right on Beauties; Wm. Murphy was well supplied with carnations, which brought the highest price ever, and also did a good business in holiday greens; the Ohio Cut Flower Co. had a fine lot of mums that sold well, and Gillett & Ohmer report a satisfactory increase.

In the retail district the reports are equally good. Hardesty & Co. had a rattling business. Julius Baer reports by far the most satisfactory business he ever had. R. A. Kelly & Co. and the Bletcher Floral Co. had all they could do. A. Sunderbruch's Sons are always there when there is business on, and are well satisfied. The Over-the-Rhine florists were equally pleased. George Tromey and Fred Gear both report a fine business, as well as do Otto Walke and Wm. H. Gear. J. O'Malley was highly pleased and Coulthard & Pogue, whose store was decorated in fine style, report business over double that of last year. They did a large business in potted Christmas trees. Of the hill florists, the Walnut Hills Floral Bazaar were rushed as never before. George & Allan report a fine trade. The Avondale Floral Co. and Edith Kyrk handled large quantities of high grade stock. J. A. Peterson says his plant trade reached a high mark this year. The report from the growers throughout this section of the country is the same. They all sold out clean and at good prices.

John Walt had a novelty in his window, a ripe watermelon some eighteen inches long.

There is every prospect for a fine New Year's business. Stock will likely be scarce.

C. J. Ohmer.

WHITE FLY.

One of my houses, in which I am growing geraniums, sweet peas and snapdragons, is full of white fly. What can I do to get rid of the pest? I have tried several remedies.

A. V. B.

White fly is a difficult insect to kill, but the most effective remedy is fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas. This is done in accordance with the formulas that have many times been published in the Review.

DAYTON, OHIO.

The Market.

Everybody interested in the florists' business, whether on a large or small basis, gives a satisfactory report of Christmas trade. Prices were high. There were, of course, a good many who would not stand the pressure, but on the other hand there were others glad to get the stock at its own price, so everything in sight was disposed of. Red flowers of every description sold rapidly. The carnation crop was large, but not any too plentiful. The rose supply did not nearly meet the demand. Callas and giganteums found ready buyers, while orders for valley, violets, narcissi and Romans were generally used in boxes of assorted cut flowers. Poinsettias, azaleas and all blooming plants sold well. Some of the florists expect to cut out holly next season, as there are so many street peddlers that it is useless for the florist to handle it.

Taking it on the whole, everyone felt more than satisfied with last week's trade, which was better than that of 1907.

Business since Christmas has kept up well and we are inclined to believe that from now on trade will be better than it has been previous to the holidays.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. had some fine stock for the Christmas trade, but did such a fine business they were obliged to turn down a good many orders.

Besides Christmas orders, Mrs. Young reports a busy week on funeral work.

H. H. Ritter says Christmas business this year was far superior to that of last year.

The State Board of Engineers is causing some of our florists considerable trouble by requiring their firemen to take an engineer's examination, in order to fire a greenhouse boiler. They would be pleased to hear from some of our fellow tradesmen who have had any experience along this line. R. A. B.

MARBLEHEAD, MASS.—Larkin H. Hayden is installing a new auxiliary boiler at his greenhouses. The foundation is already in for another 90-foot house, which he plans to have ready for use in the early spring.

The Test of QUALITY

CYPRESS is conceded by all authorities to be the best wood for greenhouse construction and quite a little has been said about the "right kind of cypress." What way have you of knowing the "right kind of cypress?" Can you tell by looking at a cypress plank just where the sap lies and what kind it is?

One way to be sure that you get the "right kind" of cypress, is to place your order with a firm that makes a test of every piece before shipping, and employs an expert to detect cypress defects. Send for "Why Use Cypress?" and "The Mummy's Case."

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

It is too early at this writing to sum up exactly the results of the Christmas trade here, but it is quite certain that the weather, for unruliness and untoward conditions previous to and during the week of December 21, was the worst brand dispensed by the weather bureau. For nearly three weeks it has been cloudy, with heavy fogs and only a glimpse of sunshine for an hour or two.

On Tuesday, December 22, we were visited with a heavy snow storm with severely cold weather, which paralyzed traffic. The snow measured twelve inches in depth. This crippled the market, as the snow was piled four feet high around the market stands, and put a damper on cemetery trade. Slippery pavements and cold blasts of wind combined to the discomfort of those whom business, pleasure or duty compelled to go on the street. Notwithstanding, there seems to have been a fairly good business done.

Naturally flowers were scarce. This is expected for some days before the holidays, many growers holding on till the last moments in the expectation of better prices. Tuesday the market was practically bare of carnations. Roses, which are not so easily held back, were scarce by reason of unfavorable weather.

The Baltimore Florists' Exchange did a business considerably in excess in volume of any preceding Christmas season. Manager J. J. Perry had an extra force of efficient helpers and the transactions of the day were smoothly and expeditiously forwarded, including considerable shipments to out-of-town customers. By the closing hour nearly everything was cleaned up. Pot plants were in heavy demand, especially ferns, poinsettias and cyclamens, of which there were heavy shipments.

A curious feature of the occasion was the revived trade in violets. For several years the demand for these has been light at this season, whether due to their scarcity or the high prices at which they were held. But this year, as by one consent, everybody wanted Christmas violets and good ones were hard to find.

There was an oversupply of holly and mistletoe. The finest holly could have been bought at $1 per crate and mistletoe at $1 per barrel, and hundreds of crates and barrels were never removed from the wholesale houses. Q.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

The Review is ahead of any other paper for florists and I cannot do without it.—H. W. Wright, Amarillo, Tex.

Enclosed you will find a check for the renewal of my subscription to the Review. I let it run out a few weeks ago and I have missed the paper very much. I think it is the best trade paper published.—H. C. Holmes, Morristown, N. J.

Allow me to say that the Review is a very welcome guest and its coming is always awaited with interest. I cannot understand how anyone in the trade can do business without it. To those who are in doubt I would recommend, "Try the Review."—A. D. Zimmerman, Ottawa, Kan.

Think This Over

For the man who is thinking of building the all-cypress house, here is a most instructive comparison between the wooden purlin and the angle iron one used in our Sectional Iron Frame House.

Think of the difference in shade cast! This same proportionate shade reduction is so with practically every member of our Iron Frame construction.

But not only is the shade reduced, but repairs are practically cut out. You don't want to be tearing down and replacing your all-cypress houses every few years, when for a little more invested you can have a house that is good for an indefinite time.

Now is the time to take up your spring building—be ready on time this year. Write us.

Lord and Burnham Company

Main Sales Office

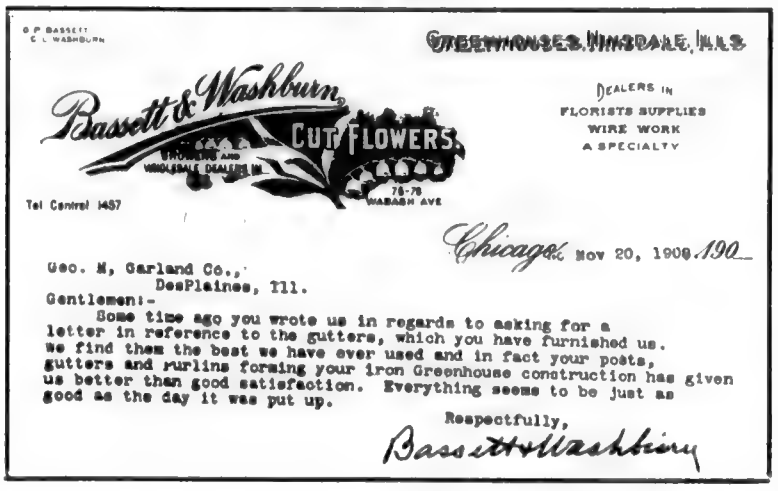
BOSTON, 819 Tremont Bldg.

PHILADELPHIA, 1215 Filbert Street

Are You Aware of the Fact



That you can erect one of our semi-iron houses for about the same price that it will cost you to put up a house on wooden gutters?

Furthermore—

Did you ever stop to consider that the post and gutter is the foundation of the greenhouse, and is, also, the most vital part thereof?

In the investment of $5000.00 or more in a greenhouse, it seems folly to presume that a man of business would overlook or wrongfully consider the importance of a substantial foundation, whereby the life of his investment would be tripled. Would you, for a minute, think of building a $5000.00 residence and set the same on a frame foundation? How unwise does it then seem, that your business, from which the maintenance of this life is derived, should thus be started!

Letter No. 3.

By adopting OUR method of construction, the extra cost will be more than offset at the end of the FIRST YEAR by the extra bench space and light obtained, and it will NOT be necessary to rebuild your house after it has been up but 15 years. For further particulars, address

COLLEGE COURSE FOR FLORISTS

EDUCATION IN FLORICULTURE.

The Course at Amherst.

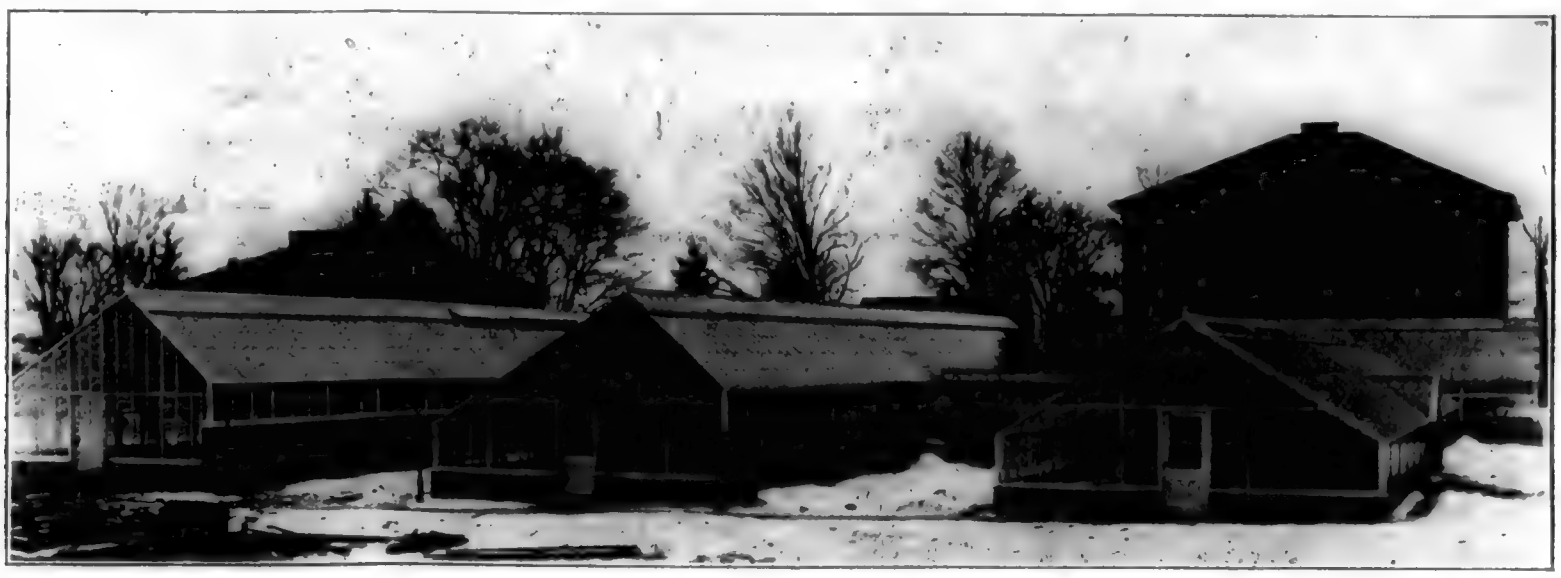
In a paper by Charles N. Page, of Des Moines, read before the Society of Iowa Florists December 9, 1908, that appears in the REVIEW of December 17, the following statement occurs:

"During the past year I have corresponded with most of the agricultural colleges in the United States, but I find that none of them is prepared to train a young man in commercial floriculture. Although the Missouri Botanical Garden and the Illinois Agricultural College have courses which would be of considerable benefit, they are far from complete."

Two years ago the Horticultural Department at Massachusetts Agricultural College was reorganized and a horticultural division was formed. This division is composed of independent departments of pomology, floriculture, landscape gardening and market gardening. The floricultural course aims to give instruction in strictly commercial floriculture. As at present organized, there are given in the first three years of the course those subjects upon which the foundations of floriculture are based; namely, botany, bacteriology, entomology, soils, fertilizers, plant propagation, the propagation and care of trees and shrubs, general horticulture, and market gardening, together with other subjects, such as mathematics, history, English, and some of the other languages. In the senior year the course becomes more scientific, practical and technical.

The first half-year is largely taken up in the consideration of details of greenhouse design and construction, greenhouse equipment, such as types of benches, beds, ventilators, and the like, also greenhouse heating. In the last half-year the time is wholly occupied in the study of cultural methods of commercial florists' crops, methods of marketing, design work and decorating. A student may receive instruction in any of the subjects suggested by Mr. Page. The course is so planned that the student devotes much time to the details of growing plants by practical greenhouse work, in addition to the lectures of the class room. Observation trips to commercial establishments are taken from time to time, and on each of these trips the student is provided with a written syllabus, in which is noted the special features he is to observe. A written report of the trip is required at a later date. This year thirteen seniors are taking the course, six of whom intend to take up commercial floriculture. The remaining seven are taking the course in preparation for work in landscape gardening, or in the management of private estates. It is expected that with the new equipment the number of men electing this course will increase rapidly.

The requirements for admission to this course are based upon the studies covered in the high school courses of Massachusetts high schools. In other words, the high schools are the training schools for the agricultural colleges.



The Short Course.

To provide for a class of young men who have not had the advantages of a high school education, a short course in floriculture has been started this year. This course covers ten weeks. It began January 5 and closes March 10. The only requirements for entrance to this course were that the individual be at least 18 years of age and of a good moral character. Tuition is free and board and room rent reasonable. Immediately upon its announcement the registration for this course reached the capacity of the teaching equipment and a number who wished the course could not be accommodated. The aim of the course is to give, as thoroughly as the limited time will permit, the principles of greenhouse construction and management essential for success in commercial floriculture. No attempt is made to develop experts in the growth of greenhouse crops. Such expertness comes only after years of practical experience in growing some individual crop. It is hoped, however, that those taking the course may find their lives broadened and their capacity for intelligent work increased by these few weeks of study.

The men taking the short course in floriculture are required also to take the lectures given in soils, fertilizers, insects and diseases of greenhouse crops. Aside from the daily lectures of the course, talks will be given each week by experts on special subjects. The men secured for the course this year have been eminently successful in the various subjects on which they are to speak, and the college is to be congratulated on the hearty coöperation these men have given the work.

Facilities for Instruction.

The facilities for giving instruction along this line will not be surpassed by any institution in the United States when the new range of greenhouses, and the new instruction building, for the departments of floriculture and market gardening are completed. This will be about March 1, 1909. The legislature of 1908 made an appropriation of $34,000 for the erection of a commercial greenhouse range and an attached teaching building. This instruction building is a substantial, two-story brick structure of pleasing architecture, and contains, above the basement, three class rooms, a large laboratory, two offices, a coat room, janitor's room and a work room. In the basement are soil rooms, a cool room for bulbs, storage rooms and lavatories. Adjoining this building on the east is a palm house, the dimensions of which are 25x42 feet. This house is strictly commercial in type and is intended for the propagation and growth of commercial varieties of palms. Adjoining the palm house is a small house for orchids and another for ferns. A students' house 26x50 feet joins the orchid house on the east, and from the east end of the students' house an alley twelve feet wide and 116 feet long runs directly south. Extending east and west from this alley there are a violet house, cucumber house, tomato house, rose house and a carnation house, the dimensions of each house being 24x50 feet. The alley house will be used for propagation and for growing general plants. The contractors for this range were Lord & Burnham Co., New York. The range consists of four two-thirds-span houses and three even-span houses, and with the connecting houses all are built on concrete foundations. Three of these houses are iron frame and the remainder are of the half-iron frame type of construction. The houses are heated by steam from the central heating plant of the college.

In courses of instruction along all lines there is more or less criticism and in floriculture the chief criticism seems to come from the practical men. It is to the effect that the courses are not up-to-date. The agricultural colleges need the hearty coöperation and assistance of the practical men in keeping their courses up-to-date and a closer affiliation will be advantageous to both. Suggestions of methods for strengthening the courses are always welcome and the views of the work from men engaged in it are appreciated. It is the aim of the floricultural department of Massachusetts Agricultural College to keep closely in touch with the practical interests and to offer a course that will train men along all lines of floriculture. E. A. White.

THE ROOSEVELT BALL.

The event of the season at Washington was the debutante ball for Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the President's daughter, Monday, December 28, at the White House. The reception took place in the East room. Miss Roosevelt stood in front of a solid wall of flowers. The bouquets were all arranged on a specially made rack. There were hundreds of bunches of all kinds and descriptions. Some were huge bunches of cattleyas, orchids and valley; there were great arm showers, showers of Maids, shower effects with Killarney, bunches of My Maryland with blooms as large as Beauties, and long-stemmed American Beauties. This wonderful display of debutante bouquets represented every known style and arrangement of flowers, by the best men in the trade, and it was a sight never to be forgotten. The palms and decorative plants were furnished by the Agricultural Department. For the supper, fifty-two tables had artistic vases of Enchantress carnations and maidenhair fern. The gentlemen had boutonnieres of white carnations and the ladies as favors carried 8-inch balls of pink carnations, which hung from the arm by a loop and bow of green ribbon. These, hanging from the arms of all the ladies dancing, produced a fine and novel effect.

Mr. Oliver, the White House decorator, with a corps of assistants from the Agricultural Department, arranged the tables and made the favors. All the leading stores had a share of the bunches, quite a few coming from out of town.

THE BROKEN COLUMN.

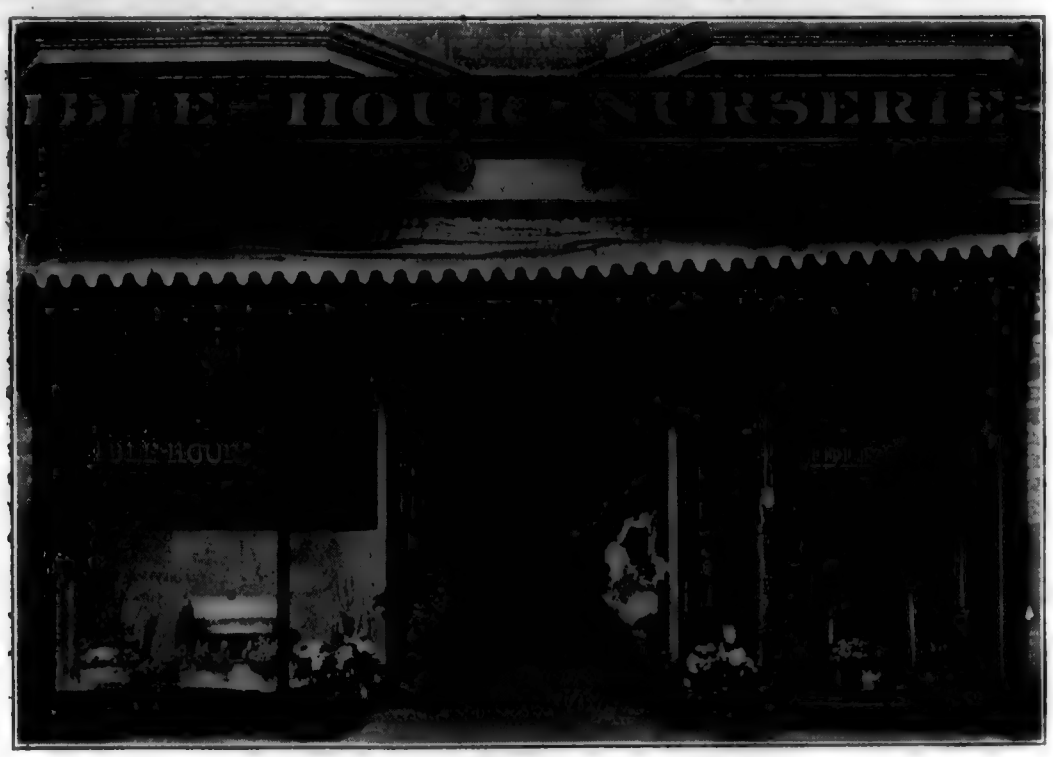
The groundwork of the column shown in the accompanying illustration may be made of any small white flower in season, the object being to outline the column clearly and distinctly. When this work is complete a garland of roses, lily of the valley and ferns is thrown over the column, adding the artist's touch to complete the picture. This was a funeral design by Charles Henry Fox, of the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. Mr. Fox expressed modified approval when shown this photograph. Phil.

A GEORGIA STORE.

The illustrations on page 7 are from photographs taken at the store of the Idle Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga., the day before Christmas. One picture, of course, shows the interior, with its stock of plants. It is an interesting picture because it shows the stock salable in the average flower store. One or two made-up baskets are shown, and any number of single plants, most of them with some sort of an inexpensive pot cover.

The window scene is well conceived. One window displays plants and flowers, the other is to attract special attention. It represents a small cabin in the country, the landscape being artificial snow. There are all the usual outdoor accessories, a well, swing, barn and cow lot. The picture is not clear enough to show, but Santa Claus was just driving over the little bridge in the foreground, in a sleigh drawn by toy store reindeers.

BELATED CHRISTMAS REPORTS.



Last week's Review, the issue for December 31, was pretty well taken up by Christmas trade reports, but a few of the belated ones may be of interest.

Quincy, Ill.—Gentemann Bros. say Christmas trade was better than ever; everything sold out clean.

Galesburg, Ill.—I. L. Pillsbury had

The Broken Column.

Store of the Idle Hour Nurseries, Macon, Ga.

the best Christmas trade ever experienced, much better than he expected.

KEARNEY, NEB.—H. C. Green says Christmas trade was fifty per cent better than last year and everything sold.

POST FALLS, IDAHO.—W. S. Van Dorn says everything sold out clean and many times the quantity of cut flowers could have been used.

WATERTOWN, N. Y.—W. A. Clark & Son report a Christmas total about as last year, but not as good as in 1906. There was stock for more business.

FARGO, N. D.—The Shotwell Floral Co. found business about as usual, with enough stock except that a few more plants in bloom might have been used.

NASHUA, N. H.—August Gaedke & Co. report a fifteen per cent increase, enough cut flowers but not enough plants. Few customers wanted ribbons or pot covers.

TITUSVILLE, PA.—W. Bay says Christmas trade was good. All stock closely cleaned up and good prices were obtained. Holly and roping were short of the demand.

AKRON, O.—W. P. McFarland says the Christmas trade was especially good. The new houses and office on the street make the place much more attractive than heretofore.

FITZGERALD, GA.—Joel Thomas makes no advance in prices for Christmas and always sells everything he has ready. This Christmas was one of the most prosperous in his career.

FREDERICK, MD.—Henry Trail says the Christmas business showed an increase, but there was enough stock so there was a little of everything left. The best sellers were cyclamens and holly wreaths.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—Edward Smith sold many more expensive plants than at Christmas, 1907, and found the use of pot covers, baskets and ribbons decidedly helpful and profitable. Carnations were the most popular cut flower.

HOLYOKE, MASS.—Gallivan Bros. were cleaned out completely and could have used much more stock. The total was much better than ever before. All the business was done in the last few days and they were too greatly rushed to make up many plant arrangements.

FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.—The Southwestern Seed Co. reports Christmas as satisfactory. Sales on cut flowers were a little better than last season, and blooming plant sales much larger than last year. There was also an increased demand for greens and decorative material.

PATERSON, N. J.—Edward Sceery says trade here was about the same as last year, but not so good as in 1906. He had all the cut flowers needed and plenty of plants. He says the call was for plain plants, unembellished. His Passaic store reports the best Christmas trade, better than 1907 or 1906.

SAVANNAH, GA.—A. C. Oelschig & Sons say Christmas was twenty-five per cent ahead of 1907 and fifty per cent ahead of 1906. All stock sold except a little of the second grade. They found plants sold better with pot covers and disposed of more large palms and made-up baskets than any previous Christmas.

HOBOKEN, N. J.—M. Hendberg says fine wreaths for cemetery use were much in demand at Christmas, showing that the dead as well as the living are thought of at the holiday time. He had enough stock and says plants sold better than cut flowers, because the latter are too expensive for average trade at Christmas.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—Richard E. Evans reports little difference in the Christmas trade compared with 1907; about ten per cent increase compared with 1906. Plants sold splendidly. Carnations were scarce and more could have been used. Roses were left. All plants required pot covers. Baskets are not much used here.

BOULDER, COLO.—Charles F. Fawcett reports twenty-five per cent increase compared to 1907, fifty per cent compared to 1906. He cleaned up everything except some holly and could have sold much more. Every plant sold was with a pot cover of water-proof crepe paper, and he found it an excellent addition. To him the interesting feature was the number of comments on made-up baskets of plants, and the fact that these arrangements nevertheless did not sell.

HUTCHINSON, KAN.—John Stamm sold out clean on cut flowers for Christmas, but says plants were a slow sale, although he could have used more azaleas. Kansans are not yet educated up to the elaborate plant arrangements.

DECATUR, ILL.—M. Z. Kellogg says the holiday trade was good, both in cut flowers and plants.

BOISE, IDAHO.—The Boise Floral Co. found Christmas trade much better than heretofore. Plants sold well after the cut flowers had been disposed of. A pot cover was used on every plant.

WATERVILLE, ME.—Mitchell & Co. say the holiday business was twenty-five per cent less than last year, but about the same as in 1906. There was an abundance of stock. The outlook for 1909 is not bright in Maine.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Hoyt Bros. Co. say the Christmas business was thirty-five per cent ahead of last year. They could have used more cut flowers, but had cherries, peppers and poor poinsettias left, although all first-class flowering plants sold well. They find it pays to decorate plants; enough value is added to make a profit on the accessories besides increasing the salability of the stock.

Brockton, Mass.—W. W. Hathaway reports Christmas trade as gratifying, considering the unrest prevailing in the shoe trade, Brockton's main industry, and the many out of employment. Trade was about one-third less than in 1907. In DECATUR, ILL.—M. Z. Kellogg says the holiday trade was good, both in cut flowers and plants.

BOISE, IDAHO.—The Boise Floral Co. found Christmas trade much better than heretofore. Plants sold well after the cut flowers had been disposed of. A pot cover was used on every plant.

WATERVILLE, ME.—Mitchell & Co. say the holiday business was twenty-five per cent less than last year, but about the same as in 1906. There was an abundance of stock. The outlook for 1909 is not bright in Maine.

SPOKANE, WASH.—Hoyt Bros. Co. say the Christmas business was thirty-five per cent ahead of last year. They could have used more cut flowers, but had cherries, peppers and poor poinsettias left, although all first-class flowering plants sold well. They find it pays to decorate plants; enough value is added to make a profit on the accessories besides increasing the salability of the stock.

Brockton, Mass.—W. W. Hathaway reports Christmas trade as gratifying, considering the unrest prevailing in the shoe trade, Brockton's main industry, and the many out of employment. Trade was about one-third less than in 1907. In pot plants, azaleas, cyclamens, Lorraines, primulas, Boston ferns and palms sold best, while in cut flowers carnations were, as usual, the leaders, roses, violets and bulbous stock coming next in popular favor. Prices averaged good.

Enid, Okla.—The Cowan Floral Gardens say Christmas trade was twice as large as in 1907 and three times as great as in 1906. Everything sold. The trade is growing rapidly here, but the made-up plant arrangements of the larger cities are not yet known here.

Lynn, Mass.—Gibbs Bros. report a small increase over the Christmas trade of 1907, about ten per cent increase as compared with 1906. Stock came out about right, but they could have sold more red roses and red carnations. White carnations were about the only thing left unsold. The call was for less expensive articles and not many were willing to pay the price of the made-up plant arrangements. What hurt the Christmas trade most was undoubtedly a strike of five weeks' duration.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW.

Every now and then we hear it said that "there are too few varieties of roses"; or we listen to some one bewailing the lack of novelty in the retail florist's stock, because there is "too much sameness about the varieties grown year after year." Not so very long ago it was said that there were "only four" forcing roses, meaning Beauty, Maid, Bride and Meteor. There has been a lot of change in the last half dozen years—and change for the better from every point of view—but those who sell cut flowers do not all agree with the opinion that there are "too few varieties." From one point of view there are too many, especially of pink roses. I will tell you why.

In the days when Maid was our only pink forcing rose we grew a good batch of it and we sent to market every day a cut of some little size. Then we took part of our space for Chatenay and a little more for Kate Moulton; then the next year a house for Killarney, with a house less of Maid. Last season we found room for a few Mrs. Jardine, but we didn't get in on My Maryland or Mrs. Palmer. Looks like we had missed a good thing in the Maryland, but there won't be many ahead of us, for we shall plant it this year.

Now, every one of these roses is a good rose—perhaps some better than others, but not one that is not worth growing. But the point I have in mind in this: My cash returns are falling off, and I can't kick to my commission man, or at the times, for my commission house got in the first protest, something like this, when I asked them to pick up some My Maryland for me:

"For heaven's sake, quit it. Don't split up your glass for any more varieties. Maryland's all right—looks like a good thing—but you've got more varieties now than you ought to have. When you grew only Maid for pink you had a nice little batch of stuff every day; we could grade it up and have enough of each size to do some business with. Now you've got so many varieties you don't cut enough of any one thing so we can grade 'em up and fill a decent order. If there were not others like you, so we can lump the lots, you would never get for your best any more than the price of the seconds, for you don't have enough long stuff of any sort to fill a first-class order.

The Editor is pleased when a Reader presents his ideas on any subject treated in

The Weekly Florists' Review

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU.

What you want to do is to go back to first principles. If you think you can do something else better than Maid, why, grow it—but cut out the rest, no matter how good they are. Grow the thing you can grow best, but grow enough of it so you can cut more than a handful at a time."

Now, do you know I believe the commission man may be right? Moreover, I'm not at all sure his theory doesn't apply to a good deal larger growers than I am. I've been around a bit lately—with my eyes open. You can see, if your attention has been called to it, that the growers don't really know roses—that is, of course, cut roses; they grade them at the greenhouses, into two lots, and the wholesaler promptly regrades into five lots, or at least four, and if the consignment is large enough he is likely to divide up each grade into two by separating the open and the tight. There you have the grower's two grades set up in eight or ten pots. You'll note the buyers, when they come in, always go for the graded stock, not that just in from the grower, unless they expect to buy the whole lot at the price of the seconds. The order clerks always pick out from the graded stock for shipping.

I've looked around the retail stores, too. Only the largest carry all the varieties of roses in stock; most of them stock only two pinks, Maid and Killarney—or should I say Killarney and Maid? When they get hold of a customer who wants something "different" they either make it different by the arrangement, or they order stock specially for it. The average retailer, no matter how much he may like to have novelties for his customers, is slow to put them in stock; he would rather let the grower and the commission man take the risk, and as supplies become more and more regularly available in wholesale markets, making it unnecessary for the retailers to carry stock for other than counter sales, the grower's risk will become greater—the waste of a dollar's worth of stock in a commission house means 85 cents loss to the grower to 15 cents loss for the wholesaler.

Now, the point I wish to make is not against the newer roses, but rather in their favor: Go in heavily enough for every variety you grow so that you can cut a salable quantity. Liberty displaced Meteor, and in turn gave way to Richmond, but we have no complaint of too few red roses. Next year I shall cut down my pink roses to three. It would be two if I did not have to add My Maryland on the chance it will displace one of the others. Then in white we've all got to try White Killarney as a certain competitor and possible successor to Bride—and—here you are—how can we try all the really good things and still keep our lists down to where we can cut profitable quantities of each variety? The only solution, as I see it, is for us not to try to do too much. "Between two stools we fall to the ground." Let us pick out the thing we can do best, and not begrudge the other fellow his modicum of success. Let's not try to grow everything, but try to do a few things well.

THE FRENCH AWARDS.

Readers of the Review already are familiar with the interesting trials of new roses held last season in the Bagatelle Gardens, Paris, where Rhea Reid, shown by the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., gained the grand gold medal offered by the City of Paris for the best rose. Awards to other roses were: The premier prize, offered by the Minister of Agriculture, was won by A. Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland, with Dorothy Page Roberts. The premier prize offered by the National Horticultural Society of France, was won by Soupert & Notting, Luxembourg, with Mme. Segond Weber, a tea-scented rose obtained by crossing Antoine Rivoire with Souvenir de Victor Hugo. A second prize medal, offered by the Rose Section of the National Horticultural Society of France, was won by William Paul & Son, Waltham Cross, England, with Mrs. Dudley Cross, a variety somewhat like Marie Van Houtte. Another second prize, given by the French Rose Society, fell to Peter Lambert, Trier, Germany, for Frau Oberhofgærtner Singer, a H. T. derived from Jules Margottin crossed with Mme. Eugenie Boullet.

Cattleya Lawrenceana as Freshly Imported.

RED SPIDER ON ROSES.

Enclosed you will find some leaves from our Bride and Maid roses. The leaves are falling and the roses have almost quit blooming. Please tell us the trouble and give a remedy for it.

A. W. C.

Though there may be some fungoid trouble, which, owing to the shriveled condition of the leaves, I am unable to detect, the main trouble is a heavy dose of red spider. The most effective remedy for this is cold water. Spray the foliage thoroughly once a day during bright weather. In order to dislodge the pests, a pressure of forty-five to sixty pounds is required. RIBES.

SCALE INSECTS ON FERNS.

Enclosed you will find a fern leaf which has scales on it. Kindly advise me as to what I can do to destroy them in my palm and fern house. What can I spray with? How warm should my palm and fern house be kept?

A. V. B.

The scale insects in question prove to be the same troublesome pests that are causing anxiety to many growers of nephrolepis, and the best way to fight them is by first cutting off the worst fronds from the ferns, and then spraying them once a week with solution of extract of tobacco, the solution to consist of one part of Rose Leaf Extract of tobacco to fifty parts of water.

A night temperature of 60 degrees is right for a mixed house of palms and ferns, and 75 degrees during the day, with some ventilation. W. H. T.

DIELYTRA FOR EASTER.

We have a few dozen Dielytra spectabilis in pots outdoors covered up, along with the spiræas. We wish to have these for Easter. Shall we treat them just like the spiræas, or do they require different treatment? H. C. O.

Do not start your dielytra yet. Keep in a frame or cold house. You will have better plants if you do not subject them to a high temperature. Place in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night about the end of January. In such a house it will flower in time for Easter. Dielytras do not require as much water as spiræas, as they do not root so freely.

ORCHIDS

CATTLEYA LAWRENCEANA.

That beautiful and extremely useful cattleya, Lawrenceana, is not at all common in cultivation, and the recent receipt of some 250 plants by an American firm is, I believe, the first consignment which has arrived in America or Europe for a long time. C. Lawrenceana was discovered in British Guiana in 1885, and was named, like quite a number of other choice orchids, in honor of Sir Trevor Lawrence, president of the Royal Horticultural Society of England, whose orchid collection at Burford Lodge, near Derking, in Surrey, has for several decades had a world-wide celebrity.

The flowering time of this cattleya is in late March or early April, a period when cattleya flowers are far from plentiful, which renders it of special value commercially. The flowers somewhat resemble those of C. Skinneri, but are much longer, almost equaling C. Trianæ in size. The color is purplish lilac. The center of the lip is light yellow, the remaining portion being of varying shades of purple. Sepals and petals are broad and the flowers, which are produced on stout scapes, stand out boldly. Usually five to six flowers are carried on a scape, but strong bulbs will give eight to ten. The pseudo-bulbs are distinct, a foot or more in length, of a reddish brown hue and much furrowed.

C. Lawrenceana succeeds well with us at the warmest end of the cattleya house, where a minimum temperature of 60 to 62 degrees is maintained, and grows better in pans than in baskets, hung well up to the light, with a little shade, except in midwinter, when the glass is clear. There is no better rooting medium than osmunda fiber. Like all cattleyas, it wants an abundant water supply during the growing season.

C. Lawrenceana, coming in season when C. Trianæ is gone and before C. Mossiæ or Mendellii are in flower, is a decided acquisition to commercial orchid growers. Its only competitor would be C. Schrœderiana, but nine customers out of ten would pick C. Lawrenceana in preference to that variety on account of its more pleasing color. The accompanying illustration shows a few freshly imported plants. W. N. Craig.

BENCHES VERSUS SOLID BEDS.

I grow roses, carnations, lilies, etc., on benches. All my houses are connected, facing south. My benches are four feet high, thus leaving head space of only eight feet from bench to ridge. All the houses are partitioned by boards underneath the gutter. The bench next to the gutter facing south scarcely gets any sunshine at all until late in the day. What I want to know is, would it be better to remove the partitions and benches and grow my stock on the solid ground? J. J. C.

The best angle for houses is one running due east and west, but good stock can be grown in those built as yours are. As you are probably running different temperatures in your houses, it would be inadvisable to remove the board partitions, unless it were between such as are kept at approximately the same temperature. As a general rule, benches are decidedly preferable to solid beds for winter flowering of roses and carnations. In spring and summer the solid beds seem to yield better results than benches. I do not think it would pay you to change to solid beds, but would advise removing the partitions where temperatures will allow. C. W.

DELPHINIUM FORMOSUM.

Will Delphinium formosum planted now bloom next summer? E. W. S.

This and other varieties of the hardy delphiniums, or larkspurs, will bloom next summer if sown now. The spikes will not, of course, attain the size of older plants. A better plan for you another year will be to sow about the middle of July. Even sown this late, a few will flower, and the following season they will yield excellent spikes. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Propagation of New Varieties.

Those who invested in any of the new varieties of last season's introduction and now have the mature plants on the benches will doubtless have formed some opinion as to their merit. If this opinion is decidedly favorable to their continuance, it is natural that every cutting should be regarded with covetous eyes.

As a rule, the stock of recent introductions is not large with the average grower, and while it is in the spirit of the progressive grower to desire material increase in the plantings of such as give promise of merit, it is advisable to "make haste slowly," for without doubt much of the unsatisfactory experience with new sorts is due to the mad rush in endeavoring to propagate in unreasonable quantities.

Avoid the Yearly Massacre.

If the best plants could be selected and grown in a separate house, exclusively for the production of cuttings, and handled accordingly, that would be one thing, but this is out of the question with a majority of growers. Consequently I am not in accord with the practice of cutting back the plants severely; in fact, it is best to cut but little more than if grown for flowers alone.

This chopping, wholesale massacre, and skinning to bare poles, is altogether too debilitating. Furthermore, it is probable that the plants from which the present ones were propagated underwent similar treatment and their offspring needs to be allowed more of Dame Nature's own sweet ways this year.

The Ideal and the Practical.

In giving my views December 24 regarding selection of stock from which to propagate, it was not my intention to confine operations to ideal plants alone. Owing to the commercial features, which must enter into our calculations, such a course, in many cases, would be impractical. When we have a comparatively small stock, there must necessarily be a second choice of plants, but in any event there must be no sacrifice of vigor.

The side shoots from the flower stem, which make desirable cuttings, are usually in prime condition to root during the interval between the bud's showing color and the proper time to cut the expanded bloom. Should they be in condition and it is desired to remove them some time in advance of cutting the bloom, it is important that at least one strong shoot should be left at a point just below where the stem of the developed bloom will be cut. This is done not only with a view to a succession of bloom and later cuttings, but it does away with the necessity of depending for future operations upon dormant eyes, which are of uncertain behavior and quality.

If it is not the intention to make use of bloom except for the purpose of inspection, a portion of the partially developed buds may be removed by cutting above the uppermost suitable shoot and again, when all are taken, observing the precaution to leave one, as written above.

Just as it is unwise to cut a large number of blooms from a plant at one time, even so it is injurious to strip a plant of every shoot at one operation.

Retarding Cuttings.

Sometimes very desirable cuttings are available somewhat too early and one is much averse to throwing them away. These may be retarded in rooting a week or more by inserting them in a flat of sand, placing them in a cold house and later moving them to the propagating bench.

The fact that plants are affected with rust does not debar them from use in propagating. We have come to regard the existence of it in a variety as evidence of its being well bred. If care is taken to select cuttings showing no signs of the trouble, and if the stock is kept growing vigorously without check, there will be little seen of rust the following year. About the worst combination to be up against is that of rust and red spider together. Geo. S. Osborn.

SPLIT CALYXES.

I would like to know what causes our carnations to split so. The night temperature is 52 degrees at one end and Establishment of the W. C. Hill Floral Co., Streator, Ill.

56 degrees at the other end, in which we have White Perfection, and where the greatest trouble is. About three weeks ago the temperature at night went down to 46 degrees at this end, but I should think that they would be over it by this time. At the first of the season they were all good, but for three weeks they have been splitting. This being my first year at carnations, I am at a loss to know what ails them or what to do for them. Any light thrown on the trouble will be greatly appreciated by us.

R. H. G.

In the first place, you are growing your White Perfection rather too warm. Better reduce the temperature in the whole house about two degrees, making it 50 to 54 degrees. White Perfection is prone to split a small percentage of its calyxes under any conditions, but when grown too warm any carnation is more sensitive to a changeable temperature than it would be in a lower average temperature.

You are most likely now reaping the result of that severe drop of which you speak. It would take just about this long for the buds which would be affected by it to develop. Another two or three weeks ought to see you through the trouble. Keeping a uniform, steady temperature is all you can do for it.

AVERAGE CROP OF CUTTINGS.

What would you consider an average crop of cuttings per plant, say on 1,000 carnations, grown exclusively for the cuttings? I was planning to try the cutting business, with 2,000 or 3,000 plants. What would you suggest as the best leading varieties, including three or four pink, two white and two red, to start with?

F. C. G.

A common phrase, frequently employed in answering questions such as yours, is, "That depends." The fact is, the answers to your questions might be so varied, depending entirely on so many things which would change conditions and results, that I would need about one-half of this number of the REVIEW to exhaust the subject. I will be as brief as possible and yet give you at least some information.

To begin with, varieties vary in the production of cuttings as well as of blooms. What would be a good average for one variety would be poor for another. The size of the plants at the start, too, must be considered, and I might say right here that large plants are really more essential in growing for cuttings than they are for blooms, because your propagating season is so short. You can, however, set them closer on the bench and still make the bench yield a good crop, if you started out with that intention in the fall. From such varieties as the Enchantress tribe you should be able to get from thirty to thirty-five cuttings per plant. Victory will not give you so many; neither will Lady Bountiful or Aristocrat or Defiance. The last named will not give more than half that number, unless you have unusually good plants. How large a percentage of these you succeed in shipping out will of course depend on your ability as a propagator, as well as some other qualifications, which we will touch on later.

When you ask me to name the varieties you should grow for this purpose, I can only advise you to use your own judgment. If you will visit a number of large establishments where rooted cuttings are sold, you will find that while some of the standard varieties are grown on each place, yet the list of varieties will vary on the various places. Each grower will have different ideas as to what varieties will have the biggest call in that particular season. As good an indication as you will find anywhere, will be found in the REVIEW. When the reports are generally favorable about a certain variety of recent introduction, you may be sure there will be a good demand for the cuttings. To the rooted cutting specialist it matters but little what he himself thinks of the good or bad qualities of a variety. What interests him more is, what do the rank and file think of it? If the reports average well, he stocks up. If, on the other hand, a variety which he considers extra good does not make a favorable impression elsewhere, he may try to save it from oblivion, by saying a good word for it now and again, but he will not propagate it heavily.

This, of course, applies mostly to varieties of recent dissemination. After a variety becomes a leader in its color, there is, of course, no guesswork about it, but prices are lower, too, and profits smaller. For instance, there is no guesswork about whether you can sell White Perfection cuttings, or White Enchantress, on account of its origin, but how about the varieties sent out last season? Some of them promise well, but will they be in demand next season? In case one of them meets with a big demand, the grower who was lucky enough to have a big stock can make much more than he could out of Perfection or White Enchantress, on account of the higher price. After a variety becomes a standard and is generally grown, the specialists' opportunities are reduced considerably on account of the large number of cut flower growers who make the cutting business a side line for disposing of the cuttings which they do not need themselves.

Then, finally, you must consider your ability to sell what you have to offer. Many a good grower does not get rid of his products to the best advantage. Especially is this true in this part of the business. A reputation must be worked up first. Unless you have, by chance, some variety which is in great demand and scarce, you will have to match your reputation against that of your competitors. If your products are first-class you will, of course, acquire a good reputation, but it will take time. Printers' ink, properly applied, will, of course, sell much stock, but where it can be coupled with a good reputation the results are much better. Perhaps the best advice I can give you is to go into the rooted cutting business gradually. Work up a reputation and trade in that line, and let your stock keep pace with it.

STIGMONOSE.

Can you tell me what the disease is on the carnations you find enclosed, and the cause? It seems to be spreading over the whole house. Could heavy mulching be the cause, or overfeeding with such fertilizers as bone dust and wood ashes?

C. S.

The specimens forwarded were full of light spots, which are caused by the disease known as stigmonose. As I have said repeatedly in answer to inquiries, this disease is brought on through the punctures of insect pests, such as aphis, thrips, red spider, etc.

The condition of the plants and the treatment after the punctures are made certainly do have a great deal of effect on the seriousness of the trouble. If the plants are grown rather hard and the growth matures slowly, the punctures will often leave no spots at all. But, on the other hand, if the growth is soft and succulent and matures quickly, the spots will be numerous and large. Excessive watering and feeding will always aggravate this trouble, if it is present to start with. Avoid heavy mulching or feeding until toward spring, at which time the trouble naturally disappears.

You will often find that varieties which become quite yellow with these spots will take on a healthy appearance during the summer months, only to become covered with them again the next winter.

A COMPARISON OF CUTS.

Victory Leads Enchantress.

It is frequently asserted that it doesn't pay as well to grow red carnations as it does those of other colors; that they are shy bloomers and never will produce as many flowers as other varieties. E. T. Wanzer, of Wheaton, Ill., says his records disprove all such theories and that Victory, the only red he grows, outblooms Enchantress, which is without question grown in larger numbers than any other variety the country over.

Mr. Wanzer has fourteen benches of each variety, 690 plants to the bench, so that the figures which follow represent the cut from 9,660 plants of Enchantress and 9,660 plants of Victory. Four benches of the Enchantress were grown indoors all summer, but all the rest of the plants were benched early in August. Cutting began October 1, and up to December 26 Enchantress had given 22,275 good flowers and 1,475 splits. In the same time Victory gave 29,225 perfect flowers and only 175 splits. Enchantress gave, then, up to Christmas slightly more than two flowers per plant, while Victory gave almost three flowers per plant. At the same time it is worth noting that Enchantress began splitting October 12, but that Victory showed no splits till December 18. The record of the daily cut is as follows:

The Review would be glad to have other growers supply the records of cuts from a specified number of plants of these and other varieties, for purposes of comparison with Mr. Wanzer's record. Can anyone beat Enchantress with Beacon, or any other red?

THE HILL FLORAL CO.

The illustrations on page 11 give an idea of the establishment of the W. C. Hill Floral Co., at Streator, Ill. The outdoor view is from a photograph taken in July, but the carnation house interior was photographed in December.

This business was established in 1884 and at that time consisted of only one house 12x40. At the present time there are four houses 20x100 devoted to carnations, one house of the same size for roses and another for bedding plants following the chrysanthemums. There also is one house 10x30 for propagating. Following the death of the proprietor, W. C. Hill, the business was incorporated. F. R. Thornton is president and Clara Sherman secretary and treasurer.

Carnations, it will be noted, occupy a greater part of the space and have always been successfully handled here.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Annual Premium List.

The premium list for the eighteenth annual exhibition, to be held at the German House, Indianapolis, Ind., January 27 and 28, shows little change from previous lists. Provision is made for the usual exhibits of 100 blooms in each color. The classes for named varieties are cut down by dropping from the list the names of a number of sorts no longer generally grown, but all varieties disseminated prior to July 1, 1908, are eligible as "any other" if not provided for by name. The society's medals, and those of the S. A. F., are offered under the usual conditions. Six special prizes are offered, by Baur & Smith, A. Wiegand & Son, Bertermann Bros. Co., H. W. Field, the State Florists' Association of Indiana, and by the Indiana Floral Festival Association.

The program for the meeting has not yet been announced, but arrangements are being made to entertain a large attendance.

STOCK FOR CLOUDY CLIMATE.

Will you kindly tell me what are the best kinds of roses and carnations to bloom under glass in northwestern Montana, where there is a large proportion of cloudy weather?

A. S.

The most profitable varieties of roses to grow under these conditions would be: Pink, Bridesmaid and Chatenay; white, Bride and Ivory; red, Richmond.

In carnations there is quite a long list to select from. The following varieties will do fairly well: White, Queen Louise, Boston Market and White Perfection; pink, Lawson, Dorothy and Rosepink Enchantress; light pink, Enchantress; crimson, Harlowarden; red, Victory and Beacon.

Ribes.

TO MAKE MOLES DECAMP.

In the Review of December 24, E. S. M. asked how to get rid of moles in his lettuce house and was advised to destroy them with spring traps. William Morrow, of Stamford, Conn., says:

"If E. S. M. will open a creek one inch wide and ten inches deep across his lettuce bed, about every six or eight feet, and pour in a mixture of Scalecide and water, about six parts water to one of Scalecide, the moles will not show up in that bed again. Tar water will also keep them away. The creeks should be closed as soon as the liquid soaks down."

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Rambler Roses.

It is time to start the ramblers intended for Easter. Only a trifle over three months remains between now and the great floral festival. Of course, it is possible to get the plants into bloom within ten weeks, but this necessitates hard forcing, with a consequent deterioration in the quality of the plants. Stock summer grown in pots is, of course, preferable for early forcing, next to that plants potted in the fall. We prefer to start them rather cool, 40 to 42 degrees at night, until they break; then 5 to 10 degrees warmer, but would much rather not subject the plants to over 55 degrees at night at any stage of their growth. Of course it is necessary to bend or twist around the canes to secure an even break. All weak wood should be cut away.

While Crimson Rambler is more seen than any other variety at Easter, it is becoming too common and people, tiring of it, naturally turn to Dorothy Perkins and other pink varieties for a pleasing change.

It is too early yet to start any hybrid perpetuals for Easter.

Shamrocks.

Each year seems to show an increased sale of shamrocks on March 17. It is now getting rather late to sow seeds, but if got in at once, little plants may still be obtained. Pick off the seedlings from the earlier sowings into shallow flats of light soil and, before they become crowded, transfer them singly to small pots, or a number together in pans, whichever your trade calls for the most. Shamrocks want a cool house, not over 48 to 50 degrees at night. In a higher temperature they become drawn and weak and fall an easy prey to the attacks of thrips.

Ten Weeks Stocks.

Seed sown at once of the early forcing sorts, like White Column, Beauty of Nice and early Ten Weeks, will flower during April. Quite a few would be in flower for Easter, but at that time they are not good sellers and it is better policy to time them for Memorial day. To have them in flower May 30, seed should not be sown before February 1. Cover the flats containing the seeds very lightly after sowing. A scattering of fine sand is better than loam and when this is used the surface never becomes baked and slimy, as when soil only is used. Stocks, if sown in a brisk heat, must be moved to much cooler quarters before the seedlings have had time to become drawn. They are better all potted off singly.

Freesias.

Quite a number of the early spikes of freesias will now be cut. If you are in the habit of cutting your stems right down to the ground, it will not pay you to carry the bulbs over. No matter how well you may care for them, they will not give returns like fresh bulbs from which the flower stems have not been cut. If, however, you cut merely the tops of the flowering shoots and do not remove the foliage, the bulbs, if gradually dried off, will be equal to the best you can buy.

Freesias resent forcing and will keep but a short time if given much heat. Let them open in a cool house and their shipping and keeping qualities will be greatly improved.

Any bulbs you intend carrying over ought not to be stood under the benches, but given a sunny shelf and carefully watered for some time yet. Purity is so much superior to other varieties of freesias that up-to-date growers are discarding everything but Fischer's seedling.

Lorraine Begonias.

Probably the bulk of your plants of Lorraine begonia are sold. If you have any small stock in 2-inch to 3½-inch pots, keep the flowers pinched off. These can be successfully carried over and grown into fine specimens for another season.

If, as previously advised, you saved a few strong, healthy plants, from which the flowers were removed, which have been growing in a sunny house, you will now be able to get a nice crop of leaves for propagating purposes. It is not too early to make a start if you are desirous of working up a good stock for next Thanksgiving and Christmas sales. With cool weather, the steam or hot water pipes will now have a steady heat. If the propagating bench is given a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees, with a top heat of 60 degrees, the leaves should root nicely and produce little plants inside of six weeks. Cut off a portion of the stem with each leaf and allow the leaf itself to just touch the sand. The sand should be sharp, so that water will pass through it quickly. Shade from the sun's rays. With the avoidance of draughts, and with careful watering, a large proportion of the leaves should be fit to pot off by the end of February. Careless watering will, of course, cause wholesale rotting.

Gladioli.

As a catch crop the large-flowered gladioli come in useful. Where any other crops have died out, the gladiolus can be planted, but it prefers a cool house; 52 degrees at night is as high as we care to give it.

For Easter flowering the bulbs should have been planted in the benches in December. These should now be coming up. Keep the soil scratched and do not water too copiously or stem-rot will result.

For Memorial day plant the bulbs about the end of January. They cannot all be had in flower at once, but they bring fairly satisfactory prices at all times in the markets.

That beautiful variety, America, is now procurable for $40 to $45 per thousand. This should bring it more within the range of commercial growers. No other gladiolus is of so pleasing a shade and it will always sell when other colors go a-begging. Try a batch of it and you will not go far wrong. Shakespeare, Snow White, May, Augusta and Klondyke are good named sorts.

In planting unnamed batches, it is always better to use them by one shade of color. These sell better than miscellaneous mixtures. Gladioli like a soil containing a good proportion of well rotted manure.

Lobelia.

The only way to get nice, dwarf little plants of the blue bedding lobelia is to propagate from cuttings. Old plants carried over will now have a good crop of these, and by getting them into the propagating bench at once, you will get nice, bushy little stock for spring sales. These will also give you plenty of tops for late propagation. These lobelias, except near the ocean, are not successes as bedders, but come in useful for window-boxes or vases. The hanging variety, gracilis, if sown towards the end of the month, will also come in useful for this same purpose. The new double lobelia, Kathleen Mallard, is well worth a trial.

Seed Sowing.

While it is a trifle early to start many seeds, there are a few which can with advantage be sown now. Among these are Dracæna australis, Grevillea robusta, Aralia Sieboldii, Asparagus plumosus, Asparagus Sprengeri, gloxinias and fibrous-rooted begonias. The soil in all cases should consist of a large proportion of leaf-mold, and fine sand should be incorporated through it and scattered over the surface after seeds are sown. A brisk, moist heat will insure early germination. Keep the pans or flats covered with papers until the seedlings appear. Use a fine sprinkler when watering and never allow the soil to become in the least dry.

TO CLEAN POTS.

I would like to offer the following suggestion to readers of the REVIEW who spend much time over the drudgery of washing flower pots: On top of my boiler I have a bed of sand, in which I bury my pots, covering them completely. I leave them there for from one to two weeks and when they are removed they will be perfectly clean and almost like new. Try it, and see how it works.

RUDOLPH KAISER.

EXPERIENCE WITH CYANIDE.

During the last few weeks we used four applications of hydrocyanic acid gas for white flies. It killed them, and most of the mealy bugs, but did not seem to get red spider, nor did it hurt bees in a hive on a bench, subjected to one application.

The plants treated were geraniums, coleus, chrysanthemums, cyclamens, primroses, asparagus, ferns, both maidenhair and Boston types; palms, begonias, pelargoniums, violets, bulbous stock, azaleas, stevia and others. Much injury resulted to the artillery plants and rose geraniums and the young growths of Asparagus plumosus. Only a few young leaves of geraniums and chrysanthemums were hurt. Nothing else suffered noticeably.

Department of Plant Registration.

Public notice is hereby given of the application of the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, Pa., for the registration of the plant specified below. This application for registry was filed in this office December 31, 1908, and any person knowing of any reason why the registry of this name should not be made is requested to communicate with the undersigned.

Rose Charles Dingee, a new rose, originated with us; a cross between White Maman Cochet and Hermosa; exceedingly strong grower; large, heavy foliage, resembling Maman Cochet; growing ordinarily to a height of two feet; everblooming; large, deep double flowers of good substance, produced on long, stiff stem; color, delicate rose tints in the center, gradually shading off into pale blush and creamy white.

W. N. Rudd, Sec'y.

December 31, 1908.

WILLIAM J. VESEY.

President J. A. Valentine evidently intends that the S. A. F. shall steer a straight course during his administration, for one of his appointees as member of the board of directors is a lawyer-florist, Judge William J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne. Judge Vesey confesses to always having been a "flower crank." The family had a small conservatory for many years, and in 1892 the interest had grown to the point where a commercial plant was built. The firm is W. J. & M. S. Vesey, the junior member having originally been taken into partnership when she was Miss Maggie Studebaker, at Decatur, Ind., in 1882. The plant has been extended as its earnings permitted, until now it includes about 150,000 feet of glass. Cut flowers are grown, largely for wholesale, but recently a handsome retail store has been opened in Fort Wayne. The supervision of the flower business is largely in the hands of Mrs. Vesey, who last year was president of the Ladies' S. A. F.

Judge Vesey was born April 19, 1857, in La Grange county, Indiana. In young manhood he taught school and studied law. In 1878 he was admitted to the bar and in 1899 was appointed judge of the Superior Court. Aside from his law practice, he is a director in several banks and other enterprises at Fort Wayne.

Judge and Mrs. Vesey have six children, three sons and three daughters. One of the sons is in the greenhouses, the other two in college.

EUGENE J. G. DAILLEDOUZE.

Brooklyn and the surrounding country, comprising the western end of Long Island, have long enjoyed an enviable position in the world of horticulture and floriculture. This is partly due to the fact that this section is convenient to the greatest flower market in the United States, and also to the fact that its population includes some of the most active and successful flower growers in the country. Among this class must be counted the subject of this sketch, a man widely known and highly respected in the trade.

Mr. Dailledouze was born about 50 years ago, on the Delmonico farm, an estate located in what is now a very populous section of Brooklyn, and removed from there with his parents when about 6 years of age, to Flatbush. Soon after this time his father, John Dailledouze, in company with the late Charles Zeller and Joseph Gard, purchased several acres of land in Flatbush, formed the firm of Dailledouze, Zeller & Co. and engaged in the nursery and plant business, continuing in it for several years. After the dissolution of this firm, the various partners engaged in different branches of the business, and it was in the establishment of his father that Eugene Dailledouze was grounded in the habits of close application and hard work that have served him well in his later career.

After the death of his father, Mr. Dailledouze and his two brothers, Paul and Henry, united in conducting the business for the benefit of the widow, and when she, too, had passed away, some years later, the three brothers formed the firm of Dailledouze Bros. This arrangement continued for fifteen years, and during that period a highly successful business in wholesale cut flower growing was built up, the success of which has proved the value of hard work, economical management and close attention to every detail.

In July, 1907, Paul and Henry Dailledouze decided to retire from active business, and since then the business has been conducted by Eugene Dailledouze only, though keeping the old firm name of Dailledouze Bros. The specialties grown in this modern plant of 100,000 square feet of glass are carnations and chrysanthemums, and it is with these that Mr. Dailledouze has been especially identified for several years. As a past president and life member of the American Carnation Society, he is well known to the trade, and as chairman of the New York chrysanthemum committee his judgment is worthy of respect. Mr. Dailledouze is also president of the New York Cut Flower Co., an office to which he has been reëlected for the last five or six years, and is a life member of the Society of American Florists. It will also be an item of pleasant news to his many friends to learn that Mr. Dailledouze has accepted the office of a director in the national society, recently tendered him by President Valentine.

Mr. Dailledouze has celebrated his silver wedding anniversary, and also has a married son, through whom the family name is perpetuated by means of a grandson, less than a year old.

THE S. A. F. REPORT.

Secretary W. N. Rudd celebrated New Year's by mailing, to members, the annual volume published by the Society of American Florists. The date was specially appropriate, as it marked the passage of the old administration and the incoming of the new. An omission doubtless due to modesty is that of the portrait of J. A. Valentine, the likeness of the new president having formed the frontispiece of the report in recent years.

As usual, the major part of the volume is occupied by the stenographic record of the annual convention, but new ground is broken in the inclusion of long reports from the society's entomologist, botanist and pathologist, officers who in the past have contributed little to the work of the organization simply for the reason that no call was made upon them. Prof. F. L. Washburn, of Minneapolis, the entomologist, contributes a list of experiment station literature issued from January 1 to August 1, 1908, bearing upon insects affecting fruits or flowers. The effort simply is to make the information easy of reference, but it also serves to give a new idea of the volume of this class of literature, for it is an imposing array—some 105 bulletins issued in seven months. Prof. L. H. Pammel, of Ames, Ia., the botanist, in twenty printed pages, discusses plant breeding and the year's work on plant diseases, and the pathologist, Dr. B. M. Duggar, of Ithaca, N. Y., reports on some of the fungous diseases of floricultural plants. Brief reports of the special society's doings are also included in the book.

Page 266 is one of the most interesting in the volume; it gives a summary of the membership as of November 20, after the national flower show, as follows:

Life members	179

FLOWERS FOR THE SOUTH.

Will you please tell me how to handle field grown dahlias for cut flowers and bulbs to obtain best results and prices in the market? Should dahlias be grown single-stemmed and should they be bunched in bunches of twenty-five, or should they be shipped separate? Would it pay to grow gladiolus bulbs for market, or if there are any other kinds of bulbs that will pay to grow in field for bulbs or cut flower stock, please inform me as to the names of same? These bulbs are to be grown in the state of Alabama or Florida. W. A. A.

Dahlias will not succeed so well in Alabama or Florida as in the cooler and more northern states. It is almost impossible to quote any market prices for the cut flowers, for while we have seen them sold as high as $4 to $5 per hundred at wholesale in small fancy lots, fine flowers have gone begging at one-fifth that price. We very much doubt if such flowers as you could produce in the states named would be worth marketing in any of the big cut flower centers. The singles and pompons are usually bunched in dozens or twenty-fives. The show, cactus and decorative sorts are better packed singly. For field culture, plant in June in rows four feet apart, allowing two to two and one-half feet between the plants. Remove all but one strong shoot and after this has made three pairs of leaves, pinch out the top. It will then break and make a stocky plant, which will not require staking. A stake to each plant secures the main shoots from splitting, however.

Gladioli will do much better with you than dahlias. For spikes of approved colors, there is much better summer demand than exists for dahlias, and for bulbs there is an excellent market.

For the flowering, or French cannas there is a big demand. Why not try growing a good batch of the best varieties of these? Caladium esculentum is another tuber having a good sale commercially. It would also pay to grow some of the hybrid amaryllises, which should make good bulbs in the section named. N.

HYACINTHS.

Kindly tell me why my hyacinths come up flowers first, before any foliage. C. M. T.

You should have kept your hyacinths in a cellar, covered with ashes, until the growths were at least two inches long before housing. Even then it is advisable to keep them darkened to draw up the stems somewhat. Later in the season this is unnecessary. Your trouble has come from placing your plants in the light before being sufficiently started. C. W.

DATA ON FLORICULTURE.

Secretary J. F. Ammann, of the Illinois State Florists' Association, writes from Edwardsville as follows:

"We are trying to get correct data of the greenhouse area for our organization and I enclose herewith a notice or sort of call to arms to wake the boys up. If you will kindly publish same in the REVIEW I am sure it will help us get results. I also enclose a copy of letter I have sent out to one at least in each county. So far I have heard from about forty counties. When I get a reasonably complete list I shall be glad to furnish you data for publication if you wish."

The letter to county representatives is as follows:

My dear Sir:—We want you to help us answer this question—What greenhouse area have we in Illinois?

Your legislative committee of this association must go to Springfield this winter to secure an appropriation to carry on experimental work for the next two years. To get this, we must be able to tell just what amount of glass is devoted to flowers and vegetables in the state. Your committee has done much in this line and they now require your personal help in completing this work. Enclosed find a list of the florists and gardeners in your county. Please find out from each of these—and any others you may know of—just how much glass area he has and if devoted to flowers or vegetables, or if both, name amount of each separately. We must have this data just as soon as possible. If you cannot assist us in this valuable work, please write the undersigned at once. We are mailing a similar letter to one leading florist in every county in the state and hope they all will help for the best interests of the trade.

Trusting you will be with us in this good work, I am,

Very truly yours,
J. F. Ammann, Sec'y.

The "Call to Arms."

We are going before the legislature at the next session to secure an appropriation to have experimental work done for the florists at the Experiment Station. In bringing this matter before the legislature it is highly important that we should have accurate figures regarding the amount of greenhouses in this state, as the legislators, many of them, think that we are pretty small potatoes. Will you be good enough to write me as early as possible what is the area of your greenhouse establishment? I mean by this, how much ground is covered.

This movement means much to every florist in the state and I trust that you will help by promptly giving me the figures asked for, so that they can be footed up, and we be in a position to tell the legislature how big a business the florists' business of this state is.

Don't forget the convention at Springfield February 16 and 17. Be sure and come. J. F. AMMANN, Sec'y.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Secretary B. Hammond has issued the preliminary list of premiums for the annual exhibition to be held at Buffalo March 17 to 20. The Breitmeyer-Boddington premiums of $300 are continued for the best display of bush roses in bloom and effort is made to get a better showing of pot roses by offering premiums for a list of named varieties. The usual cash prizes are offered for cut blooms, vases of twenty-five and of twelve, in all the standard forcing varieties, the classes for twelves being open only to private gardeners and amateurs.

The special prizes will be included in the final list.

OBITUARY.

S. S. Brenneman.

S. S. Brenneman died last week of tuberculosis, at his home in Webb City, Mo., after an illness of six months. He was born in December, 1848, and was married to Cathryn Haycraft, January 29, 1879. He went into the florists' business in 1896, and built up an extensive business, with one of the largest ranges of greenhouses in southwest Missouri. He leaves a widow and five sisters.

J. T. Montgomery.

J. T. Montgomery, of Toughkenamon, Pa., died January 1, after a brief illness. Mr. Montgomery had been in the business for about six years, having taken over the Isaac Larkins place at that time. He was a grower of cut flowers for the Philadelphia market.

IF there is a desire to move large specimen evergreens from one place to another, the work can be done successfully in hard, frosty weather if the roots are left untouched in large balls of soil.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1909: President, J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; vice-president, E. G. Gillett, Cincinnati, O.; secretary, Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.

Annual convention, Cincinnati, O., August 19 to 22, 1909.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

"WHEN the days begin to lengthen, the cold begins to strengthen."

YOU lose money every way if you fail to be a prompt collector: When a customer owes too large a bill he either does not buy at all, or he buys elsewhere. And then there is the chance of loss in overdue accounts.

IT is interesting to note that Carnation White Perfection won the award at the national flower show at Chicago and at the exhibition of the English carnation society at London for the best variety staged.

THE year 1908 proved that flowers, contrary to popular impression, are not a luxury. After one has been long enough accustomed to a luxury, that luxury becomes a necessity. Enough people have been buying flowers regularly the last few years so that to a good many they have become necessary and in the trade depression of last year the florists suffered as little as those in most lines.

THE HAIL ASSOCIATION.

The writer notes in a recent issue of the REVIEW that the Connecticut Fire Insurance Co., of Hartford, is insuring growing crops against hail. The reason that greenhouse insurance against hail has not been exploited by capitalistic companies is that the Florists' Hail Association is a mutual, coöperative association that furnishes insurance at first cost, without accruing profits to anybody. When the principle of coöperation adopted by the Florists' Hail Association is fully understood, it is my prediction that the methods of that organization will be a model after which other coöperative ventures in other lines will be patterned. And yet, with minimum first cost insurance to be had without paying commissions to agents, it does seem queer that florists are continually applying for such insurance through fire insurance agents.

A letter addressed to John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., will bring full information concerning hail insurance. And it may be well to state in this connection that the Florists' Hail Association does not employ agents, and business can be transacted with the home office in New Jersey with no other cost than a postage stamp to mail a letter.

JOHN G. ESLER.

THIS BARD MEANS BUSINESS.

An interested reader, Adolph Kruhm, of Harrisburg, Pa., thinks the REVIEW'S efforts to attract business are too prosaic—he suggests that the following, written by him especially for us, will be more efficacious:

When wild winds blow
And nature sleeps,
'Tis for the florist to show
What plants he keeps.

To create a demand
He should advertise,
And have plants on hand
When orders arise.

We are here to help florists,
Are "the men behind,"
To print for them ads.
Of the "selling kind."

So let's hear quickly
What you have to sell.
You furnish the copy;
We the story will tell.

EARLY "COPY."

The steadily increasing number of pages in the REVIEW, together with the greater number of copies printed, makes it imperative that the paper go to press earlier on Wednesday in order that it may be mailed at the usual hour on Thursday to reach all subscribers east of Denver by Saturday. Advertisers and correspondents can render assistance which will be greatly appreciated, by mailing their "copy" to reach the office of publication on Monday, or Tuesday at the latest. This request is directed particularly to those regular users of space who make weekly changes in their advertisement—help us by letting us make your changes on Tuesday.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It is strikingly noticeable in the market that the buyers of the better class are doing business, while the smaller retailers find things stagnant. This is especially true of the local demand. The first-class stores have had, and are having, their best season. They are buying large quantities of the best stock, but the small florists, who constitute the greater number and whose purchases in normal times constitute an extremely large volume, are having a tough season. All they need is a little stock for funeral work.

The new year has started with first-class shipping demand, practically every buyer who relies on this market having been heard from with orders for good quantities. It is characteristic, however, that the shipping demand calls for nothing but first-class stock, so that the weak roses and the smaller grades of carnations have not had a good start for 1909.

Wintry weather gave place to balmy spring at the beginning of this week, and the market was heavily supplied in all departments, save Harrisii lilies. It is again just between crops on lilies. On Monday several orders for lots of 100 to 200 were received at about the same time. This led to a skirmish for stock, but without result; the orders could not be filled. It is quite likely, however, that lilies will be an oversupply again in a few days.

The bright, warm weather brought in the roses which had just missed Christ-

It is a most significant fact that for the year 1908 our business shows another very substantial increase

THE FACT IS THE MORE REMARKABLE

when it is taken into consideration that 1908 was an off year—a year in which almost all wholesale florists went backward.

It speaks for the solid foundation underlying our progress that in the off year—the year of money panic, of idle factories, of protracted drought; the year that accumulated 1158 degrees excess heat, the presidential year, the year that all records were lowered save those of business failures—our own sales made another increase—an increase over 1907, the year that stands as the record in the flower business. We feel this splendid achievement is a matter of public interest

Because every buyer of cut flowers should wish to know WHY our sales increase so steadily year after year, through good times and bad.

Our success is founded on two factors:

1st. Strictest business integrity and best business methods.

2d. By concentrating our energies on selling cut flowers only, we are able to handle each consignment so carefully that every flower not only goes out in the best possible condition, but actually in better condition than when received from the growers.

mas. Beauties are fine and so abundant that prices have been depressed to a point rather below the usual after New Year's level. All other roses also are abundant and the quality, especially the color, is notably good. With such large supplies it was inevitable that prices should weaken decidedly. Richmond holds its own better than most sorts, because not so overabundant. Killarney of excellent quality is so plentiful that it is worth hardly any more than first-class Maid.

Carnations have been in heavy supply and prices have gone down sharply. Red and dark pink continue to sell fairly well. There is a larger proportion of Enchantress grown this year than ever before and Enchantress is not as salable as good Lawson. Quiet times as regards funeral work, and an abundance of Paper Whites and Romans, hurt the sale of white carnations.

Receipts of violets have been light since New Year's, but the demand has been enough lighter so that the price has fallen off about a third.

A few tulips are seen, but none yet of sufficiently good quality to be readily salable. Jonquils go better than any other bulbous stock.

Asparagus strings are selling a little better than they have. Some good crops of smilax are ready, but the demand has not yet developed. Wholesalers in many instances are busy picking over ferns.

The long predicted cold wave arrived January 6, with a fall in temperature from 44 above to 10 below. Although the sun continues to shine, the change in weather will no doubt affect the market, shortening the supply and stiffening prices; but the weather-man thinks two days will be as long as the cold will remain severe.

December Weather.

December was an abnormally warm month, the mean temperature being 31 degrees. The precipitation was only 1.18 inches, as against a normal of 2.05 inches. Florists' coal consumption was further reduced by a low wind movement, the average hourly velocity being only sixteen miles. In the month there were nine clear days, six partly cloudy and sixteen cloudy.

Various Notes.

J. L. Raske got a bad start for 1909. His store is on the Jackson boulevard side of the Tom Jones restaurant, in which the big explosion occurred New Year's morning. Mr. Raske's store was wrecked, but will soon be in ship-shape again. In the meantime he is doing business at his old stand, now his branch, in the Board of Trade building.

There promises to be a notable exhibition of carnations and other seasonable flowers at the Art Institute, Thursday afternoon, January 14.

The Florists' Club holds its January meeting tonight, the special order of business being the election of officers.

Plans are being made to get up a good party to go to the carnation convention at Indianapolis, leaving here on the evening of January 26. It is expected that a special car will be secured in each direction.

Hattie E. Carlson, whose recent defiance of a municipal court bailiff caused much talk, dismantled her store on Jackson boulevard January 1 and has retired from business.

A. L. Randall says that his firm shipped to 145 different customers in one day during the Christmas rush.

Otto Benthey, foreman of the Coatsworth greenhouses at New Castle, was in town last week.

The temperature was down to 12 degrees below zero at Wheaton on the morning of January 6 and at E. T. Wanzer's the big hot water main burst just as the mercury struck bottom. By wrapping the pipe with burlap soaked with white lead Foreman Scheffler was able to make temporary repairs and keep up the proper temperature.

E. C. Amling says single violets are again in excellent demand. Cold weather, while it has cut off transient trade, has also affected supplies in all lines.

There was considerable stock frozen January 6, growers evidently not appreciating the severity of the cold wave.

The annual meeting of the Flower Growers' Co. was held at the market January 5. The reports showed the corporation to be in flourishing condition. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, W. L. Tonner; vice-president, A. Henderson; recording secretary, John Sinner; treasurer, M. R. Hills; financial secretary and manager, Percy Jones.

C. A. Samuelson had the family order and much other work for the funeral of Mrs. Eddy, January 5. In the aggregate it made one of the largest funeral orders he ever has had. Mr. Samuelson has had a heavy run of work for coming out parties this season and his holiday week, for the social affairs of the young folks, was especially good.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is preparing to issue an enlarged spring catalogue. It is the intention to greatly increase the facilities and stock this season, because last spring demonstrated that the demand is to be relied on.

Percy Jones reports the presence of Mrs. William Dittman, of New Castle, in Chicago New Year's day.

Kennicott Bros. Co. was receiving first-class Chadwick chrysanthemums as late as the first part of this week.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, tells an interesting story as to how the railroad freight people have classified fertilizers as explosives, because of an accident with some nitrate of soda. The objection to the change in classification comes in the increase made in freight rates. Each shipment of sheep manure or blood and bone now has to be accompanied by a declaration that the substance is not inflammable.

Frank Garland was in town one day last week for a visit with his mother, who lives with Mrs. Fred Wittbold. Mr. Garland says Des Plaines has no special cause for complaint this season.

D. A. Robertson, of the Wienhoeber force, is one of the active members of the British Empire Association.

John Scheiden has been in Iowa for a week on a hunting expedition.

Peter Reinberg has a large section of his Mrs. Field rose which was disbudded during summer and held back for a try-out for winter. The rose never has been given special culture with a view to a winter crop, having right at the start proved so good a thing in summer, but this lot of plants is in fine shape and indicates the rose will be a profitable sort if grown only for winter forcing.

Brant & Noe now grow no roses at all; the glass is given exclusively to carnations and sweet peas. Most of the stock is sold direct to out-of-town retailers, but a portion of the sweet peas are consigned to Scheiden & Schoos in the Flower Growers' Market.

R. J. Busch, who has the Julius Schnapp place on Forty-seventh street, is offering the business for sale.

C. W. McKellar says orchids should be included among the short items. The call for cattleyas exceeds the present supply.

W. J. Smyth has had an exceptionally good season thus far—the best he ever has enjoyed through November and December.

One of last week's visitors was Frank Nelson, who is with Andrew Bather, of Clinton, Ia. He was taking a rest while recovering from a sprained arm, the result of a fall on the ice.

Wietor Bros. are making preparations for another increase in their rooted-cuttings trade. This branch has been getting larger and larger for years and is looked upon as good business, especially the rooted cuttings of mums.

The H. M. Hooker Co. contributed $100 to the earthquake relief fund.

Wm. Abrahamson, who acts for a number of out-of-town florists, as purchasing agent in this market, is also selling carnation cuttings for several growers. He says the quantity of stock he is buying is steadily increasing.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is taking advantage of the favorable weather to push along the erection of its new ranges. They expect to plant early, for an increased summer supply. They will go in heavily on My Maryland, White Killarney and C. P. Bassett this year.

The Andrew McAdams store was made specially attractive for the holidays, with laurel roping. More plant arrangements, in baskets and hampers, were shown and sold than in previous years.

Bassett & Washburn report that if 1909 is all as good as its first week they will be well satisfied.

Vaughan & Sperry are taking up the rooted cutting business, on commission.

A good many wholesalers are on the lookout now for opportunities to book standing orders. Price will not be permitted to stand in the way, for the general sentiment is that from now till spring supplies will be large, save perhaps during some spell of bad weather.

The A. L. Randall Co. reports receiving orders for cuttings of White Killarney and My Maryland from European firms.

ELK PARK, N. C.—Christmas trade was good. The weather has been fine, and the green goods dealers laid in splendid stocks, and were able to fill about all orders, which practically cleaned them up. However, the weather is still fine and the pickers are pouring in daily with new supplies of fine decorative material.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Bellamy Bros., who have succeeded to the business of the late L. E. Marquisee, say that before Mr. Marquisee died he had said he had a number of orders for stock of the new carnation, Marquisee. A search of his books and papers fails to reveal these orders, so someone will be disappointed unless those who gave Mr. Marquisee the orders make themselves known to his successors.

The Market.

Conditions in the cut flower market have remained fairly satisfactory since Christmas. Supplies, owing to the continued clear and comparatively mild weather, are abundant. Roses are less plentiful. A heavy crop at Christmas has resulted in some shortening of receipts. The quality is now extra good. Beauties, Killarneys and Richmonds continue the leaders. Carnations are selling much better than a fortnight ago. There is a better demand for whites and the usual heavy supplies of these are now lacking. Fancies make up to $5 and $6 per hundred. Violets sell well at an average of $1 per hundred; some make a little more, others less. Of Paper Whites and Romans there is an abundant supply, also of Trumpet Majors. Of tulips, supplies are still rather short. A few Campernelle jonquils are arriving.

Freesia from several growers is remarkably good. The best has made up to $8 per hundred, but is now lower. Purity is the variety mostly seen. Sweet peas are not abundant, but are of good quality, so is mignonette; select spikes of the latter make $1 per dozen. Lilies and callas are in good supply and valley sells quite well. Poinsettias are still seen, but no one seems to want them now. Cypripedium insigne is plentiful. Green supplies are selling quite well.

New Year's day made little difference in the local market. The day is but little kept in New England and does not help the florists.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held at Horticultural hall January 2. The treasurer's report showed receipts of $18,400 for the year and expenses of $20,000. The deficit was mainly due to diminshed hall rentals. President Weld urged members to raise the membership of the society from 838 to 1,000 during the present year.

Peter Fisher, Thomas Roland, George B. Dorr and W. H. Bawker, the new trustees recently elected, attended a board meeting for the first time.

Arrangements are well advanced for a big exhibition of orchids and other seasonable plants, to be held in Boston, May 26 to 30, 1910. About $3,000 will be offered in orchid premiums. For the best commercial group a gold medal and $1,000 will be offered for first prize, a silver medal and $500 for second. Gold and silver medals and substantial money prizes will also be offered for groups from private growers, also groups of cypripediums, odontoglossums, cattleyas and other leading genera. Gold and silver medals will also be offered for best seedling orchid, stove and greenhouse flowering and foliage plant, herbaceous plant, hardy climber, etc. Azaleas, rhododendrons, groups of stove and greenhouse plants, etc., will also be well provided for. A number of exhibits are expected from European growers.

A midwinter show will be held at Horticultural hall January 16. Primulas, Lorraine begonias, carnations, etc., are provided for. Owing to the reduced appropriation for premiums for 1909, it has been decided to hold but two big exhibitions during the present year, viz., the spring and chrysanthemum shows. No prizes will be offered at the rose, peony, dahlia and other shows, but medals and other suitable awards will be made to worthy exhibits.

At Framingham.

At S. J. Goddard's carnations are this season looking better than ever and the houses are all carrying heavy crops of flowers. Helen Goddard, raised and introduced from here a few years ago, is still grown in quantity and does finely, much better than Afterglow, which has a large percentage of its flowers off color. In crimsons Octoroon is the favorite, although Harry Fenn is doing remarkably well. White Perfection is the leader of its color. Queen, which has proved a good bread and butter sort, will be dropped after this season, to make way for more fancy kinds. Lady Bountiful is still grown and is unsurpassed for purity and form, even if a trifle smaller than such sorts as White Perfection and White Enchantress. President Seelye is not a success and will be dropped.

Beacon and Victory are grown in about equal numbers as scarlets, the latter having somewhat the preference. Enchantress is still the leader of its particular color. A bench of Winsor grown under glass all summer carried a heavy crop, but the stems were much shorter than those of Winona, which is well liked and will be more heavily grown next season. There were a few good seedlings. One, a cross between Lady Bountiful and Enchantress, of a bright shrimp pink color, promises well. There were good batches of cuttings in the propagating house and many were boxed and potted off.

A batch of Freesia Purity in bloom was extra fine. There were also nice lots of cyclamens, azaleas, Lorraine begonias and other seasonable plants. These are mostly sold at retail, the bulk of the cut flowers going to the Park Street market. A powerful new steam boiler and many other additions have recently been made here, making the plant an up-to-date one.

Some 17,000 carnations are grown at William Nicholson's and I never saw them looking better. In whites Lady Bountiful is still largely grown and carries an immense crop. White Perfection is the queen of its color. Some White Enchantress and Queen are also grown. Small lots of Sarah Hill and Marchioness were under trial. Harry Fenn does splendidly here. Octoroon is also grown. Sara Nicholson, Patten's new seedling, carried a heavy crop of fine bright crimson flowers. Enchantress and Fair Maid are grown, there still being a good market for the latter. Rose-pink Enchantress is not liked so well as Winsor, the short stems on the latter being the chief drawback. Winona is regarded as one of the coming varieties. Afterglow is grown in considerable numbers, but is not keeping up last year's reputation, the percentage of split flowers being heavier.

Mrs. Patten is grown as a variegated and Beacon and Victory for scarlets. A number of other named varieties and seedlings are under trial. A sulphury yellow one of Dorner's raising, with a rigid stem, took my eye. A small lot of Mrs. Burnett, an English variety, was noted. The color is a beautiful shade of flesh pink, deeper than Enchantress; the stems are, however, too short and the flowers produced too few. Large quantities of young stock were potted off or in flats and propagating benches were well filled.

Mignonette is always well grown here, some of the spikes being immense. Marguerites are a leading specialty and yield a constant crop from Thanksgiving until June. Several houses are devoted to them. Single violets here, as elsewhere, were blooming sparsely.

At J. T. Butterworth's, in South Framingham, orchids continue to become more and more a specialty. Cattleyas are grown in increasing numbers and include many fine specimens in excellent health. C. Trianæ was in good crop, one or two white forms being noted. C. Mossiæ, Harrisoniæ, gigas, labiata and others are all grown in quantity. Quite a batch of Lælia anceps, a number being white forms, were flowering. Numerous Cypripedium insigne were also flowering freely. Some Odontoglossum crispum were recently received and will be given a trial. Miltonia vexillaria, Odontoglossum grande, dendrobiums and other sorts were also doing nicely.

A new scented calla, dwarfer in habit and with green stems, was pointed out. It seemed quite distinct. Lily of the valley is a leading specialty here and is well done. Dutch and French bulbs are also grown in quantity. In carnations, Winsor, Fenn, Enchantress, Victory, Fair Maid and Queen were looking well.

Various Notes.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Growers' Association will hold its next trade exhibition February 27 and 28 at Horticultural hall. A splendid prize list is being prepared and promises of exhibits have already been received from several distant states.

Leonard Cousins, of Concord Junction, has an excellent light pink carnation in the way of Fair Maid, but of better form, which sells well at the Park Street market.

Mr. George McWilliam, of Whitinsville, showed a new seedling calanthe, the result of a cross between C. Regnieri and C. Sandhurstiana at Horticultural hall

January 2. The plants carried splendid spikes and most closely resembled C. Regnieri. The cross between the early and late flowering sections has resulted in a mid-winter blooming sort, which will prove useful. A first-class certificate was awarded.

Johnson & Neilson, of Framingham, have a splendid crop of sweet peas at present. Their carnations are also doing finely.

William Thatcher will replace James Farquhar as a member of the plant and flower committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club is arranging for a unique entertainment for ladies' night, January 19, when the new officers are to be installed. A big attendance is assured.

The Boston Coöperative Flower Market will hold a trade exhibition about the end of February, open to all exhibitors and non-members will be made especially welcome, according to President Elijah Cartwright.

The last year gave us a heavy excess in temperature over the normal and a deficiency of over ten inches in precipitation.

Penn Bros., on Bromfield street, did the biggest Christmas trade in their history, disposing of an immense quantity of cut flowers and plants. This up-to-date and enterprising firm always has an attractive window display and deserves the success achieved. W. N. CRAIG.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The new year began with a rush of business that was too much for this market, which has not recovered from the shock. The demand was heavy for cut flowers of all varieties.

Neither roses nor carnations are any too plentiful at present. Roses in particular are quite scarce, causing the price to remain pretty stiff. Richmond and La Detroit range in price from 6 cents to 12 cents. White roses are few and far between.

Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are helping out considerably.

Various Notes.

W. B. Brown was kept on the go last week with several decorations. One, in particular, at the Twentieth Century Club building, called for much southern smilax. Large baskets filled with southern smilax and poinsettias were suspended from the ceiling, some of the smilax hanging quite low, producing a pretty effect. On the tables were centerpieces of holly and poinsettias.

A. M. Patterson, father of Murray Patterson, died on the morning of December 31.

The month of December was the best the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has had since being in business. Mr. Rahaley attributes this to the good stock they are handling and also to advertising in the REVIEW.

George Peters, for several years with the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, has left for Chicago, where he will study for the ministry.

Tuesday, January 12, Philip Breitmeyer begins active service as mayor of Detroit. H. S.

Orchids

Although not very plentiful, we have been able to fill our orders for Orchids. We have a very reliable source of supply, and can furnish them if they are to be had in this market.

We can quote on

CATTLEYAS, 60c and 75c.

LAELIA ANCEPS (pink), $5.00 per dozen.

LAELIA ANCEPS ALBA (white), $6 per doz.

The Laelias are splendid stock of those varieties; they average about three flowers to the stem. The white, in particular, are very fine.

Gardenias

We have had a good call for them lately. Our flowers have been fine, which we believe accounts for our large sales in that line. We most always have them in stock, and if not, can get them in a few hours from our growers.

Roses

Our supply in that direction is hard to beat. We have a large stock to select from, and we count among our growers some of the most successful ones in this section.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market was decidedly unsettled during the Christmas holidays. There were some flowers sold at good prices, there were a good many flowers sold at moderate prices, and there were a few flowers sold at poor prices indeed. Pretty nearly everything sold at some price, however. The market gradually declined until New Year's, when a decided improvement was noticed, which was continued throughout Saturday and Monday, despite the mild, almost spring-like weather, which accelerated crops.

It is noteworthy that fashion's flowers, orchids, gardenias, violets, Beauties and Killarney, are most in demand, indicating that the ball and dinner season is in full swing. Mignonette also sells well, as do sweet peas, now in abundant supply. White flowers of nearly all varieties have been in excess of the demand at one time or another during the week, despite the immense quantities used at a number of prominent funerals. Violets hardly seem in their winter stride yet, the warm weather of the fall having apparently checked production, especially in certain localities. The orchid class has been strengthened by the addition of the white and pink lælia. Gardenias have shortened up a little, but are still in fair supply. Valley is not so plentiful as during the holidays; the quality is fine, the demand fair.

Bulbous flowers are selling rather better than usual at this time. This is especially true of Paper Whites, due possibly to decreased production. Freesia has made its appearance in fine shape; also campernelles. Trumpet Major is more plentiful. Easter lilies have been selling slowly. There is no change in the green market.

The two leading varieties of flowers, roses and carnations, have been left until the last. Of carnations it may be said that really select stock is in demand at satisfactory prices. The poorer grades hang badly. White has been overplentiful. Red brings a shade more than pink, when nicely done. The prices in the rose market have fallen to a point where the buyers are taking hold with a will. All varieties are selling readily at good prices. Richmond is preferred to Liberty, and Killarney to Maid. Short-stemmed flowers of all varieties are in especially brisk demand.

A New Pompon.

Through the courtesy of Robert A. Craig, I am able to give REVIEW readers a brief description of the new white chrysanthemum, Baby Margaret. Baby Margaret is a sport from the yellow Baby chrysanthemum, grown by the Robert Craig Co. The sport was first noticed by Robert A. Craig about four years ago. It is a fixed type, and even more vigorous than the well known yellow Baby. So popular has Baby Margaret proved with all visitors to Forty-ninth and Market streets, and with those who have seen it on exhibition in the city, that it has been decided to send this promising new variety out this spring. Mr. Craig feels perfect confidence that all his claims for the little stranger will be fully verified.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held at Horticultural hall on the evening of January 5. There was a general discussion of the Christmas business, led by Robert Kift.

Alphonse Pericat, who is the star orchid grower for the Pennock-Meehan Co., exhibited a handsome table of Cattleya Trianæ, showing high culture. One spike had five large flowers. Joseph Heacock exhibited his new carnation, Dorothy Gordon, in good form.

A Christmas Combination.

Each and every one of our floral artists exercised taste and ingenuity in plant arrangements for Christmas gifts. Ericas, crotons, fancy ferns and pandanus, as well as many more, were used in combinations rare and pleasing. It is, however, a wholesaler grower salesman's combination I wish to write about. It is briefly this:

Co., conceived and successfully executed the idea of putting one 5-inch araucaria and four 4-inch Lorraine begonias in a 6-inch azalea pan. How he did it is best explained by the street car conductor's order, "Move up closer, please." The araucaria was about fifteen inches high above the pot, the begonias filled in between the leaves. The pans sold well.

Various Notes.

The Henry F. Michell Co. opened its new store at 518 Market street to the general public January 4. This handsome store is now entirely complete, and in excellent running order. The popular Frederick J. Michell is in charge. Many visitors were seen inside on the opening day.

J. T. Montgomery, of Toughkenamon, Chester county, Pa., died January 1. The funeral took place January 4. Mr. Montgomery, who took Isaac Larkins' place about six years ago, was a regular shipper to Eugene Bernheimer.

George A. Strohlein, of Riverton, N. J., sailed from New York January 5 on the good steamer Kaiser Wilhelm the Grosse.

J. Frank Hunter, who was for many years a well known figure in the wholesale district of this city, is now with the Robert Craig Co.

The Leo Niessen Co. reports the arrival of white and pink lælias, important additions to the orchid class.

Smith, Lineaweaver & Co. report that many of the collieries closed during the Christmas holidays, and resumed work December 30.

M. Rice & Co. report the arrival of a large shipment of the popular Japanese air plants.

The Johnson Seed Co. has received encouraging mail orders immediately following the issuing of the early catalogue.

Carl Corts, who represents the Joseph Heacock Co., is one of the most important factors in the Killarney market today. Mr. Corts had 1,500 blooms of the Irish beauty on New Year's morning.

Myers & Samtman have just filled a large order for the wood of My Maryland from one of the prettiest houses of this coming pink rose that one could wish to see.

The funeral of William L. Mathues, former state treasurer, at Media, January 3, was the occasion for many handsome floral offerings. A fireman, whose name I do not recall, but who died from injuries received at his post of duty in a great Market street fire, was also deservedly remembered by many persons who had cause to be grateful to him during the twenty-six years he spent in the fire department.

Fancy freesia was seen this week at the store of W. E. McKissick & Bros.

Albin Harvey & Sons, of Brandywine Summit, picked some exceptionally fine carnations during December.

William Stevens, representing John Burton, was an important person in the Christmas Beauty market.

Campernelles and freesias have been added to the list at William J. Baker's this week.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received further shipments of Easter goods on three incoming steamers.

Many handsome baskets, horseshoes and other floral tokens were sent from this city to the opening of the State Legislature in Harrisburg on January 5.

Most of the local stores report New Year's business as satisfactory, ahead of last year, though possibly not up to the good old days, when New Year's rivaled Christmas. PHIL.

John G. Gardner, a florist, on Cooper town road, above Ardmore, was informed December 30 by his daughter, Ethel, that on June 2 last she had married Oscar Murray, an electrician, in New York. As there was no parental objection to the match, the paternal blessing was immediately forthcoming, Mr. Gardner stating that the young couple had merely preferred a quiet ceremony.

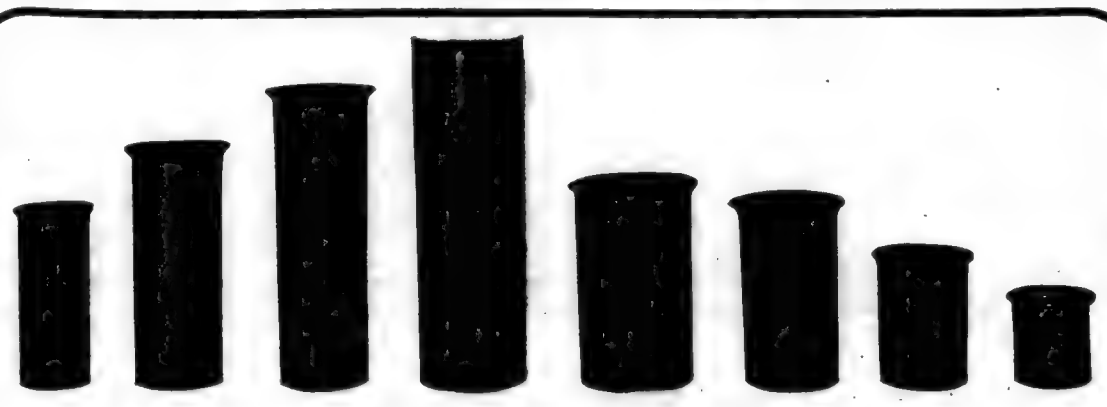
NEW YORK.

The Market.

The usual midwinter calm, which always succeeds the holidays, is here. There is hardly a ripple on the cut flower sea. Not a breath of winter is yet in evidence as the week opens, and the temperature is 50 degrees. While the west and north are powerless in the grip of blizzards and zero, here in New York we enjoy all the privileges of the sunny south, which Mr. Taft is making so congenial. But the gulf stream will soon change its course and we will get ours in storm and cold and grip, and coal bills, long before the robins nest again. Meantime we congratulate ourselves on the ideal climate and are proud of it. Everybody is happy, or ought to be, and the new year promises encouragement and prosperity for all.

New Year's trade was quite satisfactory. There was not too much of anything, and prices were not advanced. Retailers have only good words to say of the business done. The flowers and plants and elaborate box and basket conceptions sold rapidly and at almost Christmas prices.



The week opens with light shipments and demand. Prices are lower and some predict quite a recession as the week progresses. A few anticipate greatly increased receipts. The plants have about recovered from the close cutting before the holidays; not long will anything be off crop and there will soon be enough of everything and to spare.

Special Beauties fell to 75 cents and 60 cents January 2. Probably 50 cents will be top before the week ends. All other roses are now abundant and 12 cents is top for Maid and Bride. Killarney retains its remarkable popularity and Richmond is in wide demand.

There is a full supply of orchids, valley and lilies and carnations of every grade and variety, now perfect in quality. There is too much smilax and asparagus. Violets held up wonderfully all through the holidays and prices were even higher than expected.

The present week will develop no extraordinary demand, but society functions are numerous and many elaborate dinners and receptions are announced. The leading retailers are all busy. There seems to be no cloud on the financial sky. We look for a splendid season's business right up to Easter, and the plantsmen are already planning more extensively than ever for that day. They are well satisfied with Christmas results and with the exception of poinsettias and azaleas every plant found a ready Schumacher & Kessler have dissolved partnership, Mr. Kessler having formed a partnership with his brother. Kessler Bros. have leased the second floor at 50 West Twenty-eighth street, where they will do a general cut flower commission business.

Next Monday night, January 11, the New York Florists' Club will hold its first session of the year. President-elect Hallock entertained the new and old officials and a few others Wednesday evening, January 6, at a dinner at Bardusch's Castle Cave, where methods were discussed, looking to the advancement and best interests of the club during 1909.

A goodly number of New Yorkers will attend the carnation society's convention at Indianapolis. Secretary Young would be glad to have those who intend to go send in their names. It is possible special rates may be secured if the number is sufficient.

At the poultry and cat show last week in Madison Square garden, one of the successful prize winners was the Stumpp & Walter Co. This firm has made a big success of its poultry department. The exhibition at the store continues. Mr. Sperwin, of this house, has just returned from a successful trip through the south.

Anton C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, got the best of an encounter between his buggy and an auto last week. Anyone else would have been killed by the collision. He escaped comparatively unhurt, after a trip through the air, but the vehicle went the way of the one-horse shay.

It was ladies' night December 29 at the Astoria Bowling Club. It was also W. Siebrecht's birthday, and he gave an elaborate dinner to the happy crowd. Prizes for every one of the fair sex in handsome vases and Japanese novelties rewarded their efforts in the following order: Mrs. Donaldson, first; Mrs. Miesem, second; Mrs. Siebrecht, Sr., third; Mrs. Siebrecht, Jr., fourth; Mrs. Bleckwen, fifth; Mrs. Doerhoefer, sixth; Mrs. Jacobs, seventh; Mrs. Lorenz, eighth. A special prize of lily of the valley was won by Mrs. Donaldson and a handsome volume by Mrs. Siebrecht, Jr., who also won a box of candy, and won off the tie with Mrs. Miesem and Mrs. Doerhoefer. The high score was 125 by Mrs. Bleckwen. The men's prizes were won by Alfred Bleckwen and Herman Lorenz, and high scores were also made by Messrs. Miesem, Siebrecht, Donaldson, Kessler and Lorenz.

W. E. Marshall is back from a successful eastern trip. The addition to the company's wholesale store on West Twenty-third street is now complete and the new front is attractive.

The ribbon houses all report a phenomenal Christmas. Sidney Wertheimer has returned from his most successful trip, and reports a growing demand for the firm's chiffon novelties.

Ralph M. Ward & Co. report a good demand for Japanese lily bulbs. This firm is optimistic as to the 1909 outlook.

The banquet season has begun. Every week there will now be gatherings around the festive board. The retail florists of Brooklyn, the New York and New Jersey Plant Growers' Association, the New York Florists' Club, the societies at Greenwich, Tarrytown, Madison, Glen Cove and Orange will all celebrate in the usual way, and soon.

Al. Rickards reports greater success than ever in his travels, while Will, the new treasurer of the Florists' Club, presides over a growing store trade at the 1824 Bridgeman headquarters, where the Rickards Bros. now rule supreme.

Burnett Bros.' new store is one of the best of the seed trade in New York. They claim their move to Cortlandt street was an inspiration. Business has doubled with their added conveniences.

Nearly a dozen of the members of the Growers' Cut Flower Co. were in the city Saturday, January 2, attending the regular meeting of the association.

The violet growers at Rhinebeck are numerous and their combination approximates 150 in membership. It is said they have the concentration bee buzzing and are considering the wisdom of confining shipments to a limited number of the New York wholesalers.

J. Austin Shaw.

LEXINGTON, KY.

The Market.

Business has been good since the holidays. Carnations are the best sellers at present and the quality is good. Roses sell fairly well and are of good quality. Some callas, violets, lilies, sweet peas, lily of the valley and stevia of fairly good quality are on the market. Bulbous stock, such as Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths, etc., is plentiful. Some funeral work every now and then helps to clean out the short-stem stock.

The year of 1908 was better than 1907, and we are inclined to believe that this year will be still better.

Various Notes.

James P. Keller says business since the holidays has kept up well with him.

Lucien Leclere and his assistant, George Godfrey, are busy these days.

Anderson & White continue to be busy. Their greenhouses are looking well.

August Leclere, at the asylum, is cutting Ivory and Golden Gate roses of good quality. He also has some good azaleas in bloom, which are used in the wards and hospital.

Henry Ballard, of J. A. Keller's, has returned from a trip to the eastern part of the state.

Grover Shearer, of Winchester, Ky., was a visitor last week.

Blue Grass.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Most people are stil discussing Christmas business, and as it is always so much better than New Year's, they do not consider New Year's much or make much special preparation for it. However, it was about up to the average and the month of December closed much better than any month for a year. There has been considerable doing all the week and Saturday night found everybody tired out, without much desire to talk.

The brighter weather has brought in some fine flowers, especially Killarney, which are in fine color, and when the color is good there is nothing better, unless it will be the My Maryland, which are to be shown at the club meeting Tuesday night, but I will tell you of that next week.

The market is now getting a good supply of the finest Beauties you ever saw, as well as violets, lilies, carnations, sweet peas, Baby primroses, narcissi, white and yellow; Romans, tulips, mignonette, and almost anything you can think of, including "valley as is valley," so that one can have anything he desires.

The prices took their usual after-Christmas drop, with no increase for New Year's, but everything cleaned up nicely, so there was no complaint and the trade generally seemed in a happy frame of mind.

Various Notes.

Every once in a while we hear talk about the wholesalers getting together on the matter of giving credit, and then again it is the retailers who are going to come together to consider the cutting of prices on decorations and giving discounts to undertakers, but nothing seems

Decorative Evergreens

The Christmas holiday demand left us practically without stock, but we have had fine weather since and the pickers are flocking in daily with New Supplies, Fresh and Fine. Some of the retail dealers seem to think that they cannot get the best quality at the low prices we ask. That's right where you are missing a deal, and a trial order will convince you. Remember that we offer you bank reference, and that we are not new in the business.

to come of it. One thing is sure; the retailers and decorators might make many improvements in their methods of doing business, for most of them readily admit that they are doing too much work on which there is little or no profit. There has been some complaint that the club does not take this matter up, but the Florists' Club here is composed largely of gardeners and growers, the store men not being so numerous or active, so nothing is likely to come from that source. These people will have to work it up among themselves.

David Geddis, Homestead, Pa., has gone into involuntary bankruptcy. The store is running under the direction of a receiver until such a time as it can be sold as a whole, and as there are several prospective buyers it is believed that the creditors will fare reasonably well.

Jos. E. Bonsall, Salem, O., was an after-Christmas visitor; also W. H. Smith, of Deyoe & Co., Oil City, Pa.

S. C. Robens, formerly of Cleveland, has purchased the business of H. C. Bucheler, of Sewickley, Pa.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

So increasingly disposed has the public been to ask and receive the aid of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and so large have been the new fields of work assigned to it by congress, that the number of employees has increased enormously in the last dozen years. July 1, 1897, 2,444 persons were employed, and eleven years later, in 1908, the number was 10,420, or over four times as many. Upon localizing this increase, it appears that the number of employees of the Weather Bureau increased from 1,075 to 1,705; of the Bureau of Animal Industry from 777 to 3,152; of the Bureau of Plant Industry from 127 to 976; Forest Service from 14 to 3,753; Bureau of Chemistry from 20 to 425; and small increases in other bureaus and offices. It is significant to note that the increase in number of employees is mostly due to service outside of Washington, in all parts of the country. The number of persons employed within Washington is 2,488, and elsewhere 7,932.

In 1896 the Department of Agriculture was made up of two bureaus and a number of divisions. Seven other bureaus have since been organized and the work of the secretary's office has been developed into divisions. The general change to bureau organization has greatly facilitated the work, which has rapidly grown in volume and in efficiency. There has been developed a remarkable force of scientists, administrators, and helpers. According to Secretary Wilson, the number of seasoned workers now ready to administer the research, the police functions, and the business of the department is sufficient for any reasonable demand for new work.

Texarkana, Ark.—A. W. Ardis, of the Stegall Floral Co., says Christmas trade was the best ever, both in cut flowers and plants.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn; First Vice-pres., J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE catalogues are now pretty nearly all out.

THE Texarkana Seed and Implement Co., Texarkana, Tex., has been incorporated, with $2,500 capital stock, by K. H. Leonard, C. C. Ratcliff and R. P. Dorough.

SHIPMENTS from "the other side" are, as usual, quite behindhand in many cases. This causes considerable annoyance to the American seedsman who wants to fill his early orders in full.

SEED bean crops harvested in 1908 were far below the average and the milling and hand picking process now going on shortens them even more than the most pessimistic grower anticipated.

THE short deliveries of beets and some other standard varieties of garden seeds that are being made by the foreign houses is making itself felt and, as the season advances, is likely to cause considerable worry.

THERE is a shortage of many of the named sorts of sweet peas, according to reports. Sweet pea prices have been low for some years back; too low for profit to the grower, apparently, and a lessened supply it is thought will bring things back to where they should be.

IN a short time the January onion set orders will be moving out. It is reported that so far the onion sets have kept well. Future values depend upon whether the shrink is much or little, and this point cannot be determined definitely until the sets are taken from the piles and run through the mills. When this has been done the spring values of onion sets can be estimated.

GEORGE BURNHAM, of Portland, Me., one of the pioneers of the corn packing industry, died January 1. He was well known to the seed trade in the east.

THE canners' convention at Louisville February 1 will probably have some effect in stiffening prices of the canners' seeds, both for present shipment and for future contract orders. The canners in some cases are holding off for lower rates on the contract proposition, but there is no indication that prices now current will be lowered; in fact, the growers report that an advance, rather than a decline, is in prospect.

Rudolph Fischer, the California freesia bulb grower, is on a visit to his old home in Germany.

The prices of peas are quite high in all of the seed books so far at hand. Bean prices are comparatively low.

Visited Chicago: Chas. P. Braslan, of Braslan Seed Growers' Co., San Jose, Cal.; Arthur Clark, of E. B. Clark Seed Co., Milford, Conn.

At present there seems to be a lull in the demand for onion seed suitable for set planting. Some of the growers have arranged for seed and some are awaiting developments. There is a fear in the minds of the growers that the low priced seed is not what they want and their lack of faith in the integrity of the brokers who are offering it is helping the legitimate dealers.

SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

The whole seed trade seems to be pretty well united in the belief that it would be of mutual benefit all around to change the tariff schedules on all seeds and bulbs from ad valorem to specific duty. A more representative committee of all seed interests could hardly have been gathered together than was done December 2, at the Astor House, New York. There were present: Watson S. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., president of the American Seed Trade Association; J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, chairman of the committee on customs and tariff; William Henry Maule, Philadelphia; W. H. Grenell, Pierrepont Manor, N. Y., members of the same committee; Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia; Henry Nungesser, New York; Charles H. Breck, of Joseph Breck & Sons, Boston; Lem. W. Bowen and K. B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit.

We believe that if the committee's work is supplemented by personal appeal to our congressmen, quoting some of our experiences as the result of the present system, we will succeed in having the change made. There is no question that the change is reasonable as well as practicable. C. E. Kendel, Sec'y.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending December 26 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.
Annatto ...	4	$ 38	Hemp	500	$ 2208
Caraway	300	2672	Millet	150	399

Grass	320	3450	Sugar beet.	1410	10477

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $18,228.

KELWAY'S SPECIALTIES.

"We really are headquarters for cucumber seed in this country," write Kelway & Son, "and it was that point we after he once has established a new standard for his book. Last year's Dreer catalogue was enlarged at nearly double the usual cost to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of the house; this year's book goes the 1908 book sixteen pages better and there is no change in any feature, save the improvement of the color plates. A departure is the incorporation of a large number of cultural notes, for which there is a special index on the first page of the catalogue. Such writers as William Falconer, George W. Oliver, W. C. Egan, Prof. Bailey and Eben E. Rexford contribute the cultural matter.

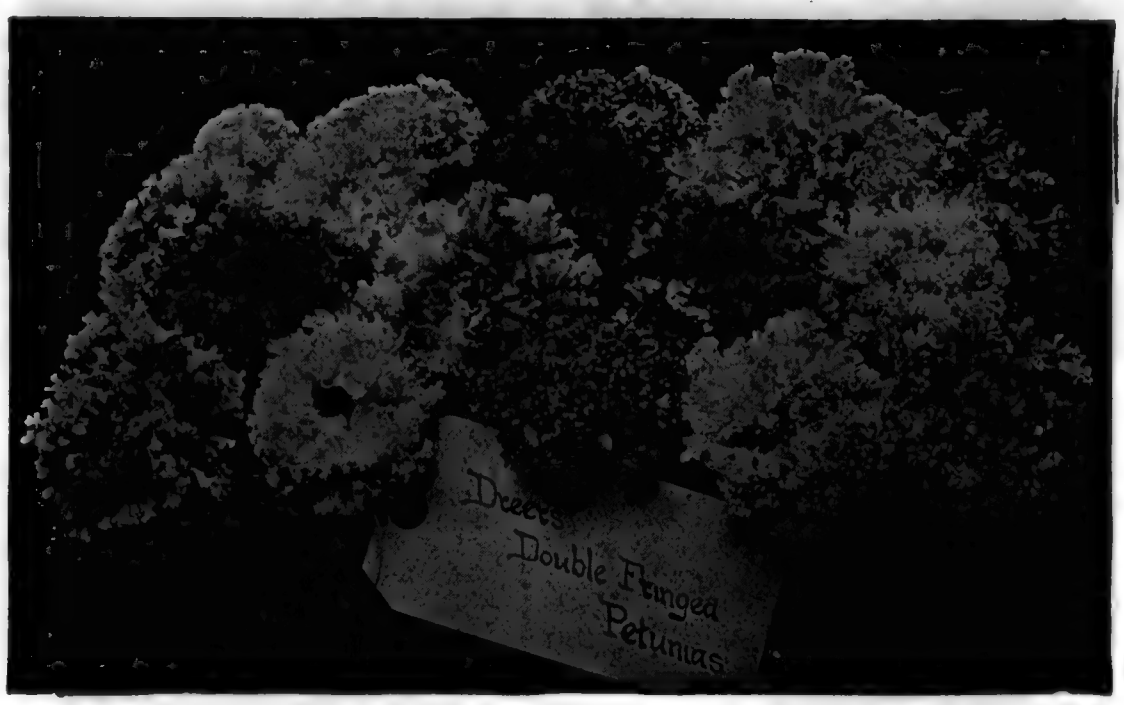
TENERIFFE.

Gem of the Atlantic.

Nature's hand has given a rather odd appearance to the island of Teneriffe. For all the world, it bears a great resemblance to an enormous shoulder of mutton, the broader part of which faces the southwest, and the thinner part points to the northeast. The island is thirty-one miles wide and fifty-two miles long. Its geographical location is 28° 30″ north latitude, 15° 9″ west of Greenwich. In olden times it was believed that Paradise had been located in this island, but there are so many contradictions on the subject that I leave this important question to be discussed by better authorities than myself.

The majestic Peak of Teneriffe is just on the broadest part of the island and seems to emerge from the sea as a huge pointed beam supporting the sky. The great peak, 12,000 feet high, is an incomparable sight. Covered with snow at the top during the summer months, its brownish silhouette, thrust on a clear blue background, impresses the beholder with the awful greatness of this stalwart sentinel in the middle of the deep, deep sea. It is a grand sight from Puerto Cruz, where the temperature is not above that of Florida spring months.



The mountain is a volcano still in activity, although, fortunately for us, it only throws out sulphurous vapors. However, from time to time we feel the commotions of our old father Christmas in the shape of slight seismic movements, just as a gentle reminder that he is there presiding over the destinies of the island. We may boast of the fact that the great Cardinal Richelieu summoned a conference to induce European powers to recognize the Peak of Teneriffe as the common meridian.

A long stretch of the northern part of the island obtains a never exhausted supply of good water from the huge basin of the Canadas at the foot of the peak, and from the melting snow of the mountain. No water is wasted here, and all there is available is collected and brought down to the lowlands by means of open channels running along the top of stone walls, and by means of dams expressly built to enclose the waters rushing down in the rainy season through the ravines and gorges of the secondary ridge of mountains.

The Dragon Tree.

The famous dragon tree is Dracæna drago. This plant is a native of the Canary Islands, and a remarkable peculiarity about it is, that the dead branches serve as a support for the tufts or crowns, the roots of which encircle and conceal the original stem. These stems gradually rot away inside. The roots

DREER'S SUPERB DOUBLE PETUNIAS

For half a century we have been making a specialty of DOUBLE PETUNIAS, and our strain is accepted as second to none, either here or in Europe. We annually plant many thousand seedlings, from which only the finest double fringed forms are selected for propagating purposes, thus improving the strain every season. We offer fifteen distinct varieties.

3-inch pots, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; the set of 15 for $1.00.

SEED OF OUR SUPERB STRAIN OF FRINGED PETUNIAS. Double, 75c per 500 seeds; $1.50 per 1000 seeds. Single, 50c per trade packet; $1.00 per 1-16 oz.; $1.50 per ⅛ oz.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up. $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

after he once has established a new standard for his book. Last year's Dreer catalogue was enlarged at nearly double the usual cost to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of the house; this year's book goes the 1908 book sixteen pages better and there is no change in any feature, save the improvement of the color plates. A departure is the incorporation of a large number of cultural notes, for which there is a special index on the first page of the catalogue. Such writers as William Falconer, George W. Oliver, W. C. Egan, Prof. Bailey and Eben E. Rexford contribute the cultural matter.

TENERIFFE.

Gem of the Atlantic.

Nature's hand has given a rather odd appearance to the island of Teneriffe. For all the world, it bears a great resemblance to an enormous shoulder of mutton, the broader part of which faces the southwest, and the thinner part points to the northeast. The island is thirty-one miles wide and fifty-two miles long. Its geographical location is 28° 30″ north latitude, 15° 9″ west of Greenwich. In olden times it was believed that Paradise had been located in this island, but there are so many contradictions on the subject that I leave this important question to be discussed by better authorities than myself.

The majestic Peak of Teneriffe is just on the broadest part of the island and seems to emerge from the sea as a huge pointed beam supporting the sky. The great peak, 12,000 feet high, is an incomparable sight. Covered with snow at the top during the summer months, its brownish silhouette, thrust on a clear blue background, impresses the beholder with the awful greatness of this stalwart sentinel in the middle of the deep, deep sea. It is a grand sight from Puerto Cruz, where the temperature is not above that of Florida spring months.

The mountain is a volcano still in activity, although, fortunately for us, it only throws out sulphurous vapors. However, from time to time we feel the commotions of our old father Christmas in the shape of slight seismic movements, just as a gentle reminder that he is there presiding over the destinies of the island. We may boast of the fact that the great Cardinal Richelieu summoned a conference to induce European powers to recognize the Peak of Teneriffe as the common meridian.

A long stretch of the northern part of the island obtains a never exhausted supply of good water from the huge basin of the Canadas at the foot of the peak, and from the melting snow of the mountain. No water is wasted here, and all there is available is collected and brought down to the lowlands by means of open channels running along the top of stone walls, and by means of dams expressly built to enclose the waters rushing down in the rainy season through the ravines and gorges of the secondary ridge of mountains.

The Dragon Tree.

The famous dragon tree is Dracæna drago. This plant is a native of the Canary Islands, and a remarkable peculiarity about it is, that the dead branches serve as a support for the tufts or crowns, the roots of which encircle and conceal the original stem. These stems gradually rot away inside. The roots

DREER'S SUPERB DOUBLE PETUNIAS

For half a century we have been making a specialty of DOUBLE PETUNIAS, and our strain is accepted as second to none, either here or in Europe. We annually plant many thousand seedlings, from which only the finest double fringed forms are selected for propagating purposes, thus improving the strain every season. We offer fifteen distinct varieties.

3-inch pots, 75c per doz.; $6.00 per 100; the set of 15 for $1.00.

SEED OF OUR SUPERB STRAIN OF FRINGED PETUNIAS. Double, 75c per 500 seeds; $1.50 per 1000 seeds. Single, 50c per trade packet; $1.00 per 1-16 oz.; $1.50 per ⅛ oz.

Forcing Gladiolus

Gladiolus Gandavensis Hybrids

Many florists plant these in boxes, or among their carnations, in the winter. They are excellent for decorative purposes and realize good prices, either wholesale or retail. Gladioli are a good catch crop and take up but little room. The following are the best for this purpose:

America. The flowers, which are of immense size, are of the most beautiful flesh-pink color. $4.00 per 100; $35.00 per 1000.

Augusta. The florists' best white Gladiolus. First size bulbs, 1¾ inches and up. $2.00 per 100; $18.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.75 per 100; $16.00 per 1000.

Shakespeare. White and rose. $4.75 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

May. Pure white, flaked rosy crimson; the best forcer. Selected bulbs, $1.75 per 100; $15.00 per 1000.

Brenchleyensis (true). Fiery scarlet. Selected bulbs, $1.50 per 100; $13.00 per 1000. First size bulbs, $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

Boddington's White and Light. Extra selected bulbs. 1¾ in. and up, $1.50 per 100; $14.00 per 1000.
Bulbs, 1½ to 1¾ in., $1.25 per 100; $10.00 per 1000.

American Hybrids. A mixture of the choicest varieties of Gladiolus in cultivation. $1.00 per 100; $9.00 per 1000.

that happen to miss their hold on the stem, or, in other words, those that are not able to attach themselves to the bark of the stem, can be seen withering away on the upper part of the tree. It is also very curious to notice that owing to the peculiar way in which this tree grows, the inside is completely hollow. The most famous dragon tree ever known in Teneriffe stood at Villa de Orotava, and was estimated by Humboldt to be at least 6,000 years old, but judging from the size and age of similar trees of more recent date, I consider that Humboldt overestimated the age. Unfortunately this mammoth and secular tree was accidentally burned down in the year 1867. I understand that a cutting of this old tree is still growing in one of the conservatories at Kew Gardens, England.

I have in my garden the best specimen of dragon tree around the town of Santa Cruz de Teneriffe, and it is 30 years old. It may be propagated by the seeds it throws out every year in clusters, like small round dates.

The culture of bulbs, flowers and plants in Teneriffe has not yet received proper attention, although our island is singularly placed, not only for its splendid climatic condition, covering as it does a wide range of culture, but also because we are continually in communication by passing steamers with almost all parts of the world.

Possibilities in Scented Oils.

The most important industry of the Calados, or drawn linen work, now almost abandoned through the keen competition from Japan, gave employment to many thousands of women, and these people, accustomed to keep their hands and fingers scrupulously clean, would do well for the manufacturer of scented fats by the enfleurage process, as they would not impart any disagreeable scents to the fats and therefore spoil the goods for the markets beyond the seas. There is an ideal place in this island to establish this new business, and that is Realejo, which lies 1,000 feet above the sea level and in a situation shaded by the long distance high mountains, where the sun rises late, and therefore the flowers can be gathered in the morning with all their full fragrance in their fresh petals titillating with the night dew. I have no doubt that we can produce here all sorts of flowers for pomades, scented oils and distilled plants for essences.

White hyacinth bulbs, narcissus, tuberose, lily bulbs and all other strong and sweet odoriferous flowers can be cultivated here under the best conditions on a large scale, besides the cultivation of flower seeds and plants. Almost the

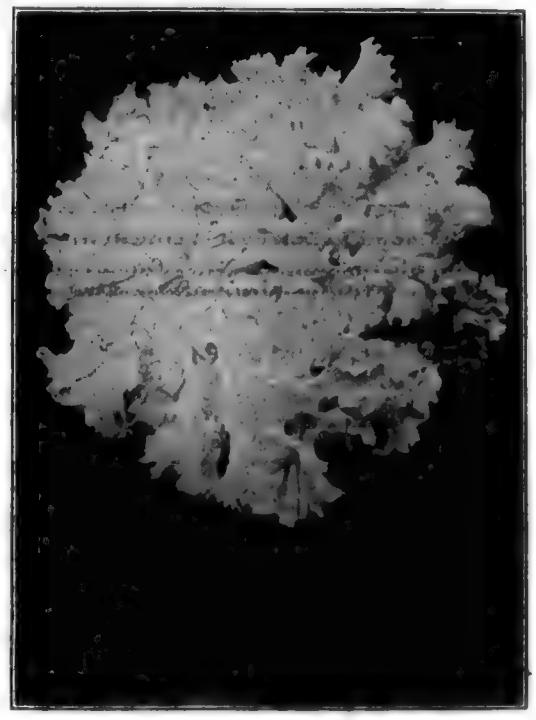
JOHNSONS, LTD.

Many American firms procure their supplies of mushroom spawn from Johnsons, Ltd., Twyford Abbey, England, and will be interested in the following notice from the Horticultural Trade-Journal:



"Subscriptions were last week invited for an issue of 36,000 £1 shares of Johnsons, Ltd., which has a capital of £50,000, divided into 50,000 shares of £1 each. According to the prospectus, this company was formed for the purpose of acquiring the mushroom growing and mushroom spawn manufacturing business which has been carried on (for a period of fifteen years) at, originally, Hanger-lane, W., and later at Twyford Abbey, near Willesden, N. W. Since then the directors have acquired an additional five acres of land at Twyford Abbey, whereon several buildings have been erected. The company was originally registered with a nominal capital of £10,000; but, in accordance with a special resolution passed by the shareholders, this has been increased to £50,000. The increase will enable the directors to acquire a lease of an adjoining estate of about twenty acres, for the extension to the present business of mushroom culture, and for the introduction into the London district of the French system of market gardening. The directors claim that in working out their estimate of profits they have added considerably to the generally-accepted rate of cost of production, and they anticipate that a net profit of at least £300 per acre can be realized, and, in view of the fact that more than seventeen acres will be submitted to this branch of the company's business, that would mean a net profit of £5,100 from this source alone, or sufficient to pay a dividend of ten per cent on the capital of the company."

LITERATURE OF THE SEED TRADE

Burpee's Farm Annual, often referred to as "the leading seed catalogue of America," is of importance as affording conclusive evidence that it is not absolutely necessary for such a utilitarian volume to be a mere illustrated price list and devoid of human interest. Indeed, the wonderful growth of the Burpee business, the largest mail-order seed trade in the world, seems to prove that, purely on the business side, an infusion of red blood and real life is a good thing for the house as well as for those into whose hands the Annual falls. Henry Fielding's philosophical introduction to "Tom Jones," entitled "An essay to prove that an author will write the better for having some knowledge of the subject on which he writes," is brought to mind by the sustained note of enthusiasm which is so marked a feature of the Farm Annual, and by the human interest element in its pages—such as the brief story of little Asta Ohn and the new sweet pea that bears her name. The author of the Farm Annual is entitled to a place in literature, for few so well as he can put into the printed page, and transmit to his readers, his own enthusiasm for the garden.

The Market.

New Year's brought a good demand and the total of business done was excellent, but flowers were so scarce that much more could have been done had there been the stock to do it with. Violets appeared to be more in demand than any other flower, and brought the same price as at Christmas. We have every reason to be satisfied with the business and, while in a good many cases it did not total up as much as last year, the only reason for that was the general scarcity.

It is now entirely too warm for the time of year, the sort of weather that will not do stock any good, and we are hoping for some cold and bright weather to bring stock back to what it ought to be.

As the days are growing longer we can now look for a gradual increase in the supply of carnations at least. Roses will be affected as well and it will not be long until there will be plenty of stock. If the business will just hold up as well as it has done, we will not need to fear an oversupply for many weeks yet.

Various Notes.

The bad weather has made itself felt in the ranks of the florists and from many sides we are hearing reports of someone sick. In all cases so far it has been nothing serious, just a cold or a touch of the grip, but even that is bad enough. George Magrie has been confined to his bed for several days, but will soon be about again. C. J. Jones is reported quite sick with a heavy cold. Walter Grey is also a little under the weather, but is able to be about.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held at William Murphy's wholesale house, 311 Main street. Charles Critchell and William Murphy will dispense refreshments in the way of lunch and cigars. This meeting will be an important one and the officers of the society especially request everyone, whether members of the society or not, to be present. One of the important things to be decided at this meeting will be the selection of a man whom the society can recommend for the position as superintendent of the trade exhibition. This is a post of great responsibility, as the success or failure of the trade exhibit depends almost entirely on the ability of this man. Besides this, many other items of importance bearing on the coming convention of the S. A. F. will be decided. For these reasons it is hoped that there will be a large atter dance.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Buffalo, like most other places, had a green Christmas and it was indeed a big trouble saver and spared a lot of expense in wrapping. The thermometer did not register below freezing for the three days before Christmas, and not until the next day did the temperature drop below freezing. It does not seem as if anybody felt the effects of the absence of snow, for conditions seemed about the same as regards the amount of business done. Some did a little more, while others did a little less. All we know is that a raft of stock was cleaned up. Plants sold well, especially the cheaper ones, and this fact was noticed by everyone. Poinsettias sold well, especially the low pans. Single plants no longer have the call, for nearly everyone who wants a plant and is willing to pay well, passes up the single plant and chooses the pan. It is right that they should, for nothing is better for any use at Christmas than a well shaped pan—say an 8-inch or 9-inch pan, with five or six low bracts, well shaped. They sell on sight.

Azaleas seemed to have an off year. For some reason or other, nobody thought they would sell and they did not. But an azalea is not like a begonia, which has to be sold almost as soon as you get it. Everyone had some heather, some ardisias, and a mixture of other Christmas plants, but there was a marked absence of cyclamens. Joe Street, at Anderson's, was the only man in town with any cyclamens of any account.

Cut flowers were, as usual, expected to be as scarce as could be and the quoted prices indicated this, but this changed and prices were not so high the last day as was expected. Red roses, however, remained scarce and continued so through New Year's. Carnations have been just scarce enough to keep the price good during the last week.

Fancy stock, such as orchids, valley, gardenias, bouvardias, heliotropes and daisies, was in big demand last week. No doubt there is no week in the year—or we might say two weeks—when high-class stock has such a call.

Various Notes.

The last two weeks have been record breakers for dances, parties, etc., and the result was a good business for everybody.

One of the most fashionable weddings took place New Year's eve, namely, the Cary-Birge wedding. The house decoration was done by the Lenox Flower Shop. The following day the elite event of the year took place, the charity ball given by the Four Hundred of the city. This event brings out the city's best and rare beauty and taste are always found here. The striking feature of the event in the way of dress and effect was the old-fashioned bouquet carried by the ladies, made up closely of small flowers and closed up tight with a fancy frill holder. The following day the papers mentioned it freely, so no doubt there will be a run of this bouquet.

We all expect a lull from now on, for a short time, and most of us need it, for the pace is too great to last.

PACIFIC COAST.

THE DROUGHT IN CALIFORNIA.

The dry, frosty weather which has held a good portion of the Pacific coast in its clutches for the last few weeks, is a condition much dreaded by the nurseryman. This is especially true of the grower who devotes all or a part of his land to the raising of young stock from either cuttings or small seedlings. While we had in most sections moisture enough last month to make plowing possible, in other places shallow plowing and cultivating had to be resorted to to get the land in such condition that anything might be done.

In such a season the grower is always between two fires. If he plants too early and there is not enough rain in the near future, his cuttings or young seedlings will dry out. Should he have plenty of confidence and wait and keep his cuttings trenched where they will have moisture enough for a few weeks, and the expected rain does not materialize, then by virtue of the fact that his stock will have calloused well and sprouted at the same time, he must needs plant them out to keep them from smothering. If, on the other hand, we have an excess of rainfall and the land is not perfectly drained, the young cuttings, unless they be of the easiest grown plants, will rot at the end of the stems and another season's growth will be lost. If the rain delays too long in arriving and comes at the season when longer days and brighter sun are the rule, then the planter has to be even more careful, especially when the rainfall suddenly ceases and is replaced by drying winds in the early spring. This brings on a condition when the ground will be too wet to cultivate one day and too dry and hard the following day.

Where growers have their own system of irrigating, they are spared many of these trials and can regulate the moisture when nature uses poor judgment in its disbursement. But to the ordinary tree and plant grower it is an endless worriment—whether to plant or not to plant, and whether the weather will continue dry or will ever be dry enough so as to get on the ground at all. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

This is the evening of the last day of the year and the stirring events that are just over will be but a memory in a few days. Christmas came and went in a blaze of glory, as far as the florists' trade was concerned. There has been some complaining from other lines of trade, where the assertion was made that the sales were not up to expectations. I refer to dealers in the more expensive articles of dress and jewelry. From these admissions it is fair to assume that many purchasers of Christmas gifts who considered themselves unable to afford an elegant jewel, or some such article, contented themselves with spending a few dollars for a bunch of roses or carnations, or a handsome fern or palm in a jardiniere. This remark was overheard in many of the retail florists' establishments and seems to be an index to conditions here. This, of course, does not refer to high-priced trade, but the bulk of business is made up in most cases from people who have been affected to some extent by the financial depression.

After the clean-up, it is safe to say that all the dealers, both wholesale and retail, in the neighborhood of San Francisco were well satisfied with the cut flower business. In reference to the gross receipts, as compared with those of last year, a general opinion seems to put them slightly larger. Stock of all kinds was only in fair supply and it has become, if anything, scarcer since Christmas. We have had considerable frost and but little sunshine, and as a result we are not showing much in the floral way at present. The price of flowers is practically unchanged and the demand for New Year's has further helped to keep the supply away down.

Although there has been no great amount of rushing incidental to New Year's trade, there is a healthy inquiry for good stuff, which the retailers are having not a little trouble to fill. Funeral orders have made heavy inroads into everything that is light colored enough to be used, and violets have proven to be a friend in need to the poor florist who finds himself in a pinch.

Various Notes.

Jean Mialocq, the well-known landscape gardener, has returned to San Francisco after an absence of a year, spent in Europe.

J. M. Stark, formerly of Fresno, Cal., is now located at Berkeley, Cal.

W. G. Marshall, the Fresno nurseryman, is in town on a few days' visit.

C. C. Morse & Co. have purchased a large tract of land near Hayward, Cal., and will devote it to their growing department.

Miss L. B. Penniman will shortly open a retail store in Berkeley, Cal.

The Bay Tree Nursery Co. has opened a sales yard on Telegraph avenue, Oakland. G.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

I have seen it stated that the competition of the Japanese gardeners does not hurt the trade at large, but I think any who are of that opinion are not growers of plants. The truth is, the competition of the Japanese has hurt the nurserymen of this vicinity to a more than slight extent. They have caused overproduction in plants, palms and shade trees, resulting in cutting prices in two. Last year the trade stopped patronizing the Japanese to a great extent, with the result that the Japanese started peddling. They have about twenty wagons going

GREVILLEA THELEMANNIANA.

Is it possible to handle Grevillea Thelemanniana without a great loss after rooting? I am in the market to know. I can root them easily enough here in southern California, but when it comes to potting, my troubles begin. I put in soil of three parts loam, one part sand and one part well rotted manure, in 2-inch pots, then stand these on a bench which has a little bottom heat, in a house at 70 degrees day and 50 to 65 degrees night temperature. I handle roses the same and lose a great many. I do not plunge and water every day. Please put me on the right road if there is one. C. G.

Grevillea Thelemanniana is one of the most beautiful trees grown and is somewhat delicate to handle until extra well rooted. I have had the best success with them by letting the cuttings remain several weeks in the bed after they are apparently ready to pot. Trim the tops back after they are potted and do not keep them too wet. I do not use any manure in the soil, preferring to mix one-half sand, one-quarter leaf-mold and one-quarter loam. Keep the young plants well shaded during the day, but give them some ventilation at the same time. The temperature is all right at night, but I am inclined to keep it about 65 degrees during the day, if this is possible to do.

I have had the same trouble as C. G. many times, but I finally concluded that I did not allow the cuttings to remain long enough in the cutting bed and also that I was inclined to overwater them. Recently I have had no trouble with G. Thelemanniana, or rose cuttings either, although it is a constant worry with our changeable climatic conditions. Watering and ventilation depend so much on the changes in the weather that any stated rules cannot be made that will cover dark, foggy and bright, sunshiny days at the same time, although we get several of each usually every week during this season of the year. F. D. Green, of the L. Green Nursery Co., Perry, O., is preparing to remove to West Virginia.

The Waverly Gardens Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Mykawa, Tex., with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Charles E. Smith, C. H. Carson and I. M. Taylor.

The T. S. Hubbard Co., Fredonia, N. Y., says that demand is so much greater than supply in almost all leading varieties of grape vines that they fear they will be short for spring trade.

The Northeastern Minnesota Horticultural Society is trying to get someone to start a first-class nursery in St. Louis county. J. Kimball, of Ozark Ridge, Minn., is in charge of the undertaking.

Arthur E. Thatcher, who has been foreman in the shrub and hardy plant department at Aldenham House, Elstree, England, for nine years, has accepted an offer from the Arnold Arboretum, Boston. Upon the occasion of his leaving Aldenham House, where he had been for twenty-four years, he received many testimonials of regard.

HOLLY FROM SEED.

Please give me directions as to growing holly from seeds. Should holly berries be washed and frozen? Can seed be planted outdoors, or what is the quickest and best way to get seed to germinate and grow? R. G.

To have success with holly seeds, they should be mixed now with damp soil in a box, the box placed outdoors or in a cold cellar and kept there until next autumn. The seeds are then washed out and sown in a bed outdoors and seedlings may be looked for in the spring following.

The seeds would not grow next spring were they sown now.

BERBERIS THUNBERGII.

There are few, if any, perfectly hardy shrubs of so much value for outdoor ornamentation as Berberis Thunbergii. When planted so as to form a hedge, it remains all summer neat, compact and yet luxuriant. Later, when the rigors of winter strip almost everything else of its beauty, Berberis Thunbergii seems only to shed its leaves in order to give full display to the many clusters of beautiful berries with which it is adorned. This plant not only looks well in hedged form, but in groups it is exceedingly effective.

The demand for it is constantly on the increase. D. M.

JAPANESE MAPLES.

It takes a long time for a Japanese maple, if small when planted, to make much of an impression as a specimen singly. Bearing that in mind, it will be well when these charming trees are planted, to plant them at first in groups of large or small area, as conditions and circumstances demand, and later, if isolated specimens are deemed desirable, these can be acquired by thinning out as necessary.

In nine cases out of ten the grouping of all kinds of deciduous shrubs is much preferable to promiscuous planting or planting in regular rows. D. M.

UTAH NURSERY INTERESTS.

John P. Sorenson, county horticultural inspector at Salt Lake City, Utah, says that during December the nurseries of that county had a hard time, as the first snow storm and frost caught them when their fall work was only half completed. Still, by watching the time and weather closely, one nursery dug up, inspected and fumigated 9,700 trees, 8,000 of which were shipped out of the county. Another

Hardy Roses and Ramblers

FOR FORCING

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well-ripened. Roses potted up in the Fall or late Winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard or force at your leisure. We recommend the American-grown "Ramblers." Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are failures.

HARDY PERPETUAL ROSES

We offer extra strong forcing two-year-old dormant, low budded stock, in the following varieties, true to name:

Price, 75c for 5 (of one variety); $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. (Immediate delivery).

Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; very fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
FRAU KARL DRUSCHKI. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose-pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale-flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

MY MARYLAND

This new rose, which was introduced last season in a limited way, has proved to be one of the best roses ever introduced. Every one is enthusiastic in regard to its merits, and it will be planted very largely by the largest, most progressive aud most up-to-date growers, who have already placed large orders for it.

It is a strong, healthy and vigorous grower, producing long stems and long, pointed buds, exquisitely fragrant. The color is a soft salmon pink. This is a rose that we can recommend in the highest terms, as we are sure it will prove very, very satisfactory. It is a welcome addition to our limited list of really first-class varieties for indoor culture; and it is not only a fine midwinter rose, but is also unusually good during the summer months.

Strong plants, 2½-inch pots, own-roots, $10 per 100, $90 per 1000. Grafted plants, $20 per 100, $150 per 1000 dug and delivered 5,000 peach trees. Another nursery dug, had inspected, but not fumigated, about 20,000 peach trees and stored them away in houses.

Again, another nursery dug some 30,000 apples and 10,000 cherries. These young apple trees were fumigated and inspected for root diseases and a carload of them was shipped out of the county. In the sorting and inspecting for root diseases 4,000 trees were condemned and most of them burned. The others will be burned as soon as the frost and snow will permit. There are now about 45,000 trees in store houses to be fumigated, and about 150,000 to be sorted and inspected between now and the commencement of the spring delivery, besides those fumigated and inspected in the month of November. There are also about 250,000 trees yet to be dug, fumigated and inspected for root disease when the spring digging and delivery commence.

Vegetable Forcing.

Joseph Rice, of the Griswold Co., Ashtabula, O., was in Chicago last week, purchasing material for a new range of greenhouses to cover 125,000 square feet. The company already has 225,000 feet, so when the new range is completed it will cover 350,000 square feet, probably the largest vegetable forcing establishment in the country. Mr. Rice reports business excellent this season. The company grows lettuce only, in fall and winter, and cucumbers in the late spring and early summer. It is marketing an excellent grade of Grand Rapids lettuce. All the product is sold in Pittsburg.

LETTUCE DAMPING OFF.

We are bothered very much with the damp or fungous disease in our lettuce, both large and small. The large lettuce seems to get the damp when it is half grown or fully matured, even when the plants were healthy.

We used the manure mulching last summer, keeping the soil quite moist, and then removed the coarse mulching and spaded the fine manure under. Do you think that would be a cause for the large lettuce damping off? We also used a mixture of four pounds of blue-stone and four pounds of lime, to a barrel of water, for the first crop. We applied three gallons of the mixture to a space about 5x12 feet, but since the damp has been showing so badly we have been applying the mixture for the second crop one-third stronger; also a light application of lime. Do you think that to be too strong for the soil? Do you think such treatment will rid the soil of the disease for the following crops, or do you know of a sure way to stop the damp?

Do you think the fungus originates in the soil, or is it carried in by the plants from the seed bed? How long is it supposed to take to rid the soil of it by the use of chemicals? H. & C.

Damping is a very common trouble with greenhouse lettuce. The principal cause of it is unsuitable atmospheric conditions. Soil, no doubt, has a certain influence on the disease, but I am doubtful if the treatment which you have been giving it will do any good. The only thing that will be of service in the treatment of the soil is sterilizing, but good crops of lettuce can be grown without soil sterilization. The principal thing to avoid is softness of growth, which can be induced by numerous causes, such as excessive richness of soil, too high a temperature, lack of sufficient fresh air, overhead watering, etc.

Too much fire heat is one of the most prolific causes of the disease. You never find this trouble in coldframes, where no fire heat is employed. A night temperature of 40 degrees is quite high enough. Allow a rise of 15 degrees by sun heat, but give air on all possible occasions, even if the temperature does not reach this point, and by all means avoid condensation. Water on bright days, only wetting the plants as little as possible, and try to have all surplus moisture evaporated before the house is closed down.

Constant vigilance is necessary for lettuce where grown under artificial conditions, as it is in a greenhouse, and only by getting the conditions as nearly natural as possible can you expect to have success. Wm. Scott.

CYANIDE AND LETTUCE.

Will hydrocyanic acid gas poison lettuce enough to hurt any one that eats it? We want to kill white fly with it. R. E. H.

Hydrocyanic acid gas is used a great deal by lettuce growers, and there is no instance on record of anyone ever being poisoned by eating vegetables from houses where it is used for fumigating. You can use it without any danger from that source.

Enough has been said about cyanide in these columns recently so that it will be hardly necessary to say any more concerning its use just now. I might repeat, however, that the house should not be syringed before using the cyanide, as you would in using other kinds of fumigation, because cyanide poison settles in moisture and if the plants are wet it is almost certain to injure them. Or, if the soil, the walks and the space under the benches are wet, the poison will settle in this excessive dampness before it can do much good and the time and material will be wasted. Have your houses dry when using it; it is better not to water the day that you are to fumigate. H. G.

LETTUCE.

This fall I covered my ground beds with three or four inches of semi-rotted stable manure and chopped same in with a hoe. Last year a weedy sod had been turned under deep and lots of rich, rotted manure spaded under, but the plants were slow in growing. This summer this was plowed back and this top dressing chopped in. On some of the bed I added a light dressing of chicken manure, but can see no perceptible difference. The lettuce is slow, but of good quality. What can be done to hasten the growth? The temperature at night is from 45 to 50 degrees and during the day from 50 to 55 degrees. The soil is a black loam, or perhaps a prairie soil would describe it better, as this is on the Michigan prairies. This soil is about eighteen inches to two feet deep, with a sand soil below and then a bed of clay. Water seems to pass through the soil quickly, but it remains wet under the surface for quite a while. I seldom water, except on sunny days. C. A. S.

The best way to grow lettuce is to first sow the seed in a small piece of a bench, transplanting to the beds when of sufficient size to handle conveniently. Let the soil be moist when pricking out the seedlings. The soil you speak of should grow good lettuce. The manure can be spread on three inches deep and turned under a foot or so. A night temperature of 40 to 42 degrees is sufficiently high for lettuce. The day readings may run up to 20 to 25 degrees higher than this with sun heat, but should not exceed 50 degrees on cloudy days. Lettuce requires careful watering in winter. Even if the surface soil is powdery, if that containing the roots is moist, it is better not to water. Your soil evidently is retentive of moisture and great care must be used in applying water.

Have you ever tried sterilization of the soil for your crops? A large number of the leading lettuce growers now sterilize all their beds and find that the absence of disease and general excellence of crops well repay them for the labor and expense incurred. I think sterilization would be of great benefit to your soil. C. W.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business was good all through the holidays and made a good finish with New Year's, with promise of more in store. The outlook is decidedly good for better business from now on, with an extra good spring trade.

Various Notes.

The State Florists' Association will hold its annual meeting January 12, when officers will be elected for the ensuing year. A full attendance is desired, as besides the election there will be much business of interest brought before the meeting. It will be held at the State House at 2:30 p. m.

The carnation convention is about all one hears these days, and with good cause, as its success is assured. Plenty of cash and good committees in charge will make anything boom. Besides, the first exhibit has already been received; it is rather previous, but it shows what interest is taken in the convention by people as far off as New Jersey. We hope the exhibit will be duplicated, as, though the shipment was made too soon, the flowers arrived in fine shape and we wish Mrs. Mary S. Fleming better luck next time with her pink namesake. Remember the date, January 27 and 28. Make your arrangements to attend. It is good things like this that you can't afford to lose in this life. S.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

New Year's trade was good and is keeping up well. Stock was in fine condition. There was a scarcity of violets, but orchids and valley helped out. The local florists are well pleased with the holiday trade.

Various Notes.

Miss Thekla Baur is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Robertson, in Toledo, O.

The Hamot Hospital charity ball was held December 30. It was a splendid society event. Poinsettias were used among the Christmas greens and made a pretty effect. The Baur Floral Co. did the decorating.

The Misses Berger, with their efficient force of men, have been busy until recently transplanting trees for society folks. B. P.

CARNATIONS

Rooted Cuttings for January Delivery. Selected only from the strongest plants

Red Wing This variety is a seedling of our own raising, and although not a fancy in any sense of the word, we consider it the best paying variety of its color, which is a very bright scarlet. $8.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

This has been the dullest week since before Thanksgiving, with retailers who cater to the cut flower trade, but downtown business has been active, with a large and steady demand for all kinds of funeral designs. There was an enormous amount of good stock at reasonable prices. The weather has continued fair, with an occasional cold spell which lasted only for a day or two. Stock in general is excellent. First-class carnations are abundant. Enchantress has the largest sale now. Each week shows an improvement in this class of carnations. White Perfection and Queen are now being produced in quantity by many growers who have become better acquainted with these superb flowers. Lawson has been totally discarded by many growers. Roses have maintained their good qualities and, although plentiful, prices are anywhere from 4 to 8 cents. An even demand for Beauties utilizes all stock. There has been an increase in the sale for pot plants, especially short poinsettias and ferns.

Various Notes.

Wm. Halliday is erecting a new house for pot plants, 20x100, on Liberty Heights avenue.

Chas. Hamilton is having a new packing shed erected, 25x250, which is to connect to each house. Mr. Hamilton does a heavy shipping business in rooted stock of all kinds.

Prof. Gaham, of College Park, gave a very interesting talk on greenhouse insects and how to destroy them, at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 28. Q.

WHITE KILLARNEY AND MY MARYLAND

After careful investigation, having become satisfied that the Waban Strain of White Killarney is superior to anything now in the market, we have withdrawn our Sport and will not propagate it at all. We have made arrangements with the Waban Rose Conservatories to procure an abundant supply of their stock and will propagate only from that. This we offer for delivery after Feb. 15, 1909, at the following prices:

New Department—Rooted Cuttings

So many customers and other growers have asked us to supply Young Stock (rooted cuttings and 2½-inch plants), that we have decided to add this department as a regular line of our business. We shall handle only such Young Stock as we know to be first-class in every respect—from growers we know to produce and ship nothing but the best. At the same time, our outlet is so large we can make quick sale for all growers who have first-class Young Stock of desirable varieties.

WHITE BROS., Gasport, N. Y.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

With ideal weather prevailing, holiday trade was the best on record. One noticeable feature was the increased sale of plants. Well grown poinsettias in pans went on sight. Cyclamens well filled with flowers made a great hit. Azaleas were in good demand and well filled baskets sold remarkably well.

The high price of cut flowers diverted many a good order to the plant section. In cut flowers, carnations really took the lead. Violets were also popular, while the interest in cut poinsettias at $6 per dozen seemed to be perceptibly smaller than last year. American Beauties sold well; $20 per dozen at retail seemed to be the top notch price. Sales averaged larger than ever before and there were fewer complaints on account of frozen stock. Ideal conditions prevailed all the week, and this new year will have to "go some" to beat last year's record.

Various Notes.

All florists in the state are invited to the annual meeting of the State Agricultural Society, at the fair grounds, this city, January 12 at 8 p. m. Aug. S. Swanson has prepared a paper to be read at that meeting.

J. J. Karins, of Henry H. Dreer, Inc., was a caller during the week, on his way to the Pacific coast. Other callers were: A. N. Kinsman, of Austin; G. A. Clausen, of Albert Lea, and W. H. Hart, of Owatonna. X. Y. Z.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

The old year went out sharp and cold and the inroads on the coal bins made the grower wonder where his holiday profits were going to. Stock continues plentiful and good. Prices kept up for New Year's, though the demand was not nearly so great as at Christmas. Bulbous stock is well on the market now and is not as short as in recent years. The demand for plants seems greater this year than in previous seasons.

Various Notes.

Miss Whitted had a number of bouquets for New Year's eve, and though she was handicapped by an accident to the auto delivery, orders were got out and business was good.

Rice Bros. find out-of-town trade first-class, and stock plentiful.

C. Johnson, of the Powers Mercantile Co., revels in new fixtures for his flower department.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some excellent violets. M. E. M.

New Carnation Edward

This new seedling Carnation is a wonder for producing flowers, full of business from start to finish, continuous throughout the season, cannot be beat for productiveness, easily grown and propagated. Description: Deep pink in color, very large and well built up in center, with good stem and calyx. Comes into bloom early and keeps at it with wonderful results. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Will be heard from with others in the future.

New Carnations--1908-09

Mrs. Chas. Knopf A grand variety; comes into bloom early and remains steady the balance of the season. One of the best varieties that has ever been introduced, and bound to surpass the grand old variety, Enchantress, from which it is a seedling. Description:—The color of Mrs. Chas. Knopf is somewhat darker than Enchantress during the winter months. The flower is 4¼ inches and over, with a better form than Enchantress, well built up in the center and has a wide guard petal with stiffness that gives it a grand make-up in general. Having much more substance and the petals being stiffer, it keeps and ships much better than the above variety. The calyx is very stiff and large, giving the flower a chance to develop freely, and does not burst as much as Enchantress. The habit is ideal; closely resembles Enchantress, but produces more flowers. Can be grown either from the field or inside all summer. Likes a temperature of 50 to 52. The stem is 24 inches and over, holds the flower up gracefully at all times of the year. It gives good stems the first crop. One of the grandest yet sent out and is bound to surpass the old variety, Enchantress.

Ruby Beautiful scarlet-crimson, one of the best ever sent out. Does not turn black with age or after shipping. The size of the flower is 3 to 3½ inches, with a grand form, built up well in the center, having the most substance of any flower we know of. One of the best shippers and keepers. The calyx is short, but of tough texture and well expanded, giving the flower freedom to expand. The habit is ideal; easy to handle; does well from field or grown inside all summer. Temperature, 50 to 52. Very free producer and continuing throughout the season. The stem is 24 to 30 inches, and the first crop is very stiff, but holds up the flower gracefully at all times of the year. This variety is sure to give satisfaction and find a place among the standards.

The above varieties, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

It don't cost you anything to send for a circular. A postal will bring you one. We invite the trade to come and see the above growing. Delivery begins with December.

CHAS. KNOPF FLORAL CO., Richmond, Ind., and S. J. REUTER & SON, Inc., Westerly, R. I.

Lawson-Enchantress, introduced by us last year, is giving the best satisfaction and the demand will be heavy this year. It is the Enchantress with Lawson color and is as early and free as Enchantress. You will surely want this variety. Our stock is in grand shape and can take care of all orders. $5.50 per 100, $50 00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

Sarah Hill. The grand winter variety. One of the best white sent out. Gives grand flowers from the start of cold weather and continues throughout the entire season. Stock is limited. $5.50 per 100, $50.00 per 1000; 250 at 1000 rate.

GRAND RAPIDS.

The Market.

It is a little late to talk about Christmas, two weeks after the event, but it may interest the trade to know that in Grand Rapids business was good, fully equal to that done in 1907 and some report a slight gain. Plants sold well, although there were more than enough for all demands. Cut flowers cleaned up well. Out-of-town buyers held off from placing orders early and the shipping trade came with a rush and exceeded that of last year.

Henry Smith did a little better than in 1907, cut flowers selling out close, but with plenty of plants to fill all orders. He made a hit with poinsettia plants.

Eli Cross is well satisfied with his trade. He was lucky in having a house of Beacon in full crop. He did a big holly and green trade.

The Grand Rapids Floral Co. sold heavily on plants and had not a flower left, unless bulb stock.

Wm. Cunningham did better than he expected and ran more to plants than cut flowers.

Chas. Chadwick, in spite of his removal from Monroe to a side street, was agreeably surprised at the good business.

Bruinslot & Sons had a nice lot of late mums that hit Christmas right. Their business was as good as in 1907.

Miss Hartnett had a fine trade and says business was better than in 1907. She sold mostly cut flowers.

The Wealthy Avenue Floral Co. reports the best Christmas in many years.

Paul Goebel sold out clean.

Crabb & Hunter enjoyed a good trade, being cleaned out of everything in both cut flowers and plants.

James Schols sold out clean on violets and could have sold many more.

Chas. W. Garfield has been elected a director of the Grand Rapids Greenhouse Co., in place of Frank Strong, who recently died. G. F. C.

The Review is ahead of any other paper for florists and I cannot do without it.—H. W. Wright, Amarillo, Tex.

Massillon, O.—N. E. Beck says business has been quiet, but prospects are for a renewal of good times in the spring. He has enlarged his plant this fall so that he now has two good houses, each 25x150. He makes a specialty of chrysanthemums and bedding stock for wholesale trade.

Araucarias, Palms, Ferns, Etc.

The Market.

The volume of holiday trade done here was fully up to last year, with prices about the same. We had a green Christmas, the weather was fine and little wrapping of plants was necessary. Roses and carnations were fine and none went to waste. White roses seemed to sell unusually well. Bulbous stock sold well, as did nearly all other plants.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel had a big business at Christmas and New Year's. He had a nice cut of Richmond and Ivory, some of the Ivory being cut with 5-foot stems.

The Blackman Floral Co. reports business fully up to last year, with prices about the same. They cut an immense lot of carnations and roses. Plants of all kinds were plentiful and in good demand. They had several wagons kept busy delivering up to midnight on Christmas eve.

Nellie Goodge reports that she was surprised at the amount of business done, as she had not expected it, owing to a dull fall. She has a big trade in holly and makes up several thousand wreaths.

Ben Kramer's first Christmas in his new store was very satisfactory, cleaning up on everything that he could get. He has a new delivery wagon that is a dandy.

Royston & Fenton's wholesale trade was such an increase over last year that they did not have enough stock to go around. E. L. F.

WASHINGTON.

Business settled down to the usual lull after a holiday rush. Stock is coming in more plentifully and was never finer.

There was the usual disappointment on violets at Christmas. Messengers were busy all night, calling at the express offices for the violets that never came. On Monday they came in large quantities, the express companies offering them to be sold for what they would bring, with few takers.

New Year's trade was good, all the stores doing a fine business in cut flowers.

Mr. Magum, of Takoma Park, one of our best local violet growers, is not sending any in this season. He will pay more attention to stock plants. He is cutting a fine lot of sweet peas and had a fine cut for Christmas.

D. G. Grillbortzer, of Alexandria, Va., who has been laid up with the grip, is able to be about again. O. O.

ORCHIDS

WE are very pleased to state that we have received a magnificent importation of Cattleya Lawrenceana, direct from our collector. This is the first importation ever received in the United States, to our knowledge, and we feel sure you will not want to let this rare opportunity go by, in securing at least a few plants of this lovely Cattleya.

Being so scarce for the past 15 years, we herewith give you a description of it. A distinct and free flowering species, pseudo-bulbs 12 to 15 inches long, compressed and furrowed, generally of a reddish brown. Flowers 4 to 5 inches across, similar in form to C. Skinneri, but intense rosy purple, and a valuable addition to our spring flowering Cattleyas. Nothing excites the admiration more than to see a plant of this lovely Cattleya in full bloom. We are putting it on the market at the low figure quoted below, and have only 250 plants to dispose of, so you must speak quickly should you require any.

Fine, healthy, well leaved plants. 6 to 8 very strong bulbs, 1 lead, $5.00

We also carry Orchid Peat, Live Sphagnum, Baskets, etc.

DENVER.

The Market.

The holiday trade in Denver was highly satisfactory. Some dealers report an increase over last year's business, some as high as ten to fifteen per cent better, and last year was about the best for many seasons. Prices this year were about the same, or in some instances perhaps a trifle lower. Stock was comparatively plentiful and the quality uniformly good. The only scarcity in cut flowers was in medium-priced Beauties and in Richmond roses at any price.

Carnations were more plentiful, perhaps, for Christmas than in some years. Consequently the prices were not high, the stock retailing for $1, $1.50 and $2 per dozen, and the quality was good. Red was the only color that was scarce. Even white roses sold well.

Holly and green were not handled as much as in previous years; neither was the wreathing used as plentifully.

The plant trade was good and seemed to be in the lead everywhere. The quality, too, was generally good. Azaleas, perhaps, sold the best, and some fine specimens were seen. The only scarcity was in medium-priced ones. The varieties most sought after were the old favorite, Simon Mardner, and Hexe.

Poinsettias went slowly, not averaging up in quality with those brought in last year. Their day has passed apparently, as a leading Christmas plant. Cyclamens were, perhaps, the best plants on the market and they moved lively, the quality being the finest for many seasons.

Not many novelties appeared; in fact, the customers were not looking for them.

Taking it all in all, the holiday trade was satisfactory to nearly everybody.

Since Christmas there has not been so much stock on the market and the demand has been fairly good. Carnations seem none too plentiful and hold fairly firm in price. Of violets there is about the usual quantity, and enough to go around.

The Walter & Hill Floral Co. has discontinued its store, Mr. Walter going back to his greenhouses. E. S. K.

IMPATIENS FOR BEDDING.

What do you think of Impatiens Sultani for flower beds in public places or parks? E. W. S.

All the impatiens, including Sultani and Holstii, are excellent bedding plants and worthy of increased cultivation for this purpose. Their freedom of growth and persistent flowering qualities are strong points in their favor. In dry weather they will require an occasional soaking of water. I have found a mulch of well decayed manure also a great help. It keeps the soil more moist and feeds the plants at the same time. C. W.

FLORES CURAT DEUS.

In a certain well kept garden there is the motto "Flores curat Deus"—God cares for the flowers. Undoubtedly. God "cares" for all things on earth, in that He is solicitous for their welfare, but for a gardener that other motto, "The Lord helps those who help themselves," would be better borne in mind. No amount of faith in proverbs will take the place of work! Work and knowing how.

Many a man has visited some competitor's place and admired the perfect condition of everything without in the least appreciating the means by which the results were obtained—he thought, if he thought about it at all, that it just happened so. But it didn't. It is only in the disorderly places that things "just happen."

"God cares for the flowers." But don't leave all their care to Him.

Greenhouse Heating.

HOUSE FOR BEDDING STOCK.

We are just completing a greenhouse, 10x100 feet, and wish to heat it with hot water. The house has brick walls four feet high and measures seven feet to the ridge. What size of flow pipe under the ridge, and how many feet of 4-inch pipe under the benches, will be required to heat this house for geraniums, in Michigan climate? Should the pipes that connect the flow to the returns be the same size as the flow? B. J.

If you wish to use 4-inch pipe, which I should not do unless I had the pipe on hand, the house in question should be provided with five lines of pipe, using one flow and four returns, or, if you prefer, two flows and three returns. If you use one flow, it can be used to feed a manifold containing three returns on one side of the house and one on the same side as the flow. If two flows are used, they may serve one side and one may be divided to feed two returns on the opposite side, while the other may be carried entirely around the house. Neither of these schemes is as good, in my judgment, as to use 2-inch and 3-inch malleable pipe, placing a 3-inch riser under the ridge and four 2-inch returns under each side bench, fed from the one riser. The riser would be carried from the boiler to the far end of the house and there divided by 2½-inch or 3-inch pipe to feed a manifold on each side containing four 2-inch returns. Then you would connect an expansion tank by means of a ¾-inch or 1-inch pipe to the main return close to the boiler, and carry it twelve or fifteen feet above the highest point in the system. F. R.

CARNATIONS WITH ASPARAGUS.

I am planning to build a greenhouse in the spring, 20x100, and I wish to use part of the middle bench for smilax and Asparagus plumosus nanus. Now, which end of the bench would you advise me to use for this? I would like to have it on the ground, but do not know how to arrange the pipes so I could have part of the bench raised and the rest on the ground. The house will run north and south and I want to use the side benches for carnations. How should I arrange the benches and what size of pipes should I use? How many and what kind of pipes are the best, and what size of pipe should the flow be, for hot water? Do you think, if the sides of the house are five and a half feet to the eaves, that there should be glass on the sides? Where should the pipes be put? On the walls of the house and beside the walks? How high should they be placed? Is it necessary to have an expansion tank? I am located in Oregon. M. C. J.

If you wish to make carnations a main crop, I believe as good a plan as can be followed is to place all benches on the ground. Use only about four inches of drainage and five or six inches of soil for the asparagus, and about a foot of drainage and six inches of soil for the carnations. This will allow the use of plank or concrete sides for beds. The piping can be distributed on the side walls and on the purlin supports. For such a house a 3-inch riser under the ridge and twelve 2-inch returns, six on each side wall, or four on each side wall and two on each of two lines of purlin supports four or five feet from the ground, should give satisfaction. Place the expansion tank twelve or fifteen feet above the high point in the system and connect with the main return near the boiler. L. C. C.

I LIKE the REVIEW very much. It seems to hit the nail on the head every time.—S. D. GRIFFITH, New Woodstock, N. Y.

The Market.

The business following the big Christmas rush was fairly good among the retailers and the New Year turned out to be a pretty good day. Since then there has been considerable activity among the west end florists, with a good deal of social work, and we hear of a number of good sized weddings, receptions and dinner parties booked for this month. A number of downtown florists also report quite a good demand for New Year's in cut flowers, but, of course, nothing like a week ago, when we all had our hands full of all kinds of orders.

Prices on stock at the wholesale houses have fallen off greatly since the holidays and the supply is quite large, with good demand, but not enough to clean up. The shipping trade has kept up pretty well. Roses are becoming more abundant in all grades and varieties. Carnations are of the best quality and plenty of them. White and light pink are in good demand. Violets, too, have suffered in price since the holidays. Californias are in large supply and of extra

Don't forget the first meeting in the new year of the St. Louis Florists' Club, which takes place next Thursday afternoon, January 14, at 2 o'clock. There are several important matters to come up. The smoker and a general review of the holiday trade will come up for discussion. President Young is looking forward to a large attendance.

Mayor Wells and Park Commissioner Scanlan have decided to name the new park Fairground park. The old fair ground site is now undergoing a general overhauling. The main entrance will be at the corner of Grand avenue and Natural Bridge road.

The home of Carew Sanders, at 5738 Vernon avenue, was totally destroyed by fire early Sunday morning. Mr. Sanders, who has been sick for some time, was carried out of the burning building by his son-in-law and is now at St. Luke's hospital, suffering a severe nervous shock. Miss Holden, his nurse, leaped out of a second story window and sustained severe bruises. Owing to the advanced age of Mr. Sanders, his condition is considered serious. A Successful Florist whose stock is always fresh, fragrant and attractive, always uses a McCray Refrigerator. McCray Refrigerators have the proper system of cold air circulation, which is so strong and steady that there can be no stagnant air or dampness in a McCray Refrigerator. Less ice is used than in any other kind of refrigerator, and this results in a saving which pays for the McCray itself.

McCray Refrigerators

give your shop a look of elegance. They are made and finished in the most beautiful manner, and are lined with white enamel, opal glass, tile, mirrors or white marble, as you desire.

McCray Refrigerators are guaranteed to give satisfaction, and are made in regular sizes for immediate shipment, or are built to order for any requirement.

Trade Conditions.

Last week's trade was such that stock of all kinds sold first-class, and the florist had no chance to stock up again after the Christmas trade. The New Year's trade this year was considered by most of the florists much better than that of last year. There is a good supply of stock at present, which sells well. Prospects for business in 1909 look most promising, and so far trade has been very satisfactory. The weather is warm and this means a great deal to the coal pile.

Business throughout the month of December was good.

Various Notes.

The Dayton Florists' Club will have its New Year's banquet January 11, at the Phillips house. The men, being too busy to make plans for the event, have left the entire arrangements to the ladies, who are exercising their best judgment to please the gentlemen on this occasion. It is certain, however, that the men will not be too busy to take time to partake of the spread. Mrs. Elizabeth Young is general chairman over the ladies, while the decorating committee consists of Miss Minnie Johnson, Miss Ruby Bartholomew and Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs.

Visitors last week were: Mr. Goe, of the Reeser Floral Co., of Urbana, O., and Mr. O'Brien, of Greenville, O.

Leo Macey, of the Carnegie Experimental Station, of Cold Spring Harbor, New York, was a visitor to George Bartholomew, at the office of the Miami Floral Co. R. A. B.

The Market.

Christmas trade was the best that we have had for many years. Every florist seems to be well pleased with the sales. Plants sold well. There never has been such sale on poinsettias as this year, and by New Year's day there was hardly a dozen of good ones left in the city. Gloire de Lorraine sold well and the demand was greater than the supply. Cyclamens sold well, but the supply was short. Few primroses were offered, as they were a little late.

There was also a good demand for roses, with the supply equal to the demand. Red roses were more plentiful this year than in any previous year and they sold well. Richmond roses took the place of American Beauties in a good many places.

Carnations sold well. The supply was equal to the demand. The high prices kept the department stores from handling any carnations and this gave the florists a chance to do a good business.

Holly was plentiful. The supply of wild smilax was greater than the demand. There is plenty to be had at this date, out of cold storage, and it sold at $4.50 per 50-pound crate. Green roping was well cleaned up. The supply was not so great as last year. The demand is dropping off every year and wild smilax is taking its place. Mistletoe was plentiful and there was more sold this year than usual. Violets were rather scarce and sold at $2 a bunch. Some fine ones were shipped in from Chicago. Roman hyacinths were not so plentiful. Narcissi were plentiful and sold well.

W. H. H.

HOPKINSVILLE, KY.—T. L. Metcalfe has established a branch at Cairo, Ill., in a part of George R. Miller's store at 410 Commercial avenue.

BRADFORD, PA.—F. E. Thompson cut for Christmas some Rose-pink Enchantress which measured four inches. His other carnations, including Craig, Bountiful, Victory, Light Pink Enchantress and Queen Louise, are fine. He has a nice crop of smilax ready to cut, some fine Lilium longiflorum coming out, and some roses that are doing splendidly.

What are you looking for?

Just a greenhouse that "answers the purpose" or one that more than answers it? Do you want a house that will produce more blooms through December, January and February than any other house constructed any other way? Then buy a U-Bar. It is the lightest house built—and if it is lightest, it is most productive. It is a house with every possible decay point fully protected.

The ideal construction for private estates, parks, public institutions and florists' showrooms.
